Accident.—The season for accidents with buzz saws has set in. Last week we recorded one and now comes a colored man, at St. John's station, with the same complaint. He was thrown against a saw in the steam mill at that place and had one of the bones in his arm sawed into and an ugly cut across the breast.

The swindlers have started on their annual tour among the farmers, introducing new machinery for mowers, plows, etc.—When they meet a man who don't take the papers, they appoint him an agent for the township, take a contract which the farmer signs and this 'contract,' when cut in two proves to be a note which greeney has to pay.

During the decoration ceremonies at the Cemetry, in Fort Wayne, on Thursday last, while firing a salute, a young man named Johny Downey, was seriously injured by a premature discharge of the gun His right arm received the force of the discharge near the shoulder, and the flesh was badly burned and torn.

As we did not decorate in this place last Thursday a large number went to Ft. Wayne for that purpose. The procession was large, the music was excellent, the address quite eloquent and the exercises short, and consequently interesting. Barring the accident every thing passed off pleasantly.

P. T. Barnum is making his way Fort Wayne-ward with the greatest exhibition that ever traveled through the country—combining circus, menagerie, wax-works, and a thousand and one curiosities. We shall refer to this mammoth exhibition from time to time, in order that our readers may fully understand the sight that is in store for them—providing they wish to attend it.

Two Auburn boys, high toned, you know, went on the back street to spend the evening with some lady friends. They had the light fixed all right but forgot to put down the curtains. Some other boys were strolling by when their attention was attracted by a shrill song resembling that of a bird that builds its nest in barns or under bridges—"Pee-wee"—and the boys listened to their song the enchantment of which—the song or something else—seemed to rivet them to the spot.

Doct. Davenport took a vote on the mail car, the other day, with the following result: Gen. Grant 2, Mrs. Woodhull 1.—The latter vote was cast by a darky porter who sells pea nuts. The result was immediately telegraphed to Washington, with instructions to place it to the credit of John Peter. The above two votes were cast by the clever doctor himself, claiming, as he weighed 600 pounds, that he had enough material about him to make half a dozen ordinary Radicals.—Fort Wayne Sentinel.

Years ago, says the New Albany Ledger, we had Romanite and Rambo apples for forty cents per bushel, peaches by the wagon load, and plums without end. People were not then educated in the great art of horticulture. Now we have abundance of science of and no fruit, a great deal of knowledge and no apples; long catalogues with hard names, but no plums A change in the programme is loudly called for, and scientific horticulturists should inform us how to overcome disease, insects, and the climate influences.

Fourth of July Celebration.—A large meeting of our citizens was held at the Court House last Tuesday evening, to determine whether we should celebrate or not. Of course it was decided that we do so in a regular old fashioned way, with a grand public dinner, eloquent speeches, with bands of music, a grand military parade, a regular genuine balloon ascension, a mammoth bower dance, and fire works in the evening, with a section of deep toned artillery to help us along. Five hundred dollars have been donated to defray all expenses. Let there be a rousing time—a glorious time—with as little drunkenness as possible. Hurrah!

John Decker has a field of wheat, of 90 acres, on his farm one and a half mile north of the city, which is the best piece of wheat we have seen this year. It stands well over the entire field and is nearly ready to head out. With favorable weather it will probably yield 30 bushels to the acre and that will be a very large average for this season. He tells us that the ground was fitted in good order and then the seed was drilled both ways, using 1¼ bushels to the acre. Some of our farmers who have poor fields of wheat might profit by this hint.—Laporte Argus.

Seventeen Republican papers in Illinois are supporting Greeley and Brown. Is not that some evidence that it is possible to elect Greeley?—State Sentinel.

How about Indiana. We had better look at home first before we go abroad The Radicals are a unit on this point but we are not. Some claim that they will abide the decision of the Baltimore convention and yet they are working op only for Greeley.

The Democratic party is now divided into two sections.—One desirous to destroy the organization and barter its principles and influence for official plunder; while the other is zealously laboring to maintain its political integrity. The former brands the latter as impractical because it will not consent to trade. The latter is determined to preserve its honor if it thereby meets defeat.—LaGrange Standard.

Not yet, Mr. Standard. Not half so bad as the Republican party. We have no ticket in the field while you have two.—We are still in hopes that one ticket will be sufficient and that will be nominated at Baltimore, and that it will not be Horace Greeley.

NO MORE SMALL-POX.

We are glad to remark this week that after close inspection we feel safe in announcing the entire disappearance of this loathsome disease from our midst. Elsewhere will be found a certificate of some of our physicians. By good fortune it has been nipped in the bud, in the first case that appeared There is no cause now to prevent any one from visiting our place. If we thought there was a shadow of a chance for it to still crop out we would not make the above announcement.

Belled cows ranging the streets are a terrible nuisance—especially, when cropping grass around our office.—Auburn Courier.

The idea of cropping grass in the streets around a printing office is richness. What kind of a country town do you live in, Mr. Courier?—Ken. Standard.

Well, you see we've got a good soil here and grass springs up most anywhere it has a chance. Some places, you know, won't produce even mullen stocks, and we are not surprised that our neighbor never sees a spear of grass, because there's no ground to back it. We prefer having a few stocks of grass on our streets, to a corporation debt like Kendallville.

Wool.—According to all Eastern advices the wool market is in a very unsatisfactory condition. The agitation of the question of repealing entirely or reducing the duty on foreign wools, and the uncertainty concerning the final action of Congress in the matter unsettle prices. The recent land purchases of Australian wools and South American sheep skins for this country, and the incoming clip, combined with the advance in gold, tends to lower prices.

Good clean washed, free from burs is worth 60 to 65c. Tub washed 70c, unwashed, burry and black at the usual reduction. The general unsettled condition of both financial and political affairs should induce caution in dealing in wool, as prices may at any moment drop greatly to the detriment of the trader. An early marketing of the clip will probably insure full prices.

SMALL-POX.

We, the physicians of Auburn, in order to correct erroneous reports in regard to the above disease, would state that there is no case of that character in Auburn or vicinity, to our knowledge. There has been but two cases, Mr. Lauferty's child, in Auburn, which case is now entirely cured, and one three mills east, which proved fatal May 9th, 1872.

And as the necessary sanitary measures have been taken, we give it as our opinion that the disease will not spread further.

A CARD.

To my Patrons in Auburn and Vicinity.

Thankful to a kind Providence for the entire restoration of my family to health and being now free from that loathsome, small pox, over which I had no control, in having my child infected; I would state, that grateful for past favors I hope to merit your confidence and patronage as before.

Yours, truly,
Samuel Lauferty.

From Spencerville,

Ed. Courier:

We have been having exciting times at S. for a few days past First came a grand exhibition of stereoscopic views, musical wonders, etc., on the 25th, but wonderful as it may appear nobody had any inclination to see the exhibition, although several complimentary tickets were issued. It was simply "casting pearls before swine" probably; at all events, not even the presented tickets were used.

This exhibition had a troupe of three. One wore a dilapidated stove-pipe, another a very beautiful but superanuated slouch hat, and the other a very ancient cap, the other dress, of each, being in fashion with the covering of the head, one of them bening most of the time bare foot.

Why the people could not appreciate the magnificence of an exhibition with such a grand troupe seems inexplicable.

But the chief of the show, the plug hat man, nothing daunted remained over until Monday, when his musical voice could be heard saying in a nasal twang, prize candy, when he finally had his baggage receptacle (an old paper covered valise) repaired, and bid adieu to S., leaving on the old fashioned pedal train for the east.

The other exhibition on the 27th made a very respectable appearance, and seemed to have very gentlemanly managers.

The wind was so high that their canvass could not be raised until evening, when the wind ceased blowing the canvass was put up and the show went on An audience of at least five hundred were in attendance, and from its numerous and frequent cheerings seemed to be highly pleased with the performance. O. S.

R. R. Accident.—By the bursting of a wheel on the gravel train on the Eel River Road, last Friday, eleven cars were wrecked and one man seriously injured.

Radical Misrepresentation.

A correspondent from Fairfield Center informs us that at a Republican caucus in that place, a few days ago, a Mr. Reincohl, the "red hot" Radical candidate for Senator in this district, made a speech which was wholly made up of assertions. When Mr. Reincohl attempted his misrepresentations in hopes that the citizens of Fairfield would swallow them down, he made a sorry mistake. They know something of the swindling and corruption of the Grant administration, and any attempt at sugar coating it over by smooth-tongued offices seekers, of which the Grant parties now mainly composed, will not meet much favor in any intelligent community When such men as Sumner and Trumbull rise up from this reeking corruption and tell us that "it is the most corrupt government the world ever saw," though they are our political opponents we must believe them because they have been where it exists, and Mr. Reincohl has not. We have the assertion of a petty aspirant to office against the positive evidence of such men as Horace Greeley, Shurz, Col. McClure and a host of other Republicans who cannot stifle conscience in the miserable mal-administration of the affairs of the country. Mr. Reincohl may think he can slip in one corner of the county under the impression that the citizens have not heard of these things yet and make most extravagant assertions to the contrary, but he blunders, miserably blunders, and insults the intelligence of our citizens in so doing. We are informed that he asserted in this "red hot" speech, that there had only been $50,000 squandered under the Grant administration. It is only necessary to compare this assertion with its author to show the thieving propensity of the office seekers and corrupt leaders of the whole party. Does Mr. Reincohl claim that $5,000 willcover the corruptions and frauds perpetrated upon the people of the county by an army of thieves now holding office under Grant? How does this statement accord with the report of Mr. Garfield, of $8,00,000 of pension frauds, revenue frauds 500,000,000, as grouped together by the leading Washington Republican paper average annual stealage $125,000,000 Grant's incumbency $375,000,000. How does it accord with the frauds perpetrated by Leet at New York, with the Robeson corruption, whitewashed as it is, and with the millions of dollars stolen from the southern states by carpet baggers appointed by Grant. And where has any been punished except in the case of a defalting paymaster, who had no money and consequently was consigned to punishment because he could not buy up officials to prevent his imprisonment. The assertion that out of 300 officials 298 were punished is even more ridiculous than the first, because it virtually admits the great number of frauds perpetrated, of the large proportion of rascals in office, while the average amount of stealings as stated by Mr. Reineohl would less than $200 each, a sum that most any one could pay, rather than go to prison. This logic may suit the biased minds and prejudices of a few Radicals but it wont go down with the masses.

They must have something more tangible than the dwarfed opinions and assertions of those who want to get their hands into the public crib, and at the same time cry out for honesty and purity. Let us have peace, not such peace as Grant has given us, but that peace that assures us of an honest administration of the Government.

Newark Delaware and Northwestern Railway.

Those interested in this road met pursuant to adjournment, at Ottawa, Ohio, on the 21st ult. Large delegations were present from nearly every point along the line of the road.

The meeting was called to order, H. P. Eaton in the chair. On motion Dr. H. Huber, of Glandorf, was elected Secretary.

Upon call of the Chairman the committee appointed by the meeting at Ada to examine the present articles of incorporation in the light of recent legislation, and report as to whether any change was necessary, as well as to devise a plan of procedure for the construction of the road, presented the following report:—

Your committee report that after an examination of the present articles of incorporation, and of the circumstances under which they were filed, have grave doubts as to the legality of proceedings under them; and they are also of opinion that, in view of the recent legislation, a smaller amount of capital stock is necessary than that named in these articles of incorporation. They would therefore suggest:

1st. That new articles of incorporation be filed with a capital of two million dollars.

2d. That books be opened as soon as practicable for subscription to the capital stock of the road.

3d. That as soon as the necessary amount of stock is subscribed, the company organize by the election of a President and Director.

4th. That the President and Directors proceed to put into operation the machinery for a vote under the Boesel Bill for material aid to the road, in the several counties, townships, cities and towns along the line.

On motion the report was adopted as read.

On motion a committee consisting of one from each county, township, town and city represented in the meeting was appointed for the purpose of selecting incorporators.

Dr. Huber being called called away, on motion of J. L. Olncy, W. C. G. Krauss was elected Secretary.

The committee presented the following report:

Your committee beg leave to report as follows:—The number of incorporators should be eleven, and we suggest the following named gentlemen as suitable for incorporators: Lewis Evans, of Licking county; J. C. Evans, of Delaware county; Hylas Sabine and A. J. Blake, of Union county, A. Ream D. A Klinger, of Hardin county; J. J. Ferrall and H. P. Eaten of Allen county; Frank Bugel, Hiram Day and J. L. H. Long, of Putnam county.

Lewis Evans, Ch'n.

On motion the report of the committee was adopted.

On motion the incorporators were requested to have the articles of incorporation drawn up and filed immediately.

The meeting was then addressed by Gen. Parkhust, of Coldwater; J. C. Evans of Delaware; A. J. Blake, of Richwood, and others, upon the importance of and the necessity for the construction of the road, after which, on motion, the meeting adjourned.

H. P. Eaton, Ch'n.
W. C. G. Krauss, Sec'y.

Whitney's Musical Guest is doing much towards the advancement of this beautiful art. It gives in every number music worth more than the subscription price per year The June number contains a song and chorus entitled "Sometime," the quartettes "June," and "morning," a Sunday School chorus "Jerusalem the Golden," etc. At the low price of $1.00 a year, it should find a welcome in every household Send 10 cents for specimen copy. Address W. W. Whitney, Toledo, Ohio.

CHAMPIONS.

Champion Reapers and Mowers—Champions, with that 'tried and true' self-rake that has been in successful operation for more than nine years, without the need of any great change. Champion's—the machine with the wrought iron frame. Champion's—without the 'old fashioned' over hanging reed. Champion's—with no complicated self rake hid from the eye, but a 'big thing' in imagination. Champions—the best made, easiest handled, most durable, lightest draft machine in use. Over 75 in DeKalb county and not a farmer gone back on them. I have the Champion in stock and hold it as an article of merchandise, the same that I do any of my shelf goods. I have all confidence in the Champion and know that it will stand on its own merits.

My stock of Agricultural Implements consists in part of the Champion, the Gump Sulky Horse Rake, the Western Walking Cultivator, the Thomas & Nishwitz Harrows. I extend an invitation to the farmers generally to call and see my goods and buy if they suit.

J. A. Matson, Waterloo, Ind.

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York:

"Messrs. Rothschild & Bros, proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No, send them on at once as we intend to give 'our customers the benefit of it.

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 25 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men nave now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of '1872. We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at those astonshingly low prices. Remember the place

Wool being worth from 80 to 85c, woolen goods must advance. The popular Red Front Clothing men have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 30 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction 'guaranteed, they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods, and low prices that none dare to compete with.

MARRIAGES.

CASEBEER—NYCUM—Tuesday evening, June 4th, at the Berry Street M. E. Church, Fort Wayne by Rev. A. Marine, Dr. J. B. Casebeer, of Auburn, and Miss Sarah E. Nycum, of Fort Wayne.

No cake yet, but kinder expect some. The Doctor came nigh surprising his friends with his sudden departure into the equatorial temperature of matrimony. If we had not been told about two weeks ago by some dozen different persons, we would surely have had our "har" raised by the news. As it is, it comes in a little less tone than a nitro-glycerine explosion, The Doctor is a clever, aimable gentleman, one of our best citizens and we are glad to learn how nigh he come in the successful performance of so great a feat as getting married, without the loss of a single soul. His bonny bride is spoken of as a lady of rare accomplishments and we wish the happy couple a life of joy and happiness.

ARE YOU GOING WEST.

If so take our advice, and purchase your tickets over the old reliable Missouri Pacific Railroad, which is positively the only line that runs three daily express trains from St. Louis to Kansas City and is the only line which runs Pullman's Palace Sleepers and fine Day Coaches especially for movers) equipped with Millers Safety Platform and the patent steam brake, from St. Louis to Kansas City, Fort Scott, etc., without change. Mark Twain on His Travels.

I got into the cars and took a seat in juxtaposition to a female. That female's face was a perfect insurance company for her—it insured her against ever getting married to anybody except a blind man.—Her mouth looked like a cracked in a dried lemon, and there was no more expression in her face than there is in a cup of cold custard. She appeared as if she had been through one famine and got about two thirds through another. She was old enough to be great grandmother to Mary that had a little lamb. She was chewing prize pop corn, and carried in her hand a yellow rose, while a band box and a cotton umbrella nestled sweetly by her side, I could'nt guess whether she was on a mission of charity, or going West to start a saw mill. I was full of curiosity to hear her speak; so I said:

The exegencies of tne time require great circumspection in a person who is treveling.

What?

Says I, The orb of day shines resplendent in the vault above.

She hitched around uneasy like, then she raised her umbrella and said—

I don't want any of your sass—get out! And I got.

Then I took a seat alongside a thin fellow, who looked like the ghost of Hamlet lengthened out. He was a stately cuss, and he was reading.

Said I, Mister, did you ever see a camel leopard? I said camel leopard because it is a pious animal, and never eats any grass without getting down on its knees. He said he had'nt seen a camel leopard. Then said I, do you chew tobacco?

He said, No sir.

Then I said, How sweet is nature.

He took this for a conundrum and said he did'nt know. Then he said he was deeply interested in the history of a great man. Alas! he exclaimed we are but few.

I told him that I knew one; the man that made my cooking stove was a great man.

Then he asked, Would I read?

Says I, What you got?

He replied, Watts' Hymns, Reveries by Moonlight, and How to spend the Sabbath.

I said, None of them for Hannah, but if he had an unabridged Business Directory of New York City, I would take a little read.

Then he said, Young man, look at these gray hairs.

I told him I saw them, and when a man got as old as he was he ought to dye.—Said I, You need'nt think these hairs are any signs of wisdom, it's only a sign that your system lacks iron; and I advise you to go home and swallow a crowbar.

He to[illegible] and what little entente cordiale there was between us was spilled. It turned out that he was chaplain of a base ball club.

When we got to Rochester I called for a bowl of bean soup. It ought to be called lean soap. I send you the receipt for making it:

Take a lot of water, wash it well, and broil it until it is brown on both sides, then very carefully pour one bean into it and let it simmer. When the bean begins to get restless, sweeten it with salt, then put it up in air-tight cans, hitch each can to a brick, and chuck them overboard, and the soup is done.

The above receipt originated with a man in Iowa, who got up suppers on odd occasions for Odd Fellows. He has a receipt for oyster soup, leaving out the salt part.

Speaking of Iowa reminds me of the way I got money to pay for my ticket and pay for that fellow's supper. I bet a few dollars that I could tell him how much water to a quart went under the railroad bridge over the Missipi at Dubuque in a year. He bet, and I said two pints to a quart. I won the bet, but after all, that supper was a swindle. If the city didn't settle [illegible] its old settlers [illegible] failure, and the city too.

[illegible] Pennsylvania Bull Dog.

There is a man in Darby, Pa., who purchased a bull dog which he proposed to turn loose in his store at night in order to scare away the burglars. The first evening after he obtained possession of the animal, he locked it in the store and went away a happy man. The next morning early, he went around to the store and unlocked the door. The dog was vigilant—the man was surprised to see how exceedingly dilgent that dog was—for no sooner was the door opened than the dog seized its owner by the leg, and seemed to be animated by an earnest and vigorous resolution not to let go until it had removed at least one good mouthful. And the man pushed the dog back and shut the door on its ribs until the animal relaxed its jaws; and then the man kicked the dog into the store as if he was in a hurry to do something. Then he suspended business for a week, and spent the vacation firing at that dog through the windows, and down the chimney, and up through the cellar ceiling, with a shot gun, trying to exterminate him. And that mercantile establishment did not open for trade until the man had paid twice the first cost of the dog to the dog's former owner to come and take it home; and then, when he got in, he found that during the bombardment holes had been shot through mackeral barrels, and coal oil cans, and sweet oil kegs so that [illegible] everywhere. Dogs have no more charms for this man.

Too Much for the Colonel.

When Colonel Henry Wilson was in Boston, raising a regiment, a little fellow one day presented himself at headquarters and asked for a commission.

[illegible] service? asked Colonel Wilson.

Yes, Colonel, I was in the three months service.

Were you at the battle of Bull Run?

I was.

Colonel Wilson has [illegible] vein of humor in him; so, winking at his staff, he asked:

And did you run?

Gorver & Baker's Sewing Machine IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

VOLLMER'S Elixir of PYROPHOSPHATE OF IRON AND PERUVIAN BARK.
In this preparation are combined the valuable properties and virtues of Peruvian Bark, with Phosphorous and Iron, in the shape of Pyrophosphate of Iron. This Elixir will be found of great advantage in Dyspepsia, Indigestion, weak and delicate Stomachs, and generally in weak and delicate states of the system.
The ingredients in this Elixir are skillfully blended into a delightful Cordial, making it the most agreeable and palatable combination to the taste, in use.
ar. 31, '70.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.
DAVID E. FOUTZ, Proprietor,
BALTIMORE, Md.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific roads. 2d, to Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with railroad lands and homesteads. 3d, to St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleeper's, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines to make quick time and good connections, and are in a word the best equipped roads in the west. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific roads, be sure that you go "By Way of Burlington."

DON'T WHIP HIM.

Our Robby was pinching the kitten,
And kicking his primer about,
And pulling a beetle to pieces,
His face all awry in a pout;
His mamma, who silent and patient,
Had heard all his fretting and noise,
Now reached for the whip on the mantel—
The terror of four year old boys.

But grandma, with snow white 'kerchief
Pinned over her warm loving breast,
Where ten little heads had been pillowed
And sunk into childhood's sweet rest,
Looked up from her little wool stocking,
Just finished and laid on her knee,
And said: 'Dear, you' l ruin his temper,
You had better far let the child be,

"Don't whip him; his father before him
Was flogged and shut up in the dark,
And stood on one foot in the corner,
And disciplined up to the mark;
We gave him no credit for honor,
But watched him as spiders watch flies,
And what did it teach him? Why mainly
To practice deceit and tell lies.

"We called it affection and duty—
God knows we were fond of the boy—
But I guess his remembrance of childhood
Is not quite a well spring of joy;
So put up your yellow whip daughter,
And try little Robby once more;
You see he's forgotten his passion,
And lies half asleep on the floor."

Then grandmother lifted her darling,
And patted his head on her breast,
And sang an old favorite ditty,
'Till all Robby's woes were at rest.
And so the wee whip, bright and yellow,
Was laid on the mantel again;
And that is the way these grandmas
Spoil nine little boys out of ten.

Amusing.

The passengers on one of the Baker street cars laughed some yesterday morning at a scene between the conductor and a well dressed young man from Georgetown. As the car was passing the avenue the young man at the time standing on the platform taking easy, with one foot on a trunk, he was approached by the conductor and his fare demanded. He quietly passed over his five cents.

Conductor: I demand twenty five cents for that trunk.

Young man (hesitatingly): 25 cents? I will not pay it.

Conductor: Then I shall put the trunk off.

You had better not or you may be sorry for it.

Conductor pulls strap, stops car, dumps trunk on the avenue, starts car, and after going some two squares, approaches the young man, who was still as calm as a Summer morning, and in an angry mood says: Now I have put your trunk off, what are you going to do about it?

Well I don't propose to do anything about it; it's no concern of mine; it was not my trunk.

Then why did'nt you tell me?

Because you did not ask me, and I told you you'd be sorry for it.

Then go inside the car.

Oh no, you're good enough company for me out here.

At this juncture a portly German emerges from the car, and angrily says, Mine Goit? you feller, where is mine drunk?

My friend, I think that is your trunk down on the avenue.

Who puts h'm off? I have the monish to pay him. I will see about dot.

The car was stopped, and shortly afterwards the conductor was seen to come sweating up with the trunk on his back—a part of the performance he did not enjoy half as well as did the passengers.

Twelve Reasons why Horace Greeley is "Unfit" President.

1. Because he wears a broad brimmed white hat.

2. Because he owns an old white overcoat.

3. Because he does not chew, smoke or drink whisky.

5. Because he has been poor, and had to work his way unaided.

5. Because he has received the degree of Doctor of Laws from Amherst College.

6 Because he never attended a dancing school, and is just as frank and unaffected in his manners as were those honest and patriotic Presidents, General Zachary Taylor and Abraham Lincoln.

7. Because he cannot be bribed or bought, or frightened into wearing a party yoke or submitting to the crack of a party whip.

8. Because he hates political rings, and deals heavy blows against corruption alike in his own party and that of his opponents.

9. Because he affiliates with the common masses, and defends the poor against the encroachments of the corrupt and selfish.

10. Because he does not feel bound to support a candidate for the Presidency before he is nominated.

11. Because, being himself nominated by the unbiased suffrage of a large and patriotic convention, he does not refuse in advance to receive the support of Democrats who think him honest and wise enough to mete out justice to all people, without regard to loyalty, race, color, condition, creed or political name.

12. Because he will be the President of the whole people, and not of any party or any ring.

Tuesday afternoon, a young man, a stranger, jumped from the Cincinnati and Newport suspension bridge into the Ohio River and was drowned. His decent was nearly a hundred feet. After reaching the water he rose to the surface, seemed to struggle for life, and sank just as a yawl appeared at his side. His name is not known, and his body has not been recovered.

A youth of ninety one reverently led to the altar a charming bride of one hundred and six. It is reported that they were married without the consent of their parents.

A Touching Eulogy.

The most touching eulogy, and the most comprehensive, probably, was uttered at the grave of Daniel Webster at the close of the funeral rites. A plain man, probably one of the neighbors of the deceased, came forward, stood at the grave, and said with quivering lips:

Daniel Webster the world will be lonesome without you. The quality which won for Daniel Webster this touching eulogy is not his great and brilliant intellect, but his neighborly kindness.

An editor relates how a colored barber made a dead head of him. He offered him the usual dime for shaving when the fellow drew himself up with considerable pomposity, and said:

I understand dat you' is an editor.

Well, what of it?

We never charge editors nuffin.

But, my woolly friend, we concluded there are a good many editors traveling now a days, and such liberality on your part will prove a ruinous business.

Oh, nebber mind, remarked the barber we make it up off de gemmen.

Stung to Death.

We learn from the Mississippi Conservative that a few days ago a negro named Lewis Auchanan, living on J. R. Shakeford's place, two and a half miles from Carrolton, climbed a tree to saw off a limb upon which a swarm of bees were settled. When the limb fell the whole swarm settled upon the head of the unfortunate man and stung him so severely that he died in ten minutes. When help was offered he said it was no use, for he at once expired. Whether his sudden death was caused by absorption of the virus of the stings, or by the great shock to the nervous system is a question for the doctors.

Somebody locates the following in the Granite State:

A couple had quarreled during the whole term of their married life. At last the husband was taken ill and evidently about to die. His wife came to his bed side, where, after she had seen his condition, the following coloquy ensued:

Why, daddy, your feet are cold, and your nose is cold.

Wa'al, let um be cold.

Why, daddy, you're going to die.

Wa'al I guess I know what I am about.

Why, daddy, what's to become of me if you die?

Dunno and don't care. What I want to know is, whats to become of me?

Irish Repartee.

Colonel L. and a friend were one day walking the street in Madison, when the conversation turned upon Irish wit. Col. L said he doubted if it were so off hand ed as was so generally thought. He believed that Irishmen studied it up.

Let us prove it, said his friend, on the first Irishman we meet.

A young Irish lad of about sixteen soon came in sight, walking toward them.—

Seize one arm, said his friend. They separated, one passing each side of the boy, each grabbed an arm.

If the devil should come along now which one of the three would you take? shouted the friend.

Me to be sure, said Pat. He's sure o'yees any time.

To Make a Fashionable Woman.

Take ninety pounds of flesh and bones—but chiefly bones—wash clean, bore holes in the ears and cut off the small toes; bend the back to conform to the Grecian bend, the Boston dip, the kangaroo droop, the Saratoga slope, or the bull frog break, as the taste inclines; then add three yards of lines, one hundred of ruffles and seventy-five yards of edging, eighteen yards of dimity, and a pair of silk or cotton hoes with patient hip attachments, one pair of false calves, six yards flannel, embroidered, one pair of balmoral boots with heels three inches high, four pounds whalebone in strips, seventeen hundred and sixty yards of steel wire, three quarters of a mile of tape, ten pounds of raw cotton or two wire hemispheres, one wire basket to hold a bushel, 400 coppies of the AUBURN COURIER, one hundred and fifty yards of silk or other dress goods, five hundred yards of point lace, one box of pearl powder, one bushel of false hair, one Blessed Baby, and a Dolly Varden hat.—Garnish with earings, finger-rings, breast pins, chains, bracelets, feathers, and flowers to suit the taste. Pearls and diamonds may be thrown in if you have them; if not, paste and pinchback from the dollar store will do.

Whirl all round a fashionable circle and stew by gaslight for six hours.

Great care should be taken that the thing is not overdone.

This dish is highly ornamental, and will do to put at the head of your table on grand occasions, but it is not suitable for every life at home, being very expensive and indigestible. It sometimes gives men the heartburn and causes them to break, and is certain death to their children.

Why, answered Jim, scornfully, they always meet once a year to exchange sermons.

A skeptical young collegian confronted an old Quaker with the statement that he did not believe in the Bible. Said the Quaker:

Does thee believe in France?

Yes, for though I have not seen it, I have seen others that have. Besides, there is plenty of corroborative proof that such a country does exist.

Then thee will not believe anything thee or others have not seen?

To be sure I won't.

Did thee ever see thy own brains?

No.

Ever see any body that did?

No.

Does thee believe thee has any?

A colored woman, probably the largest and heaviest person of her sex in the world, died at St. Louis a few days ago at the age of fifty-one years. She weighed nine hundred pounds. Her dimensions were five feet ten inches in height twenty one inches across the shoulders, and 37 inches across the hips. Her arms were thirty inches in circumference. When she had been arrayed in burial vestments it was found impossible for seven men to lift her. Finally the box was tilted on one side and she was rolled in while the priest chanted the service of the dead.—She was then placed in a large wagon, which proceed slowly to the cemetry.—The wagon was backed up to the grave and eight men and six rollers combined their exertions to lower her into her narrow bed.

Scene at an Auction.

A writer in the Spirit of the Times thus sketches a scene in an auction room, that he witnessed a few days since. The articles offered, he says were damaged goods—and that woman dote on as they do on curly headed babies.

The first articles put were a pair of blankets for which more than a dozen bids were immediately offered. The puzzled auctioneer caught up the highest, which was a dollar, from a female who seemed determined to have them at any price, when, ere he could say, 'going,' a male cried out 'dollar fifty, 'from the opposite side of the room.

'Two dollars?' echoed the woman, elbowing her way through the dense mass of females, who were separated from the males by a long counter, upon which the glib toned auctioneer walked to and fro with his goods.

Two fifty, nodded the man.

Thank ye, sir; going at two fifty cried the auctioneer.

Three! screamed the woman.

Gin the fifty? said the auctioneer, turning to the woman with a half suppressed smile on his small, sober visage.

A nod from the woman.

Three fifty, I'm offered; give me four? Come, don't be afraid; they're worth double the money.

Yes, and that's all.

Sold! cried the dealer in hammers, almost bursting with laughter, to Capt Smith—not John—for four dollars.

Smith, cried the woman, what, my husband, raising herself on the tip toe to catch a glimpse of him. Why, you good for nothing man, you've been bidding against your own wife! O, you imprudence! but I won't have them in the house.

If some one would only get up a sewing machine to collect rents, mend manners and repair family breaches

BILL PHILLIP'S FIRST BABY.

Mrs. Phillips was on the very pinnacle of felicity. She was the mother of a boy which weighed eleven pounds.

Mr. Phillips bid fair to lose his mind entirely. He danced and sung, and fired guns from the top of the corn house, whistled Yankee Doodle while eating his breakfast, and wrung the necks of all the fowls on the place to make a chicken-pie for the celebration.

This worthy couple had been married ten years, and this was their first child. People had laughed at them ten years on account of this luck—people who were overrun with children, and whose lives were made miserable by the scoldings and spanking they found it necessary to inflict upon their wretched little olive plants.

Now, Mrs. Phillips said she guessed they'd laugh out of the other side—There had never been so large a baby born in Smithfield before. Mrs. Jones' only weighed nine pounds, and had a pug nose. Mrs. Sawyer's was red-haired, and had a mole on its right foot—a sure sign that it would come to a bad end—and it only weighed seven pounds and fourteen ounces.—She guessed folks had better look at home before they laughed.

Baby proved to be a Tartar. He had a temper like a wind-mill, and seemed determined to develop his feet and lungs to his utmost while he had leisure, for he screamed and kicked twenty three hours out of the twenty-four.

But his mother declared he was an angel. We could never imagine an angel with puffy red cheeks, heels elevated in the air, sucking sugar rags, and being pounced about in a willow cradle to the tune of 'High-diddle dee,' but then our imagination is not by any means so vivid as it might be.

From the hour in which the baby was born, he was the autocrat of the household; everything had to bow to his nod.

The scullery door creaked; it was taken off the hinges, and the servant was in the draft all the time because the creak might disturb the baby.—For the same reason the coffee-mill was moved into the woodshed; the dishes must be washed out of doors—the clatter of the plates made baby scream; the washing was done in the barn; the dog was muzzled and the cat choked—all from fear of disturbing the baby.

Mr. Phillips gave a blacksmith who was located within a quarter of a mile, one hundred dollars to remove his shop; and Biddy was moved to the cockloft of the woodshed on account of her snoring.

The child's diseases were legion. It was a wonder that it could draw its breath with so many ailments clinging to it. Mrs. Phillips was continually on the watch for some new demonstration.

'Charles!' cried she, waking her husband from slumber one cold winter night, 'it seems to me baby don't breathe just right.'

Mr. Phillips sprang up and listened. 'Good gracious; he's got the snuffles, ain't he?'

'Oh, dear! what shall we do if baby is going to be sick?'

Mr. Phillips got a light, and the anxious parents brought it to bear on the face of their child.

'Oh, heavens!' cried the mother, 'his face is actually purple. See that red spot on his elbow.'

'It may be where he's laid on it!' said Mr. P.

'Laid on it? Oh, you unfeeling man! you unnatural father! And there its sucking its thumb! I've known from the first that it wouldn't live, it sucks its thumb too much.'

'Seems to me I've heard my mother say it was a sign of a healthy child to suck its thumb, but I won't be certain. Anyway, it's a good sign or a bad one. I forget which.

'Run, Charles! its going to die—I know it is! Oh, don't stop to dress—don't stop to dress—don't; it may die while you are waiting. Call for Granny Bates, and tell her to bring some catnip and saffron, and rum, and peppermint—tell her to bring all the herbs she's got; and do hurry Charles, do! Mercy on us! sucking both thumbs! Run, run!'

Mr. Phillips caught up the first article of clothing he could lay his hands on, which proved to be an embroidered petticoat of his wife's, but he was in too much haste and altogether too much excited to notice dress particularly. He flung the garment over his head, and tied it around his waist—slipped on his shoes, and then plunged out in the keen air. The doctor was asleep and did not care about turning out, but on being informed that it was a case of life and death, he yielded at once.

Mr. Phillips left him dressing, and sped on to the residence of Granny Bates. The old lady was wise, but she was dreadfully superstitious, and believed religiously in warnings and apparitions. Phillips gave a thundering rap at her door, and directly a night-capped head appeared at an open window.

'What do you want at this time o' night, and who be ye?' said a cracked voice.

Phillips stepped out and stood plainly revealed by the light of the moon.

'Good gracious, massy;' cried the old woman, it's an apparatus from the t'other world! And its got a scolloped petticoat on. Land! I didn't think they was sich 'waisted vanerties as that.

'Not I! I ain't so green as to trust my old body with a supernatural ghost,' and down went the window with a bang. Phillips pounded at the door until he was tired, and then made tracks for home.

Dr. Rogers had just arrived. Mrs. Philips was preparing to go into hysterics as soon as she heard his opinion.

Baby was much worse; it not only sucked its thumb, but wiggled its toes. It could not continue long. The doctor with a grave face entered the sick room. Biddy rubbed her mistress with camphor, Mr. Phillips stood by wiping his eyes with the drapery of his scant attire.

'Oh, doctor, doctor! will it die?—Only save it, and you may take all I have!' cried Mrs. Phillips, wringing her hands.

'I'll get down on my knees to you and thank you forever.'

'Keep your sitting, marm, keep your sitting,' said the doctor, taking a large pinch of snuff.

'Don't keep me in suspense! only look at its precious little arm! What is it? For the love of heaven, tell me—let me hear the worst?'

'Well, marm, if I speak out you will promise not to blame me?' asked the doctor gravely.

'No, no!'

'Marm,' said he, with his long face still more elongated, 'its my opinion, as a man and physician, that the child has been bitten by four bed-bugs, or else has been bitten in four places by one insect of that description.

'Dr. Rogers,' cried the father, 'do you mean to insult us?'

'By no means, sir—I repeat it.'

'No you don't!' yelled Mrs. P. 'It's enough to insinuate that I have bed-bugs, to say nothing of your libel on my little angel cherub Get out of this house this instant, you mean, cheating, insulting old vagabond!'—And siezing the butter ladle from the table where Biddy had placed it full of hot pepper tea, she threw it at him. The doctor knew enough about women, to realize that in flight lay safety, and with a hasty bow he backed off the steps and started for his gig. The ground was inclining and quite icy.—His feet flew up—his head went down and his body spun off down the hill like a steel-shod cutter. Mrs. P., nothing daunted, rushed after him and shared the same fate. The two bro't up together at the foot of the hill in a water-trough; but no words of sympathy were exchanged The doctor got out as quick as he could and galloped home, and Mrs. Phillips followed his example.

The baby lived and throve. As it grew older its dictatorship became more and more absolute. Phillips was down on all fours the greater part of his time, that the baby might ride on his back; and Mrs. Phillips left her arms bare in the coldest weather, because the steel springs in her dress sleeves hurt the baby.

Baby made a complete wreck of all the crockery in the house—pounded it with a hammer; he kicked his heels through the looking glasses, and tore the inwards out of pa's gold watch, unmolested. It pleased the deary, weary, seary baby, his mother said—'the little, mity sugar-plummy baby.'

One day when this wonderful baby was a year old the village inhabitants were startled by the disheveled apparition of Mrs. Phillips—bare headed, and wearing a wild expression of countenance—hurrying at a frantic rate to the jeweler's shop where her husband worked. And instantly she reappeared followed by Phillips at a dog trot.

Old Squire Smith saw them, and being a man who lived in constant dread of fire, he thought it must be that the residence of Mr. Philips was in flames. The old gentleman was perfectly insane on the subject of conflagrations, and at the top of his lungs raised a cry: Fire! fire! fire!

'Where! where! cried a score of voices.

'Charles Phillips house!' said the old gentleman.

The firemen gathered, got out the engine, and ran with all speed to the fated house, but to their supreme astonishment they did not so much as smell a puff of smoke in the region.

The head fireman who was something of a wag, knocked at the door. Mrs. Phillips appeared absolutely radiant.

'Is this the house, allow me to inquire ma'am that we are expected to squirt on?' said the foreman.

'I do not understand you,' said Mrs. P. 'but the baby has walked two steps—on his own feet alone.'

'Sold, by Jupiter!' cried the fireman; 'and now, boys, here's three times three to the baby that's walked two steps. Hearty, my men.

And they gave three cheers, drank a barrel of cider which Mr. Philips rolled out, and returned home.

Leave your books of complex figures—your dingy office—your busy shop! Rest with those you love, for heaven only knows what the next Saturday night may bring you! Forget the world of care and battles of life which have furrowed the week! Draw close around the family hearth! Saturday night has awaited your coming in sadness in tears and in silence. Go home to those you love, and as you bask in the loved presence and meet to return the loved embrace of your heart's pets, strive to be a better man and bless heaven for giving his children so dear a stepingstone in the river to the eternal, as Saturday night.

Saturday Night.

How many a kiss has been given—how many a curse—how many a caress—how many a look—how many a kind word—how many a promise has been broken—how many a soul has been lost—how many a loved one lowered into the narrow chamber—how many a babe has gone from earth to heaven—how many a little crib or cradle stands silent now which last Saturday night held the rarest treasure of the heart.

A week is a life. A week is a history. It makes events of sorrow and gladness, of which people never heard. Go home to your family man of business! Go home to your family, erring wanderer! Go home to the chair that awaits you, wronged waif on life's breakers! Go home to those you love, man of toil, and give one night to the joys and comforts fast flying by.

Praise.

Persons say, "Do not praise a child before his face." I say, do praise a child before his face. It is the best thing you can do for him. but do not praise him because his hair curls, nor because he has some bright buttons on his new-made pantaloons. Do not praise him for things that are indifferent or insignificant; but if he is approbative, and he tells the truth when he is strongly tempted to tell a lie then praise him and let his approbativeness become the guardian of his conscience in the matter of truth-telling. If a child is generous and brave, periling his own life or his own convenience, which is a great deal harder for some other person; if he does any thing that is honorable or noble praise him.—Praise him to discriminate between that which belongs to him as a nacent man

To Train a Horse To Stand.

Take your horse on the barn floor, and throw a strap over his right fore foot; lead him along and say "whoa" at the same time pull down the strap, which throws him on three feet and makes him stop suddenly. This is the best way known to teach whoa, though you can put on the war bridle, and say whoa, and give him a sharp jerk that will stop him about as soon as the strap on his foot. Then put him in harness, with the foot strap as directed under the head of "Training to Horses," and drive up to the door. The moment he undertakes to move, take his foot and say whoa. Get in your carriage and get out again; rattle the thills, make all the noise you can; give him to understand, by snatching his foot each time he moves, that he must stand until you tell him to go; and after a few times you can put the whole family into the carriage and he won't stir out of his tracks.

A True Story.

CHAPTER I. She stood beside her alter, upon her head a wreath of orange buds, upon her back the richest kind of duds; her lover stood beside her with white kid gloves and clean dicky—the last was 21 years old, the first was 17—the parson's job was over. Everyone had kissed the bride, and wished the young pair happiness. The last kiss had been given, the last word had been said, and the happy pair had simmered down and on their journey sped.

CHAPTER II. She stood beside the washtub, with her red hands in the suds; and at her slipshod feet there lay a pile of dirty duds; her husband stood beside her, the crossest man alive—the last was 29 years old, the first was 25.

The heavy wash was over, the clothes hung out to dry, and Tom had stuck his finger in the dirty baby's eye; Tom had been spanked, and supper made upon a crust of bread; and the bride and bridegroom went grumbling to their bed.

The Girl Full of Needles Outdone.

An exchange states that this time it is a soldier. The girl full of needles is not even mentioned. The soldier is a New Yorker, and during the war he was shot through the body. The bullet on its way carried a gold pen and silver pencil case with it, and left them somewhere in the body in a scattered condition. Now comes the extraordinary part of the story. About six months ago he had a great pain in his left leg, and it was stiff for six months. In fooling around his heel one day he felt something hard; he commenced to pull at it, and he dragged from the heel a crowbar three feet in length.—Shortly afterward a twelve-inch telescope issued from his armpit. And ever since that time every day or two, some handsome piece of mechanism has issued from his body. On last Friday twenty silver half-dollars were taken from the first joint of his left arm.—Some of his friends talk of killing him to find out if he hadn't a machine shop, a jewelry store and a silver mine hid away in him somewhere.

THE following dialogue is said to have taken place near Salisbury, England: 'Now, then, the first boy of the grammar class stand up.' First boy stands up, blushing. 'Here I be, sir.' Examiner—Well my good boy, can you tell me what vowels are?' First boy—'Vowls, sir? Yes, of course I can.' Examiner—Tell me, then, what are vowels?' First boy, (grinning at the simplicity of the question) 'Vowls, sir? Why vowls be chickens!'

AUBURN, IND., JUNE 13, 1872.

Colfax Retired!

Grant and Wilson Nominated by the Office-holders at Philadelphia.

The great nepotist and gift-taker, Grant was endorsed by the office-holders convention, at Philadelphia last Wednesday, and is to run again for President, notwithstanding he was in favor of the one term principle before his election in '68.

Senator Wilson was nomined for vice President. The very man that deserved some little credit for what he has done, is rupudiated and he who takes gifts and pays in official patronage, he who puts all his relations in office, whiles his time away at Long Branch, or dallies with his fast horses and bull pups is endorsed because he distributes these offices. Selah.

The fact that Johnson diminished the public debt in a greater degree than Grant has done in the same time is a fact. Whether of importance or not it is well to remember it, when the monthly jubilation are set by up the Grantites.

However erratic Senator Sumner may be in his political theories, no one ever accused him of plundering the treasury. This cannot be said of the Mortons, Conklings, Nyes, and Pomeroys, who assail him and defend Grant.

The laws of the State having general aplication, as enacted last winter occupy but sixty-nine pages; we have not seen the full volume, containing the private legislation—the geese that have feathers—but risk the opinion that it will occupy above twenty times as much space.

The Valparaiso Messenger speaks of the Hon. Thos. Wood, of Crown Point, as a probable candidate before the Democratic Congressional Convention. We have heard of no other person in connection with the nomination.

The New York World of Monday morning last urges the nomination of Hendricks and Hancock for President and Vice-President, by the Baltimore Convention. A strong team

The terrible excoriation which the Grant administration received at the hands of Senator's Sumner and Schurz last week, has had the effect of prolonging the session of Congress. It is hard to tell now when that illustrious body will adjourn.

The total depravity and utter disregard for truth of a very large portion of the human race has been fully and satisfactirilly established in the minds of the late defeated candidates. But the thing is over now, and the excitement that pervaded the political atmosphere no longer finds a place among us.—Ex.

Ku-Klux Bill.

The defeat of the Ku Klux bill in the House has an important bearing on the question of the final adjournment of Congress. The understanding has been that if the votes disclosed a majority in favor of the measure the Senate would not act on the concurrent resolution extending the time until the 3d of June, but would let Congress adjourn to-morrow, to be called by proclamation of a new session unlimited in time. The fact that so many Republicans voted against the KuKlux Bill will probably change this arrangement.

Moxa Morton has made another war speech. How Grant done this and that, but he dont say anything about him as President. The Republiican party has done much for Grant as an officer, but what has it done for the common soldier. They cry Grant but the crippled veteran now plays his organ on the streets for an existence. And will he who has thus been neglected still assist by his voice in perpetuating a man in office, who, of all others should show a greater interest in securing to them a compensation, at least in proportion to his own? We think not.

Notwithstanding the damaging testimony taken before the Congressional Investigating Committee, in reference to the frauds in the New York Custom House, a desperate effort is being made by the majority of the committee to white-wash the guilty officials. They proceeded to make a report exonerating the parties proven guilty without consulting with the minority of the committee, thus endeavoring to lay only the best side before the public, and keeping the worst side smothered up. This transaction on the eve of adjournment and just before an important election, without giving the minority an opportunity to present their side of the case, was plainly a villainous electioneering dodge in the interest of the present administration. How the Radical party can have the face to ask the support of an honest public, when it determinedly and persistently excuses the thieving and corruption of its officials and screens them

The Secretary of the Treasury as is usual upon such occasion, tries to make a good impression as to the public debt. He imagines he can re-establish confidence in his Administration of the finances of the country, by showing a decrease of the debt during May.—How it is done is quite another question and which may be safely told after election.

Grant's recent attempt to get an appropriation of ten millions of dollars for the construction of new iron clads, was nothing more nor less than a scheme to get that amount of funds for political purposes, and it is now given out that a bill will be offered asking for three millions of dollars. This measure was considered in the House some days ago, and was defeated.—Should it succeed, there is a fair prospect that the money will be used in other ways, beside the construction on iron clads.

Dan Voorhees was sitting in his place the other day, when a carpet bagger named Clark, of Galveston, Texas, who was born in Connecticut, came up to him and said:

"Mr. Voorhees, I must congratulate you upon your bold and manly speech. It gave our side universal satisfaction."

When the man turned away, Voorhees said, with a long oath:

"Great God! there must have been something wrong in that speech if that scoundrelly carpet bagger sees anything in it to praise."

Says the Chicago Times of Monday last, the adjournment of Congress, which was to have taken place to-day, has been postponed, nominally for one week, but, in fact for an indefinite time. The whole is attributable to Mr. Sumner's speech as every Senator who hopes to secure the appointment of a cross-roads postmaster feels called upon to reply. Mr, Carpenter commences the defence of the administration to-day, and will be followed by that dignified statesman, Mr. Zack Chandler, after which all the other Radical Senators will doubtless be heard from in dismal succession. Mr. Sumner may congratulate himself at such conclusive evidences of the effect of his speech.

Another Convert.

The Washington Sunday Herald, the Democratic paper having the largest circulation and influence in the District of Columbia, came out formally for Greeley in its last issue, in the following terms:

We believe that a man who for nearly forty years could conduct a journal of the highest influence in the world, can be safely trusted for four years with the Chief Magistracy of a nation. We believe that in Horace Greeley's one term parties can reform and issues stand out distinctly. We believe that we shall have a peaceable, joyous, fraternal, practicable time, and emerge from his administration with blessings upon his head, whose benign face and all-loving character have earned the respect of the South, and always kept the heart of the North.—Ex.

The advantage of the possession of dicipline when allied to courage was recently exhibited in a high degree by the officers and sailors of the United States fleet in the Mediterranean.

Seven of our ships of war were lying in the harbor of Marseilles, under the command of Admiral Allen; the harbor was closely crowded with merchant vessels of various countries, when just after midnight a tremendous explosion startled the harbor and the city; an Italian vessel laden with petroleum had taken fire and threatened distruction not only to the closely backed shipping but to the city as well.

While a universal paralysis seemed to have stricken every body, the American bugles rang out the signal for the boats, and almost instantly every boat was lowered and making for the burning ship, which was boarded and scuttled and towed out of harbor to sink or burn away from the rest of the fleet.

Such readiness of action is a proof of the high degree of perfection to which our navy has attained, or rather preserved; for from their earliest period of our history down to the present day, the navy has never failed in its duty.

The Vicksburg, Mississippi, Herald vouches for this, if true, certainly very remarkable fact:

"In the blooming, beautiful, balmy May of 1063, one of these dreadful battle-stained years never to be forgotten, General Tilghman fell, shot dead, at the battle of Champion Hill, gallantly struggling in defense of his cherished principles. His noble life ebbed away on the spot where he fell, and the sad earth drank his blood with eager thirstiness. But upon that immediate spot grew a peach tree that had reached maturity, while its roots steeped themselves in the martyr's blood. Singular to relate, the leaves and fruit of the tree are of a blood red color.

The tree was transplanted, and is now in the orchard of Dr. J. H. Hebron of this county. The propagation from the tree are of the same peculiar color. There is something peculiar about this. We have seen the leaves, and must confess they do look and (to us) smell like blood. The fact can be witnessed by those taking the trouble."

More than the usual breadth of corn

Germany Suffering by Emigration.

The dearth of labor caused in Germany by the heavy emigration movement is said to be attracting the attention of the German agricultural societies and many remedies have been proposed. It has been suggested that if the land owner wishes to keep his laborers he must improve their condition by paying better wages but it is stated that the emigrants are coming in the greatest numbers from those parts of the country where the laborers are most liberally treated. It is contended that the higher the wages the sooner the laborer will save enough to pay his passage money, and that when that object is accomplished he departs at once for his new home.—It is also contended that the landlord would be ruined by the payment of such wages as would induce the laborer to be satisfied with his position.—The real difficulty, however, it is stated, is to be found in the fact that the land is heavily mortgaged, and the proprietors have not sufficient capital to conduct farming operations successfully The Pomeranian Agricultural Society, it may be mentioned, thinks that it has discovered a mode of relief, and has recommended the German Government to place emigration under more stringent police regulations, and also to instruct the German Consuls at American ports to inquire how many able-bodied immigrants in those places are willing to return to their native country on condition of a free passage. We conjecture that the answer to such inquiries would be rather discouraging.

Senator Sumner has again opened his batteries in opposition to the administration of General Grant. His speech was an able, exhaustive and piercing criticism of the executive career of the President—a severe arraignment for his contempt of the legislative department of the government, his embarrassment of the public service by the appointment of his incompetent and dishonest relatives to responsible positions, his acceptance of presents and the appointment of the donors to high and lucrative places, for neglecting his official duties and spending his time with fast horses and gay and frivolous associates at the seaside, or traveling about the country in palace cars. Mr Sumner maintained that the vast appointing power confered by the constitution for the general welfare had been employed at the President's will to promote his schemes, to reward his friends, to punish his opponents, and to advance his election to a second term;" that "these assumptions had matured in a personal government, semi military in character and breathing the military spirit being a species of Caesarism, or personalism, abhorrent to republican institutions. The speaker declared that the administration was a failure so far as it had anything to do with reconstruction, that its foreign policy of which it had boasted was the most disgraceful muddle of the age, and that it did not deserve as much credit for the reduction of the public debt as Mr. Johnsons's. Mr. Sumner designed this address as an earnest of his purpose to preserve if posible the integrity of his party by the defeat of Gen. Grant at Philadelpeia, believing that there is to much honesty in the Republican party to support him in the financial and jobbing rings and office-holders should succeed in nominating him, and he speaks as a patriot desirous of preserving the honor and the liberty of the Repulic. The speech was deemed so terribly damaging to Grant that his special adherents in the Senate made it the pretext for postponding the adjournment until the 10th instant. Several attempts at reply were made but they were ridiculous and impotent and failed widely of the mark intended.

Sumner and Schurz.

Congress would have been able to adjourn on Monday as per previous arrangement but for the fact Messrs. Sumner and Schurz occupied the whole of Friday in electioneering speeches, bitterly abusive of President Grant, thus wasting the whole day, which was needed for public business. This has been the occupation of these two men all the session. Thus they discharge the duty of American Senators!—Indianian.

If it is not the duty of Senators to expose corruption and peculation, if it is not their province to tell the people of the frauds being perpetrated by the dishonest officials who now have control of the Government, then we do not know where their duty comes in. Morton can go to the office holders Convention, at Philadelphia, and make a harangue about the war, and eulogize Grant without the least objection being made, but when the greatest statesman of their party rises up and warns the people, exposing the rottenness of the Administration, a great howl is made by the Radical press that he is not discharging his duty. Which think you taxpayer, is living up to his oath of office, and serving his country most. Duty, forsooth! That's too thin.

A gentleman met another in the street who was ill of consumption, and accosted him thus:

'Ah, my friend, you walk very slow indeed?'

'Yes,' replied the man, 'but I am go-

Advertising Voorhees Free of Charge.

For years the name of Dan. Voorhees has been as ratsbane and assafoetida to the Radical press. They have never mentioned him except in connection with the vilest epithets. No speech of his could find a place in their columns except to be travestied and misrepresented. But all is suddenly changed, every seven-by-nine Radical sheet in the whole country is devoting its whole space, (often devoting two or three columns) to the publication of Dan's late effort in the House, in which he assailed Greeley in regular Radical style, and praised Grant, for his Liberal treatment of the rebels.

The probability is that Dan made that speech as an advertising dodge only—to get his name favorably mentioned in the Radical papers. But the avidity with which it is seized upon and published by them as a sweet morsel of comfort, is of the utmost significance.

First, it shows their trembling fear of Greeley and the reform movement; they are eager to use anything in disparagement of them, even the testimony of (to them) so vile a witness as Voorhees.

Second, it shows the speech was made in the interest of Grant, every pertizan of Grant publishes and reechoes it with praise and commendation.

Third, it shows that the "vilest rebel" if he will but help elect Grant, may be forgiven and will be placed in the highest niche of honor in the Radical camp. No matter how red his hands may be with blood of Union soldiers, no questions will be asked, no matter if he was a "red handed traitor," as they have called Voorhees for the last ten years. If he is now "sound on the goose" he can have a place of honor in the columns of their papers and a fat office from the rich places provided to reward the faithful.—South Bend Union.

MANHOOD,

How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

OFFICIAL PAPER of the COUNTY

Local and Miscellaneous.

Pen up your hogs.

Weather very warm.

Teamsters all busy.

Fresh fish are plenty.

A hot summer is predicted.

Hurrah! for the 4th of July.

New houses are going up fast.

The fruit crop promises well.

Good time anticipated on the 4th.

No more small-pox talk can be heard.

The game Base Ball is fast playing out

Horse fies are beginning to make their appearance.

Early vegetables have appeared in market.

Quite a refreshing rain fell on Friday last.

The matrimonial market is 'kinder' dull at present.

Our merchants are doing a thriving business.

House-cleaning is tormenting the feminine mind.

The shady side will soon be the best side to take.

Bricks and mortar are in great requisition just now.

The latest thing in ladies' shoes has buttons on the inside.

The grain fields look fine; the prospects for a fair crop are good.

Sam Puff is preparing for a bower dance on the 4th.

Do not choose your friend by his looks. Handsome shoes often pinch the feet,

The rains of last week successfully laid the dust.

The potato bugs are rallying in force for the coming campaign.

Our schools throughout the county are closing their spring term.

Early 'candle-lighting,' is about played out, for this season.

Why don't some of the Auburn Sunday schools have a pic-nic?

We are in receipt of the annual catalogue, of the Wabash College.

Linen coats are showing themselves.—About time.

Bill Zern played thunder last night—on his accordeon—and done it up grand.

The drays are busy hauling new goods to the different stores.

Our juveniles have organized a Base Ball Club.

The Odd Fellows' building is going up slow. Time.

Our devil says, a Dolly Varden around one's neck isn't bad to take. He knows.

Good weather for young ducks and verdant youths.

Business has been brisk all the week.—On Saturday last our trade immense.

The two most popular females in this section just now are Dolly Varden and Pol Ouaise.

Our post-master is going to put a news room in the building he now occupies.—Just what Auburn is in need of.

Our County Sunday School Convention held a session of two days, at Corunna, last week.

The young lady whose feelings were "all worked up," down street, has ordered a fresh supply.

The thinnest thing out is the Greeley poetry now being published in Republican papers. Its thinner than skim-milk.

Greenbacks and National Currency will be received on subscription to this paper, during the next month. Call early.

Those of our readers, wishing good Ice Cream will find it at Smith & Hare's "Dolly Varden Saloon."

Joe Rainier's trotting colt is improving wonderfully in speed—come and see him, ye that have fast "hosses."

Auburn girls don't go much on the Dolly Varden hat—we have noticed but a very few of them as yet.

The fields have been taken possession of by the worms. It would be well if our farmers would plant worm lozengers instead of corn.

Attention is called to anything that may be found interesting, in to-day's paper.

It should be remembered that occupants are obliged to cut down the noxious weeds in front of their property.

Dunkard meeting at Feagler's corner last week. Dave Mc. shot the steer—it must have been tied to a post.

We saw a young man buy a half bushel of pea-nuts yesterday. He'll have a big drunk on the 4th.

A liberal Oberlim, O., church has nailed above its door, "No Democrat wanted." That sanctuary only prepares for a Radical heaven.

Davenport & Co., have the largest and finest assortment of lead-pencils in the county. If you want one there's the place to go for it.

Who ever heard of a man—under 21 years—shearing a sheep in ten minutes? We have a "bonnie-lassie" here that says he can do it. More blatt!

Any person informing Mr. A. J. Little of the whereabouts of his cow will be paid for their trouble. She's a brindle cow, and has been gone for two weeks.

If you want to hear someting nice, real nice, yes, grand, just walk up Main street and listen to Mike play "Old Dorg Tray," on his "brass band."

The editor started last Monday morning for Indianapolis, to attend the convention Any mistakes occuring in this issue will please be corrected by the reader.

Some man, who has the means, get real mad and put up a building here in which may be a large hall for public use. It will pay.

A young lady remarked, the other day, that she would never carry the name of "Old Maid." We did'nt notice her in particular, but we've got five dollars to bet.

The boys are all ready for a dance on the 4th of July. Several of them have already engaged their ladies. Whose going to take "laughing Nell."

Several citizens have spoken to us about some young man perambulating the streets with a young lady, every Sunday, and wearing his father's clothes—the old man never gets to church.

"Dolly Vardens" are all the rage A little blonde friend of our devil's has one of them, and when she wears it her appearance is so much like a flower garden that she has to hire a small boy, with a brush, to keep the bees away.

Our typo was arrested, by the Marshal on Monday morning last, and then took the 10 o'clock train for Indianapolis. He is a good printer and we hope will be successful in getting employment. Willis, with all thy faults adieu!

The Baker Brothers have made large additions to their bakery, and are now supplying a good article of fresh bread, to their numerous customers. It is cheaper than baking this hot weather, and equally as good.

Hot, sultry, sweltering, melting down into your shoes so that there won't be a grease spot left to tell that you lived and had a being. Stop it by taking one of Davenport's cool sodas.

Those young men that went away on a bum are begining to save their nickels to make up for the expense incurred, and the tailors from whom they got their spring suits will have to wait awhile.

One of our citizens says that he has been puzzling his brain for some time to understand why a certain reprobate of this town was ever created, but he says that he has discovered the reason. Most anybody could who saw him a week ago.

An Illinois man who was lately arrested for obtaining money under false pretenses was discharged on his producing a receipt showing that he had paid his newspapers subscription in advance for thirty-six years.

A little boy accidentally hit one of our sports in the neck with a sour apple, and it intoxicated the poor fellow. We'd tell his name but we're afraid he'll "put a nose on us." He's a great steappin' big fellow, and right on his mus.

The correspondent from this place, that furnishes the Waterloo Press with locals had better attend Sunday school, now and then. The fuss he related in the Courier office was far from being facts of the case.

A man, not a thousand miles from here, attempted to elope with his hired girl, one day last week, but his wife hearing of the arrangement took the girl's place and thus returned her fickle lord to the path of duty. Bully for her.

The Marshal now captures all the hogs he finds running at large, and shuts them up. To get them released an amount sufficient to defray expenses of taken up and keeping must be paid. It makes some of 'em grunt, you bet.

Young ladies who promenade our streets these balmy days on the idea that they are "out to take the sun," must not be understood as referring to that glorious orb "which gives light by day." It's some mother's son they are after.

A young man remarked, the other day, that procrastination was the thief of time. He has an odd way of putting in his time, though. He gets drunk half the time and the other half he takes to get sober.

There was a large crowd attended the Dunkard meeting, on last Friday, at Feagler's Corners. The barn was completely filled, and not a seat could be found—on the fence—within a half of a mile. Dave's steer, you know.

We notice improvements going on all over the village, and a general brushing up and beautifying and renovating of houses and yards. On every hand you will see some house owner helping the good work with his little paint brush or garden tools.

We have learned that the man who was supposed to have been killed by the accident on the Eel River R. R. on Friday, of last week, is likely to recover; his injuries which were supposed to be fatal, not being so bad as was feared.

The shrubbery on the Court House square is doing finely. The start this wet weather has given them will insure their safety when the dry and sultry months come.

The Committee of Arrangements for the 4th of July are making active progress in procuring a Speaker, Bands, Fireworks, etc., and nothing will be left undone to make the coming Fourth one of the greatest gala days in this part of the county.

We have heard three or four ladies remark that leap year so far has been to them fruitless. They seem to be doomed to lives of old maidism. What's the difference, girls, the best motto in the world is, "Paddle your own canoe."

We forgot to mention, last week, that our neighbor, the Kendallville Standard came out in a nice new dress, and makes quite an attractive appearance. The Standard has done nobly for the Democracy of Noble and we feel like encouraging it in the stand it takes.

We have seen no cards, as yet, for a dance on the 4th of July. Some of our neighboring towns would, no doubt, be well patronized if they would have a party of this kind in the evening. Corunna and Sedan, what are you doing? Get your invitation cards at the Courier office.

There was one of our "curly-hared," youths walking up an down an alley, last Sunday, singing

> "I had a dear companion
> But she's gone back on me now."

and his woe-begone visage plainly told that the affliction had reached his heart. Courage, young man, a "faint heart never won a fair lady."

A fight occurred last Monday evening between a professional youth, of this place and Deputy Marshal. The latter got the nose—and we don't care a cent either He is a ratler, and the first man on the spot when any boys get a fighting. Mr. D. don't interfere with any more fights until after the 4th—let your nose get perfectly well.

Our devil was walking down street, the other evening, when he was astonished by seeing a lady and gentleman pulling each others hair, biting, etc. He quickly got a "shellalah," and on approaching the combatants, demaned peace. On seeing that the lady was as willing as the gentleman, he left the party singing, "I know how 'tis myself.

The wild flowers are now decking the fields and woods, and whispering to the passers by their charming prophecies of the coming season of flowers and fruits.—Over the white bells of the blood root and the purple stars of the forget-me-nots wave the yellow blossoms of the sweet birch and the scarlet buds of the maple.

Those boys that are constantly blowing horns around the streets, had better be at home reading or helping their parents at some work. They are annoying, and make a worse noise than a mule. Don't set infront of the office, "blowing your horns," another afternoon. If you do we are inclined to think you'll leave playing a mouth-organ—song, "There's no place like home."

The law says to the county commissioners "if you find a man, applying for license, of average character in the community he is entitled to license." The law does not recognize the dictum of the hair-brained zealot that "no man selling liquor can be of good character." Let the commissioners avoid all lawsuits expensive to the county, without results to justify them.

Fast Type-Setting.—Our foreman, Mr. James E. Fisher, on Wednesday, accomplished the feat of setting 14,630 ems of leaded Brevier, (three columns and a half newspaper measure,) in ten hours. A good day's work, truly.—Niles Independent.

Why, that's not very fast. For some time past we've been short of help and one hand has set up our paper, making three columns a common day's work. Setting two columns in the forenoon and one in the afternoon.

A young man by the name of Boggs, about seventeen years of age, who lived in Green township, Noble county, was killed by a cross bull one day last week. He was in a field in which there were a number of cattle, repairing the fence, and it is supposed in an unguarded moment was pounced upon by the bull and crushed to death. He was quite dead when found by his brother and the infurated animal was still goring him.—Northern Indianian.

Dr. J. B. Casebeer, a very worthy and highly esteemed citizens of Auburn, Ind., was united in marriage, last evening, to Miss S. E. Nycum, one of our fair and accomplished young ladies. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. Marine, at the Berry-st., M. E. Church. After service, the bridal party and friends repaired to the residence of Mr. M. A. Noll, where congratulations were received, and an elegant and bountiful feast was discussed. The Sentinel extends its heartiest wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Casebeer.—Fort Wayne Sen.

A very interesting case of the successful transfusion of blood from one person to another recently took place in Berlin. The patient was a man 28 years of age, who had been poisoned phosphorus having taken a solution of the ignition mass of eight bundles of matches. A transfusion of five hundred of cubic centimeters of blood, which had just been taken from three persons in good health, was affected into a vein of the arm, five hundred of the patient's own blood being at the same time taken from an artery. An improvement in his condition at once set in, and he was able to leave his bed soon afterward.—Bluffton Banner.

Somebody announces in last weeks Kendallville Stankard that the Congressional Convention of this District will assemble in that place on Tuesday, the 25th of June, proximo, for the purpose of putting in nomination a candidate for Congress. The call purports to emanate from the Central Committee, but the Committee was ignorant of its appearance, having been neither directly nor indirectly consulted in regard to it. Why Tuesday was selected, when public sentiment was a unit in favor of Thursday, the 20th, is a mystery known only to the worthy, but peculiarly eccentric, Chairman.—La Grange Standard (Republican).

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH.

We've got it. Not the small-pox, but the Fourth of July on the brain. And we would rather have it there than any place else. We celebrate the coming Fourth in a grand old fashioned manner. This being the only place in the county, we expect every citizen will be in attendance.—A large sum has been donated to defray the expenses. The Angola Zouaves, the finest military company in the country, will be here to participate in the festivals The Butler band is coming, one of the best in the State. Arrangements are being made to get Madame Blanc., the celebrated lady aeronaut, to make an ascention on that day. A fine artillery company will be on hand. John Morgan's cavalry will make their appearance, and like meteor disappear again, and many other features alike interesting and amusing. Don't fail to come.

Tax Levy.—The tax levy for this year has been reduced by the Commissioners to sixty cents on the one hundred dollars valuation. It has been asserted by our political opponents that our county has been assessed more heavily than her neighbors, and Noble County was cited as a case last year, where only thirty cents had been levied. It was a matter of considerable speculation how that county could make such a low assessment and pay her county expenses. It is, however, of easy explanation. They make an assessment for three seperate funds, thus for county purposes, thirty cents on the one hundred dollars valuation; twenty-five centy for assylum purposes, and ten cents for bridge purposes, making in all sixty-five cents, while our county includes all three in one assessment. We make this explanation for the benefit of the tax-payers of the county who have a right to know where, and to what purposes, their money is being applied. Not a cent of it has been disbursed fraudeuently, and no Secor claims have to our knowledge been paid. The question is now if the Secretary of the navy can, as he has, pay out $93,000 fraudulently, what proportion of that amount could a County Treasurer pay out, and how much whitewashing would be necessary to save him from punishment a la Robeson?

The Poor Farm.

We accompanied the County Commissioners in the visit to the Poor Farm, and found everything in a prosperous condition under the administration of Conrad Miller, Esq., the popular superintendent The number of poor in attendance is less than last year, about sixteen of both sexes The farm is a fine one indeed, under an excellent state of cultivation, and receiving yearly many substantial improvements The fields of grain look promising, especially oats and wheat. Mr. Miller and his excellent lady have labored zealously to increase the standard of excellence in every department and their efforts have been crowned with success. The rooms in which the inmates are quartered, were as clean and tidy as hands could make, while the general air throughout the house was that of strict order and cleanliness. The poor seemed comfortable and contented and are doubtless enjoying as much of this world's happiness, as is possible in their condition of life. We feel assured since our visit that this institution is in good hands, and that the greatest industry and economy seem to be the motive power under which it is conducted. Perhaps the finest barn in the county is now nearly completed, under contract at about $1800. Messrs. Culver and Houston, of this place, are doing the work, and a thorough inspection is only necessary to convince one of their entire ability to carry out their part of the contract in a prompt and faithful manner.

The Commissioners were highly gratified at the result, after thoroughly investigating the work, and expressed themselves as entirely satisfied with the exact and honest fulfillment of the contract.—The building is 85 feet long, 40 wide with double barn doors, a horse stable and granery, and large rooms for the storage of grain and hay. There will certainly be cause for mutual congratulations between contractors and their employers over the successful and satisfactory prosecution of the work.

Commissioners' Proceedings.

The County Commissioners met in their June session, Monday June 3d, and trasacted the following business.

A petition was presented by S. S. Halbrook for the locating of a road in Butler township. Viewers appointed, Rester Shaffer, Saml. Cornell, and John D. Darcer..

Petition by John H. Pile and others for location of a road in Union township.—Viewers appointed, Joshua Feagler, Henry A Shull and Peter Grogg.

Viewers report favorable for location of road in Butler township, on petition of G. S. West. Notice of appeal filed by E. Work.

Viewers report unfavorable for location of road in Butler township. Report confirmed.

Viewers report favorable for vacation of private road in Stafford-tp.

John C. St. Clair was appointed inspector of Waterloo precinct and Jas. M. Goetschius for south precinct of Richland township.

It was ordered that the railroad tax in the hands of the Treasurer be paid over to the Fort Wayne, Jackson and Saginaw Railroad on receipt of certificates of stock for the full amount.

An allowance of fifty dollars was made to fix curbing on west side of court yard.

John Heble was granted liquor license.

The End of the World in 1872.

It is predicted by French astronomers, as a scientific fact, that the earth will cease to revolve on axis—will burst, burn or tumble to pieces—will come to an end the coming fall. And strangely enough the learned men of Italy predict the end at the same time, differing only in asserting the destruction will be caused by fire The prophesiers maintain that an inconceivably immense subterranean fire is now consuming the bowels of the earth; and refer to the recent falling in of the earth's surface near Vesuvius, and the changed appearance of the matter vomited from the crater as proof positive of their theory Coming from sources—including some of the greatest students in the world—the prediction is at least worthy of a consideration.

FOURTH OF JULY.

The late hour of receiving the proceeding of the meeting of our citizens to perfect arrangements to celebrate appropriately the coming Anniversary of our National Independence, prevent us in giving the detail such as committees, &c, &c. However we give a list of the offices chosen, and would add that everthing bids fair that the effort will prove a success.

President of the day Dr. J. H. Ford.

VICE PRESIDENTS.

John Grube, Butler township; Edward Freeman, Jackson; Robt. Culbertson, Concord, B. F. Blair, Newville; C. R. Wannemaker, Stafford; Jas E. Rose, Wilmington; Jno. L. Davis, Auburn; J. A. Boozer, Waterloo; Jas M. Goetchius, and Dr. Wm. M. Mercer, Richland; Emanuel Neidig, Fairfield; Rev. Edward Barker, Smithfield; Thos Kelly, Franklin; Saml Learned, Troy.

Marshal, Col. S. DeLong.

Assistants, Dr. J. A. Cowan, J. N. Chamberlain, Perry Allen, Frank Bacon, Geo. Hough, A. F. Pinchin, Sol Barney.

The Committee of Arrangemet, Orator, Reader, Speaker, Balloon, Half Fare, correspondence, &c., &c., are expected to act diligently, and report at an early day.

There is to be celebrations all about us the coming 4th of July; each one place trying to outdo the other and make the day the most magnificent and successful at their place. Angola had her Independence celebration one year ago, and one that proved a perfect success, and we predict the same good fortune to our neighbors. Many of our citizens will take part, at different places, in the celebrations of the day. The Angola Zouaves will go to Auburn, and assist the Auburnites in their festivities; the Angola Silver Cornet Band will lead the day at Reading, Mich; Freygang's celebrated String Band will play for the Independence Ball, to be given at the Reading House, in Reading, Mich. There will be an independence Dance at this House on the night of July 3d and during the next day, and during the next day, and those who do not attend the night before, can have the prixilege of dancing all day, and be accommodated by the gentlemanly landlord Mr. Albert Benjamin, to every luxury necessary to the comfort of all.—Angola Republican.

MARRIAGES,

ROSE—ALDRIDGE—At the residence of Mr. William Blair, May 26th, 1872, by the Rev. Mr. Shaffer, Mr. James E. Rose to Miss Ellen D. Aldridge all of Butler, DeKalb County, Indiana.

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York:

"Messrs. Rothschild & Bros., proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No, send them on at once as we intend to give our customers the benefit of it.

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 25 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men have now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of 1872. We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at those astonishingly low prices. Remember the place

Wool being worth from 80 to 85c, woolen goods must advance. The popular Red Front Clothing men have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 30 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction guaranteed, they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods, and low prices that none dare to compete with.

ARE YOU GOING WEST.

If so take our advice, and purchase your tickets over the old reliable Missouri Pacific Railroad, which is positively the only line that runs three daily express trains from St. Louis to Kansas City and is the only line which runs Pullman's Palace Sleepers and fine Day Coaches especially for movers] equipped with Millers Safety Platform and the patent steam brake, from St. Louis to Kansas City, Fort Scott, etc., without change. For information in regard to time tables, rates, etc., to any point, call upon or address I. G. WHEELER, Agent, Missouri Pacific R. R. 72 Lloyd St. Buffalo, N. Y.; or, E. A. FORD, Gen'l Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo. No trouble to answer questions.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it he will send a copy of the prescription used, [free of charge], with directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, &c. Love.

Love is one ov tha pashuns, and the most difficult one ov all tew deskribe.

I never yet hev heard love well defined.

I hav read several deskriptions ov it, but they were written by those who were in love (or thought they waz,) and I wouldn't believe such testimony, not even under oath.

Almost everybody, sum time in their life, has bin in love, and if they think it is an easy sensashun tew deskribe, let them set down and deskribe it, and see if the person who listens to the deskripshun will be satified with it or not.

I waz in luv once miself for 7 long years, and mi friends all said I had the consumpshun, but I knu all the time what ailed me, but couldn't deskribe it.

Now all that i kan rekolekt about this luv sikness is, that for those 7 long years i waz, if enny thing, rather more of a konfirmed phool than ordinary.

Luv is an honorabal disease enuff tew hev, bekauze it iz natral; but enny phellow who has laid sik with it for 7 long years, after he gets over it, feels something like tha phellow who fel on the ice, dont want to talk ov it.

Greeley's Ratification Meeting.

New York, June 4.—The Greeley ratification meeting was great as well in numbers as in the character of its engineers. The great hall in Cooper's institute, was packed, and the square, far down to the Mercantile Library building, was filled with enthusiastic Greeley men. In the great hall Gen. John Cochrane presided. An unpremeditated side-show was the burning of a roof in Fourth Avenue, set on fire by the rockets. After a speech from Tipton, of Nebraska, Jas. R. Doolittle took the stand and not only predicted the nomination of Horace Greeley in Baltimore but pronounced that nomination inevitable, and declared his belief that the ticket would be elected by an overwhelming majority. A speaker on one of the open-air stands, attempted to describe the Baltimore convention in advance thus: "They will call the roll of the States in the old-fashioned way," said he, "begining with Maine, and all will vote for Greeley down to Pennsylvania, whose vote all will await with breathless interest. Pennsylvania will vote for Greeley, and New York will rise and hail her. Then the bal'oting will go on down to Indiana, and when she votes for Greeley, Missouri will arise and cheer the vote, then the rest will go through with the rush of the whirlwind." This was the only speech that developed any thing new.

A Fight With an Anaconda.

A day or two ago, Mr. Abraham Hart, having rented the building on the north east cornr of Woodward avenue and Woodbridge street, went into the cellar for the purpose of clearing out a mass of rubbish that had accumulated there during several months while the premises had been occupied. As he reached the foot of the stairs, with a shovel in his hands, the first object he encountered was a monstrous anaconda, coiled and evidently just prepared for an assault. Harts instinctive purpose was to bolt and leave his snakeship monarch of the cellar, but fearing that he might not be able to effect a successful retreat, he boldly stood his ground. Using the shovel as a weapon he met the snake's onslaught pluckily and soon succeeded in vanquishing his foe by a few blows with the sharp edges of his handy weapon. The snake was subsequently found to measure about twelve feet in length and six inches in its largest part. Its presence there is explained by the fact that last fall the building was occupied by a side show, and the proprietor, thinking the anaconda dead, threw it into the cellar. It turned out, however, that it was only torpid, and came out in the spring as lively as a cricket and fierce enough to attack anything palatable, from a rabbit to an elephant.

The Moral of Othello.

When John Q. Adams was President, he was traveling "incog" through New York State and never having seen Chancellor Kent, concluded to give him a call. He reached his house quite late in the eavening, and without sending ud his name was ushered into the library where the Chancellor was busy reading. He looked up from his book, requested his unknown visitor to be seated, and resumed his reading. After looking around for a few minutes the President addressed the Chancellor and the following conversation ensued:

'I see you have a great many books here,' said the President.

'Yes.'

'I see you have Shakespear,' said the President, 'have you ever read it?'

'Yes.'

'Do you know the moral of Othello?'

'Certainly; evry one knows the moral of Othello,' said the Chancellor.

'Well, what is it?' said the President.

'Why, to beware of jealousy, &c.'

'No, sir, you are wrong.'

'What is it then?' said the Chancellor.'

'The moral of Othello,' said the President, 'is, that a white women must not marry a black man.'

At a doctrine so novel, and a moral so original, the Chancellor conclubed that his visitor was an escaped lunatic, so he ran to the door, shouting: 'William! William! (his son) come up here, there is a crazy man in my room.'

As soon as John Q. could sufficiently control his laughter to speak he introduced himself, and the Chancelor then had some doubts as to his own sanity.

At a recent examination of one of the schools in Washington, the question was put to a class of small boys:

Why is the Connecticut River so called? when a bright little fellow held up his hand.

Do you know James?

Yes, ma'am; because it connects Vermont and New Hampshire and cuts through Massachusetts! was the triumphant reply.

The pricking sting of a bee we do not understand, the pricking of larger things we are well acquainted with.

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

VOLLMER'S Elixir of PYROPHOSPHATE OF IRON AND PERUVIAN BARK.
In this preparation are combined the valuable properties and virtues of Peruvian Bark, with Phosphorous and Iron, in the shape of Pyrophosphate of Iron. This Elixir will be found of great advantage in Dyspepsia, Indigestion, weak and delicate Stomachs, and generally in weak and delicate states of the system.
The ingredients in this Elixir areskillfully blended into a delightful Cordial, making it the most agreeable and palatable combination to the taste, in use.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.
Such is the policy of the Burlington route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific roads. 2d, to Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with railroad lands and homesteads. 3d, to St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.
The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleeper's, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the west. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific roads, be sure that you go "By Way of Burlington."

A Fight with an Anaconda.

A day or two ago, Mr. Abraham Hart having rented the building on the north east corner of Woodward avenue and Woodbridge street, and went into the cellar for the purpose of clearing out a mass of rubbish that had accumulated there during several months while the premises had been unoccupied. As he reached the foot of the stairs, with a shovel in his hands, the first object he encountered was a monstrous anaconda coiled and evidently just propared for an assault. Harts instinctive purpose was to bolt and leave his snakeship morarch of the cellar, but fearing that he might not be able to affect a successful retreat, he boldly stood his ground. Using the shovel as a weapon, he met the snaks onslaught pluckily and soon succeeded in vanquishing his foe by a few blows with the sharp edges on his handy weapon. The snake was subsequently found to measure about twelve feet in length and six inches in its largest part. Its presence there is explained by the fact that last fall the building was occupied by a side show, and that the proprietor, thinking the anaconda dead, threw it into the cellar. It turned out that it was only torpid, and came out in the spring as lively as a cricket and fierce enough to attack anything palatable, from a rabbit to an elephant.—Detroit Free Press.

Spreading Mud.

STEVE MYERS was a jolly old dog, and many a good joke have we had with the fellow.

His wife, Nancy was not a woman of the sweetest temper, and has been known to scold him when he got extra drunk.

One night he had been having a 'royal time with a few of his boon companions, and when he at last started for home, he was in a very 'salubrious' condition. Not drunk—oh no Steve despised (hic) a man who got drunk.

A party of us had gone ahead of him and had rubbed a little grease on the knob of the door—just enough so that he would not notice it and yet keep him from opening the door.

Steve got along somehow to his house; and on the stoop, after two or three efforts, and took hold of the knob.

What'n thunder ails this (hic) door?

O, I know what's up. Jack (hic) Nickct's inside halding it. Ho, ho; my (hic) boy, I'll fix you.

He pitched down the step, and out to the gutter, and filled both hands with soft, black mud, and succeded in getting back to the door—holding his hands behind him.

Now, Jack, (hic) my boy, I waits here till you opens that door, if it's morning

I'll teach you to keep Steve Myers out of his own house.

Nancy heard a noise, and looking out she saw him standing there, and at once came to let him in.

Steve made one dive when the door was opened and the way he spread the mud over Nancy's face and neck for a few minutes was frightful.

We will not mention what took place when he discovered the difference between Jack Nicket and Nancy.

The Troy Times, a reliable Grant organ presents the following analsis of General Grant's character:

'Grant is not in the habit of running wild after speculative crotochets Grant is practical. Grant is tolerant, Grant trusts absolutely only those whom he knows to be trust worthy. Grant is reserved. Grant is resolute. Grant reflects before he acts. Grant is modest in the expression of his opinions.'

We are almost willing to endorse this entire analysis and give our reasons for so doing. As for instance:

1. 'Grant is not in the habit of running wild after speculative crotchets. Of course not: he has a surer thing on Sereca sand stone.

2. 'Grant is practical.' This is demonstrated by the historical fact that on a salary of $25,000 per annum he has saved more than $100,000 a year.

3. 'Grant is tolerant.' Of course he is. He tolerates thieves in every department of the public service and 'that's the way money goes.'

4. 'Grant trusts absolutely only those whom he knows to be trustworthy.' As for instance, look at Murphy, Casey, Leet and Stocking.

5. 'Grant is reserved.' He is not only 'reserved' but 'reserving' In proof of which consult his bank book.

6. 'Grant reflects before he acts.' All of which is true; otherwise he would not have accepted shares in the Seneca stone quarry.

7. 'Grant is resolute.' No one disputes this. He resolved to appoint all of his relatives to office, and kept that resolution.

8. 'Grant is modest in the expression of his opinion.' Being very economical in opinions, of course, he is very modest in giving them publicity.

After reading the above analysis of Grant's character, we are forced to acknowledge that he is the best man—to defeat, now before the American people.—Pitt Post.

Accepatable Prayer.

See here my brother, do you rememper how often it has occured to you when you warmed up in prayer, threw off your embarrassment, and had an easy happy flow of language, that you were now doing very finely in your positions, and that God was giving special audience to your unfettered utterance. Now, just take a scond thought and remember that all one's easy happy flow of language usualy indicates but little, and that in its self it is nothing in the hearing of God. Remember that it is the honest heart. the upright and obedient, that are essential to acceptable prayer. If your heart and life are right, your most stammering utterance shall prevail with God.—If your heart and life are wrong in God's sight, your tongue of eloquence will be only babbling and mockery in the ears of the Almighty. Never, then, congratulate yourself upon liberty in prayer till you are convinced that that prayer went from a heart honest cincere, and wholly given up to love and serve the Lord.

A Norwich, Connecticut, lady has started for the Sandwich Island to marry a man whom she met just twenty years ago and with whom she had been in corresspondence for fifteen years, not once seeing him during that time, while he wooed and won her. Not very ardent, truly.—They have been too long about it.

Sixteen Reasons Why.

The following are the sixteen reasons why Grant should not be nominated for the presidency, which appeared in the early part of the campaign of 1868. It was openly charged at the time that Colfax was the author of them, and, although this was denied by his friends, yet the source to which they were traced seemed to leave little doubt that at least they were published with his knowledge and consent, if not directly inspired by him.—Four years experience has not diminished but on the contrary has greatly enhanced the weight which should be given to many of these reasons why Grant should not be our next president, and we predict that many 'American Republicans' will more carefully consider them now than they did four years ago:

Sixteen reasons why our republican party should not run General Grant for President in 1868.

1. Because he already has all he deserves at the hands of the American people.

2. He could not deliver an inaugural address

3. No Democrat has succeeded for the past quarter of a century as president of the United States.

4. Because at this peculiar period in the history of our great country, we need an able and experienced statesman at the White House.

5. Because 100,000 graves and 4,000,000 freedmen demand a Republican president.

He is now and always has been a Democrat, and has never endorsed the Republican party.

7. Because he has proved a failure in every capacity outside of the military.

8 He claims to have no knowledge of politics or national affairs.

9. Because all the Democratic and rebel papers indorse him.

10. He has followed our drunken Democratic Johnson in all his rebellious rows against congress and the Republican party.

11. He has insulted the Republican party by indorsing the removal of the secretary of war, and accepting the position himself.

12. We have one hundred better men for president.

13. All parties claim him as belonging to their party.

14. We have the power to elect a statesman if we wish to.

15. The Democrats and rebels have no other available candidate.

16. Because Illinois gave us the immortal Lincoln, and Indiana offers our most available candidate.

AMERICAN REPUBLICANS.

The New Methodist Bishops

Two of the newly-elected Bishops of the M. E. Church are from Ohio—Messrs. S. M. Merrill and W. L Harris. Bishop Harris is a native of New York, and has just entered his fiftyfifth year. The greater part of his life has been spent in Ohio and in the West. A considerable portion of his early service for the church was passed in in the itinerancy, in which he was a successful laborer.

Bishop Merrill is a native of Ohio, born in Brown county and has been twenty-seven years a preacher in the church. His ministry has been all or nearly so, in southeren Ohio and Northern Kentucky. He has been editor of the Western Christian Advocate of Cincinnati during the last four years.—During the last twelve years preceeding his election to that position in 1868 he most of time acted as a presiding elder.

R. S. Foster was born in Kentucky, and came from the Ohio Conference to New York. He was appointed pastor of the mulberry street, church. He was afterward elected President of the Northwestern University, but resigned that position and returned to New York, where he served as pastor of the Washington square. eighteenth street and other churches. Dr. Foster is about 50 years of age and has been known in New York for a quarter of a century.

Thomas Bowman is a native of Pennsylvania, of Methodist parentage. He graduated from Dickinson in 1837, and entered the Baltimore Conference in 1839 in 1859 he was called to the presidency of the Indiana Asbury University, where he has remained until the present time. He is a preacher of the first-class and entirely eschews the use of notes in the pulpit.

Bishop Wiley was born in the State of New York and at the early age of twenty-one was sent to Foochow China as a mishionary. After twelve years of service he returned home and took charge of a Female College in New Jersey. In 1864 he was elected to the editorship of the Ladies' Repository at Cincinnati, which position he now holds. The Bishop has been recognized as a leader in all movements in the interest of the education in the M. E. Church

Beecher, some time since, received a letter from a young man who recommended himself very highly as being honest, etc., and closed with the request:

'Get me an easy situation that honesty may be rewarded' To which Mr. Beecher replied:

'Don't be an editor if you would be easy Don't try law. Avoid school keeping.—Keep out of the pulpit. Let alone all ships, stores, shops and merchandise. Abhor politics. Keep away from lawyers.—Don't practice medicine. Be not a farmer nor a mechanic; neither a soldier nor a sailor. Don't study. Don't think. Don't work. None of them are easy. O, my honest friend, you are in a very hard world! I know of but one real 'easy' place in it. That is the grave.

THE CITY COUSIN.

BY S. ANNA FROST.

'I wish she would stay at home!—That's what I wish,' said Roger Harlan, laying on a pile of sweet scented hay, and kicking his heels vigorously as he spoke, 'Who wants a fine city miss here, with her airs and graces, spoiling of our fun? Sick, too! I suppose she'll go into fainting fits if a pig grunts, and have hysterics if the cows look at her crossways.'

'She'll be afraid to move with her finery,' said Bob.

'Mamma says she's a dear little girl, said Mary, with rather a louder voice than usual, 'and she has been very sick, so the doctor is sending her to the country. It will be real mean if you boys are not good to her.'

'There's John getting out the horse to go to the station,' cried Roger. 'I mean to ask him to take us.

So it happened that when little Lucy Harland arrived at the railway station she found an escort of three cousins and her uncle's hired man waiting for her. Roger nudged Bob, and rolled up his eyes at the sight of the neat, stylish traveling dress, the dainty little hat and boots, gloves and parasol, but after all, the white, thin face and delicate look of the visitor. Even Mary was rather awed as she gave a glance at her print dress, and stout, dusty boots. The ride home was not very lively. Lucy was tired and longing for rest, and thought her cousins rather noisy and rude, as they laughed and talked on the back seat, leaving her to the care of James, the hired man.

As the days wore away, the young folks seemed to have no feeling in common, and Lucy grew very home sick in spite of her aunt's kindness and her uncle's hearty welcome. The other children, who knew nothing of sickness them selves, could not understand that it was weakness that made Lucy languid and unable to romp and play as they did, and made fun of her fine lady airs when she sat wearily watching their boisterous games. Her favorite resort was a little loft over the barn, where she read story-book, dressed her doll, and often cried bitterly for home and mama. But she was gaining health slowly in the pure country air, and with the simple wholesome food; and her mother only read her aunt's descripton of her thin cheeks getting red and rosy, her step lighter, and her eyes brighter, and did not guess how lonely her little daughter was, even with three cousins in the same house.

'I'm going to play lady Lucy a trick,' said Roger one morning, as he sat with his brother and sister, in the barn—'She's up in the loft moping, too good to play with us. I'm going to take away the ladder; then she can't get down, and we'll keep her up there at dinner time.'

'She can come down the trap-door stairs,' said Bob.

'But she won't, she's afraid of the oxen, and they're all in to-day. Catch her coming down among the cattle!—She'd stayed up a week first.'

'But can you unhook the ladder at the top?'

'Yes, indeed; Bob can study it.—Come along.'

Ready for any kind of mischief, Bob and Mary followed their brother's lead and were soon standing at the foot of the ladder leading to the loft. It was steadied at the top by two iron hooks, and Rodger mounted the steps to unfasten these, while the others stood below, and Lucy looked up with startled eyes, wondering what new torment her cousins had contrived for her. The first hook was unfastened. Roger's whole weight was on one corner of the ladder; but the other hook gave way without his assistance, and the heavy ladder swung round then fell carrying the boy to the ground with a sickening crash.

Lucy gave one startled cry, and ran to the trap-door. No thought of the dreaded cattle stopped her, and she was beside Rogor before the others realized fully the accident.

'Run for your mother May! Bring me some water, Bob! Lift the ladder off his foot, she cried, sitting down by the senseless boy, unheeding her delicate dress.

'Mother and father are both out, and all the men are at the five acre lot,' sobbed May.

Bob had brought the water, and Lucy bathed the white face with her handkerchief loosening the collar like a woman with quick coolness.

'Bob where is there a doctor? Can you go for one?

'Yes. It's only a mile.'

Here Rodger opened his eyes, moaning:

'Oh! my leg! my leg! My leg is broken!'

'May, sit here and hold his head, while I get his boot off'

By this time Bob's shouts and May's cries had attracted the attention of some of the men on the farm, and two or three came running to see what was the trouble.

One started for the boy's mother, one for a doctor, and one lifted Roger in his arms and carried him to the house; while Lucy, to Mary's utter horror, crept into the barn and fainted away on the hay.

She soon revived again and smiled at the tender eagerness of her tormenting cousins, who had drenched her with water, and were adding to the moisture by crying over her.

By the time she had gone to her room and changed her clothes, Roger was in the doctor's hands with his mother to watch him.

The leg was broken, and it was many long weeks before he could walk. But in the long, tiresome days, when he was a close prison, the boy learned to love and respect the cousin, whose timid gentleness he had so despised. It seemed to him, in his patience, as if she had numbered every rude trick, every ill-natured speech, to repay it with some loving, thoughtful act to cheer his sick room If he was in pain or feverish, her soft little hands bathed his face and mixed cool, pleasant drinks for him. She learned to nurse him, and no touch was so light and soothing to his injuries as Lucy's. As he grew better, it was Lucy who sat hours beside him, reading her story books, teaching him games, telling him games, telling him of the wonderful sights to seen in her city, and showing now to employ his clumsy fingers in various amusing occupations.

'Lucy, where did you learn all these things,' he asked, one day, when he had mastered a wonderful combination of past and paper.

'You know I was sick for a long time before I came here,' she said gently, 'I had some trouble in one leg when I was a baby, and there was an operation performed about a year ago Mamma taught me some of the games and my brothers were always very kind about learning me what they thought would please me. One reason I cannot run and walk, as you my cousins do is because I only learned to step a year ago.'

'What brutes you must think us!' cried Roger. 'It makes me hot all over to think how I treated you! I, worst of all!'

'Never mind!' I am coming next summer. I may be stronger then.'

'If you are not, I will carry you about in my arms. You shan't have to hide away in a loft again.'

And Roger will keep his word. Lucy left him still a prisoner in his room when she returned home in the fall; but her gentle influences will not soon be forgotten, and the Harlands think no pleasure so great now as the promised visit next year from their city cousin.

A Hotel to cost $20,000,000 is proposed in Chicago. It will be constructed entirely of iron, ten stories in hight, and will cover four entire blocks, with grand arches over the intervening streets. Bazars are to ocupy the first story and elevators at evrey corner. It is intended that the rates will be from $10 to $1 per day, according to the story, so that people of limited means, as well as those possesing wealth, can be accomodated in elegant style.

Drowning of an Aeronaut.

Prof. Atkins, attached to Lipman's Queen City circus, which exhibited at Decatur, Ala., on the 27th ult., ascended with a hot air balloon during the afternoon. The balloon became detached from the windlass fixing its latitude and ascending half a mile, when it rapidly decended into the Tennessee river. Atkins succeeded in getting out of the basket after a desperate effort, having got entangled in the ropes, and attempted to swim to shore. A fisherman in a canoe went to his assistance, but failed to rescue him.—The unfortunate aeronaut sank and was drowned. His corpse has not been discovered. The balloon was saved. Atkins seems to have had a presentiment of misfortune. He remarked, as the balloon started, "this is my last ascention."

AUBURN, IND., JUNE 20, 1872

THE STATE CONVENTION.

We give most of our space to-day to the proceedings of the largest and most harmonious Convention ever assembled in Indiana.

The ticket nominated has inspired confidence in every locality, and to day we unfurl to the breeze the Democratic banner with the names of Hendricks and DePauw thereon, in response to the demand of the people for political reformation. By this ticket the people are assured, that if elected, as it is now generally conceded, they will have an honest, economical and intelligent administration of public affairs. The platform embodies all the present issues of the day and is fairly committed to the best interests of the people. There is no equivocal declarations or generalities, but a fair, candid and open expression upon the vital questions which enter so largely into the public welfare.

On the question of joining the different elements of strength in the movement to dethrone the present corrupt administration, by the defeat of Grant and his minions the Convention was equally emphatic, And how could it well be otherwise when thousands of Republicans stand ready heart and hand to assist in the great work of renovation and to renounce their allegiance to the party of corruption and fraud. When such men as Hendricks and Julian and McDonald and a legion of other of our best citizens, are standing at the helm of the movement to-day, surrounded by enthusiastic supporters all over the State, shall we not march up in one solid phalanx for the Baltimore nominees on the broad and comprehensive platform, adopted at Cincinnati. Men are nothing, principles everthing. If Greeley is nominated at the Baltimore Convention do we support him as an abolitionist, an advocate of protection tariff, or as an opponent in some of the great issues of the past now forever settled? We answer, No! There is nothing as yet that has been found objectionable to the Democracy in the Cincinnati Platform. The question of slavery has been settled, and forever. General amnesty has been demanded and the nominees stand fairly committed to its immediate provision. The tariff question has been set aside to be disposed of by the immediate representatives of the people, in Congress assembled, and all the other planks are but a reiteration of the great Democratic principles which we have held to, as a party, so long and to which we can still cling with an abiding faith, in the great battle of honesty against corruption.—Shall we array ourselves like men, in unison with the former, stand shoulder to shoulder with the good all classes and parties, and without relinquishing one jot of our principles, once more free our nation not of four millions of black, but of sixteen millions of white slaves now foot sore, and weary under the miserable despotism of a peverted office holders administration?

This is the only question before us When Greeley is named it is in this connection only—that having seen the terrible chasm into which we are drifting under the present mal-administration of Grant, he has proposed to step forward from under party lash, occupy common ground with all who know of the reeking corruption that now exists throughout all the ramifications of public affairs and fight the enemy there without reference to former party affiliations or to the questions that do not assimilate with the present good of the country There is nothing, then, in the movement but what every true Democrat can endorse, while there are many features that appeal to intelligence and understanding in the preservation of our great republic from the canker of theives and robbers that are now drinking up its life blood. For our part we have placed our shoulder fairly to the wheel and not a moment from now till next November will be let in giving it strength, by every fair and honorable means, believing that it is the only chance now offered of relieving our government of the woe and misery that would be entailed upon us in the re-election of the present ignorant and bigoted President. We believe this will be the action of all true Democrats everywhere, and with the exception of a few whose ideas have long stood out with the principles of the party, the Democracy will rally once more and triumph in the grand expulsion from office, of every theiving corruptionist in the country.

Let us have peace of a different kind from that which a military President has given us and this can only be accomplished by a faithful support of the

BALTIMORE NOMINEES.

Democratic State Convention!

Harmony and Enthusiasm.

HENDRICKS for GOVERNOR.

Greeley and Brown Endorsed.

The Indianapolis Journal, a Radical sheet of the very worst kind, says that no delegate Convention has ever been held in that city, more respectable in numbers and composition than that which met last Wednesday. It was a magnificent spectacle indicative of the power and strength of the Democratic party in Indiana to day. The harmony and unaminity of its action throughout, together with the excellent ticket nominated, has struck terror to the hearts of the Radicals, and on every hand, there is a disposition to concede its triumphant election next October. Col. E. S. Alvord, the Chairman of the Central Committee, called the meeting to order, and on his motion, Hon. J. R. Coffroth, of Lafayette, was elected permanent Chairman with a Vice President and Secretary for each congressional District.

Mr. Coffroth thanked the Convention for the honor confered, but declined making a lengthy speech, as there was much business before the Convention

A resolution was then offered by the Hon. J. E. McDonald, that the selection of an Electoral ticket should be postponed, until after the Baltimore Convention, so that it could be formed more in accerance to the crisis, which was adopted.

The delegates to the Baltimore Convention were then selected, which will be found in another place. The nomination of Governor being next in order Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks was nominated by acclamation, amid the wildest of excitement, the delegates being all on their feet even before the President could put the motion.

For Lieutenant Governor, Washington C. DePaw, of Floyd, was nominated on the first ballot, and afterwards unanimous.

The nominee for Governor (Mr. Hendricks) beieg noticed in the hall, long, loud and persistent shouts were given for "Hendricks," "Hendricks," "Hendricks." In the midst of much confusion, many members of the Convention rising and waving their hats and handkerchief, the committee appointed for that purpose escorted Mr. Hendricks to the front of the stage, Hon. Joseph E. McDanald saying: "Gentleman—I now present to you your nominee for Governor." At the instance of a delegate, three cheers were given for its nominee.

Mr. Hendricks, when the applause had somewhat subsided, said:

Gentlemen of the Convention: until yesterday morning I had no thought of becoming the nominee of this convention. Day before yesterday, that evening, and yesterday morning I was appealed to by gentlemen whose appeals I could not deny, so that finally I gave my consent, and I now accept your nomination. [Cheers] I beg you to understand, and that you will make it known to the men you represent, that my hesitution in accepting the nomination has been because of personal reasons and considerations, and not because of any want of appreciation of the dignity and importance of the office to which you have nominated me. To be the first executive officer of the great State of Indiana is no common honor, and to be selected thus as a candidate for that office by the representatives of the men of this State, I consider it one of the hiegst honors, that has ever been confered upon me.

Indiana, before the close of the next Gubernatorial term, will contain a population of nearly two milions of people and their resources will have been more fully developed; and I contemplate the responsibility of the execution of the laws which affect the interest of such a vast number of people with diffidence and deep concern. Always the position of State Governer is one of importance and responsibility, but in these times greater than ever, now that the rights and powers of the State are being attacked and invaded by a central power, is that the people shall no longer have a domestic fire side government for the protection of their home interests. The office of the executive of the State is of still greater importance. The state of Indiana, should I be elected your Governor, must all the time, as far as my influence is concerned, maintain a friendly attitude and relation towards the Federal Government; but at the same time al' the rights and powers of government which are reserved to the State of Indiana by the Constitution of the United states, must be respected—every one of them. [Shouts of applause in the midts of which a voice was heard "That's business."]

Gentlemen we have before us a sad spectacle; the result of interference with State governments. There is States south of the Ohio river, whose control has been taken away from the people, and whose government has been committed to those who have sought to make special and private speculation out of their afflictions.

Those States are now prostrated and in the dust. The frauds that have been perpetrated in these States have increased their indebtedness until now they are in a condition almost of bankruptey, which appeals to the sympathy of the people of Indiana, and when we hear their waiving cry coming to us to give them moral and political support, shall we refuse to respond? [Loud and repeated cries of "no."] [A voice—"Hurrah for Greeley!" Laughter.]

I do not propose to address you at any length but there are one or two subjects to which I will refer. I am in earnest in favor of civil service reform. [Applause] I am in favor of that in the State of Indiana as well as in the general Government. [Renewed applause] I am a little anxious to know whether the people of this country are to be deserved by the supporters of the administration any longer? it has been asserted in the platform lately formed at Philadelphia that the party now in power is in favor of civil service reform. That party for many years has had an opportunity of showing its faith by its wish. Reform has not been brought about. And during the last six months we have beheld at Washington the singular spectacle of a President in formal message to Congress pretended to favor of civil service reform and his leaders in the Senate and House denouncing any man who advocated such reform as a foe to the Administration [Laughter] This Congress will come to a close—the recent session has closed without any sircere and honest effort at reform. Now if the men with whom I am to co-operate now and in the future are sincerely in favor of this reform, let them show it at the October and November election, [Applause] Let every ballot declare that the offices, high and low, shall be held and Administered only for the good of the people. [Applause.]

I believe that my judgment in respect to the proper action of the Baltimore Convention is in harmony with the sentiment of this Connention.—[Cheers.] I desire to see that Codvention discharge its duty well. Very much may depend upon it. I, as your representative in this contest—at least to some extent your representative—will abide by the decision of that Convention. [Applause.] And I believe the deliberation of the Convention will result in such action as will secure a reform in the government of the State of Indiana, and in the government of the United States. [Renewed applause-] I believe from what I see here, and from the rumblings I hear from afar, from the different parts of this country, that the Administration of General Grant will close forever on the 4th of next March. [Cheers and shouts of applause.] And, my countrymen, when you are asked to vote for General Grant the question is not so much whether General grant be re-elected President of the United States, as whether the ring that surrounds him shall control the destinies of this country for four years longer. [Applause and voices "that's it."] He who in October, shall vote the Grant ticket in Indiana, and he who, in November, shall vote for the Grant electorial ticket, is casting a vote for not only General Grant but for Morton, for Chandler, for Conkling, for Cameron, and for Butler. [Applause.] It will be understood sooner or later, and it may as well pe understood now, as at any time that the controversy, is not so much between the man who may be agreed upon at Baltimore and General Grant, as between the Boltimore nominee and the surroundings, of General Grant.

I am not much afraid of a one man power. I am not much afraid when one man shall stand up before this nation and assume the responsibilities of what he may do; but I am afraid of the government of an irresponsible band of men. I am afraid of the power behind that one man—a power held by men not directly responsible to the people. [Applause.] When a President stands up before the people, alone responsible to them for what he does, he must bow to their clearly expressed and well defined judgment, but when he is surrounded by those who make gain and advantage out of his administration by controlig his policy and patronage, and who are premited to approach him early in the morning and late at night. When they govern the people in this way it is a dangerous goverment for any people. [Applause] I want a government of direct responsibility. Let us know who are responsible to us. I think whoever may be elected President next time will feel that he must stand directly before the people, and be personally responsible to them. In the sense in which we have a personal government now, the administration of the nation's affairs is for the benefit of particular individuals and classes; but I think the next President will feel that he must administer public affairs for the good of the people, and that there shall be no other consideration possible than the good of the whole people.

Now gentlemen you have honored me with this nomination, and as far as my health will enable me to do so I will try to make your ticket successful in October. [Applause.] Bear in mind that as Indiana goes in October so Indiana must go in November. [Renewed applause.] I believe I know the result now. I believe I read it in your faces, and know it from the sympathy of my heart with your hearts.—Go to the people and say to them that they must put in nomination in their districts and counties the men who can command the entire support of all persons who oppose the present party in power. [Applause.]

We have this day substantially turned our backs upon the past; we stand in the present and we look forward to the great future. The past is gone. [Applause;] The future is ours. Let the people lay hold of the future and achieve that full measure of prosperity and happiness which it is in their power to secure. [Applause]

At the conclusion of Mr. Hendricks speech there were loud calls for De Pauw, but it was announced that he was not in the city.

John J. Williams, of Lafayette, and Michael C. Kerr, of New Albany, were then nominated for Congressman-at-Large, the first on the first, and the latter on the second ballot.

For Secretary of State Owen M. Eddy, the present Deputy, was nominated.

John B. Stoll received the nomination for Auditor of State.

James B. Ryan, was nominated for State Treasurer, B. W. Hanna, for Auditor General, and Milton B. Hopkins for Superintendent of Public Instruction

E. J. Price, of Sulivan, received the nomination for Supreme Court Clerk, and John C. Robinson, of Spencer County, for Supreme Court Reporter.

The Convention unanimously endorsed the Cincinnati Platform and nominations, and the delegates go to Baltimore instructed.

The following platform was unanimously adopted:

PLATFORM.

Resolved, By the Democracy of Indiana in convention assembled:

That the principles of the Cincinnati Liberal Republican Convention, taken in connection with the propositions contained in Horace Greeley's letter accepting the nomination of that Convention, constitute a platform on which all the elements of opposition to the present corrupt Administration of the Federal Government can stand, and which propositions are as follows:

1. All the political rights and franchises which have acquired through the late bloody convulsions must and shall be guaranteed, maintoined, enjoyed, respected evermore.

2. All the political rights and franchises which have been lost through that convulsion should and must be promptly restored and re-established, so that there shall be henceforth no prescribed class, and no disfranchised caste within the limits of our Union, whose long entranged people shall reunite and fraternize upon the broad basis of universal amnesty, with impartial suffrage.

3. That, subject to our solemn constitutional obligation to maintain the equal rights of all citizens, our policy should aim to local self-government, and not at centralization; that the civil authority should be supreme over the military; that the writ of habeas corpus should be jealously upheld as the safeguard of personal freedom; that the individual citizens should enjoy the largest liberty consistent with public order; and that there shall be no Federal supervision of the internal policy of the several States and municipalities, but that each shall be left free to enforce the rights and promote the well being of its inhabitants by such means as the judgment of its people shall prescribe.

4. That there shall be a real and not merely a simulated reform in the civil service of the Republic; to which end it is indispensable that the chief dispenser of its vast official patronage shall be shielded from the main temptation to use his power selfishly by a rule inexorably forbidding and precluding his re-election.

Resolved, That we regard it as unwise and imprudent to place two tickets in nomination for the office of President and Vice President as the representatives of there principles, as the division of its friends would insure the defeat of both, and it is therefore the fixed conviction of this convention that the Democratic Convention to assemble in Baltimore in July should adopt the nominees of the Liberal Republican Convention, instead of making other nominations for the Presidency and Vice Presidency of the United States.

Resolved, That the delegates appointed from the State to the Baltimore Convention be, and they are hereby instructed to vote as a unit upon all question in accordance with the opinion of a majority of the delegation.

Resolved, That all drainage and other laws by which the owners of property may be divested of their title by arbitary assessments or summary process should be carefully guarded, so as to protect the people from undue oppression, and their property from being taken without just compensation and due process of law; and that all laws contravening these principles should be promptly repealed or modified so as to conform thereto.

WHEREAS, The Union soldiers and sailors, their patriotism and courage in the great rebellion of 1761, preserved the life of the nation and made our public domain valuable; therefore

Resolved, That we demand for each of the living who was honorably discharged, and for the widows or orphans of the dead one hundred and sixty acres, of public lands—not heretofore entered, or given away by a Republican Congress to railroad corporations—to be theirs absolutely, without requiring them to become actual settlers thereon.

Resolved, That justice and equality demand that all soldiers who enlisted in the military service of the country during the war of the late rebellion, and who have been honorably discharged therefrom, shall have a bounty granted to them, by Congress in proportion to the time they may have served, whether that time shall have been for three months or a longer period.

CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

E. S. Alvord (at large), Chairman.
First District—John H. O'Neal, of Daviess.
Second District—John S. Davis, of Floyd.
Third District—Thos. J. Riley, of Jennings.
Fourth District—Finley Bigger, of Rush
Fifth District—Ed. Henderson, of Morgan.
Sixth District—A. D. Lemon, of Lawrence.
Seventh District—F. E. D. McGinler, of Tippecanoe.
Eighth District—James M. Switzer, of Grant.
Ninth District—Wm. C. Fleming, of Allen.
Tenth District—Eli W. Brown, of Whitley.
Eleventh District—Plat. McDonald, of Marshall.

The following letter was presented and raead, from Mr. Julian:

INDIANAPOLIS, July 12, 1872.

A. M. Puett:

DEAR SIR:—I go home this morning, and wish to leave a line for you, to be used if there should be any occasion for it. While I hope the Convention to-day will place some Liberal Republican on the ticket, in order to a more cordial and perfect union against the common foe, I must not in any event be made a candidate for any place. I do not want the position of Congressman at Large, or any other. I want no office whatever, but shall labor for the cause to the extent of my health and strength, and believe I can do more effectually as an independent citizen that I could in the attitude of a seeker of place. Please have this laid before the Convention, if there should be any serious purpose to nominate me.

In haste, yours
GEO. W. JULIAN.

DELEGATES AT LARGE.

The Committee on selection of Delegates at Large here report:

Delegates—Marsh M. Ray, of Marion; James D. Williams, of Knox; Robert Lowry, of Allen; Cayless W. Hanna, of Vigo; D. D Dykeman, of Cass; Dr. G. W. McConnel, of Steuben; Levi Sparks, of Clarke, Horace Carlin, of Marshall, Alternates—Judge Solomon Claypool, of Putnam: Samuel D. Day, of Shelby; Gen. J. R. Foley, of Sullivan; Thomas J. Merrifield, of Porter; John Lee, of Montgomery; M. V. B. Spencer, of Allen; S. S. Schutt, of DeKalb.

Tenth District—Delegates— J. A. S. Mitchell, of Elkhart: J. R. Lanning, of DeKalb.

Alternates—S. E. Alvord, of Noble: Benj. F. Hendricks, of Huntington.

Although at times quite noisy, the Convention was very orderly, considering the immense number of delegates in attendance—nearly 1,600—and the great throng of outsiders. The confusion which ensued at times was not the result of quarreling or wrangling, but rather the overflowing of good humor. The delegates were full of enthusiasm for their respective candidates and exerted themselves to present their claims, to the interruption of the proceedings; but when a vital question was touched there was a hearty unanimity and enthusiasm manifested, the like of which is seldom witnessed in representative bodies.

The result of the Convention must be the awakening of the party throughout the State for such an effort in behalf of the ticket as will swamp all opposition before it.

That is a very pretty custom which has recently sprung up in Boston—we refer to the mission of a society, organized for the purpose of carrying flowers to the work houses and tenements of that city, thereby to cheer up the toiling poor. The daughter of the millionaire takes a bouquet of woodland or hot-house blossoms to the factory-girl. It is a very little thing for the former to do; and yet it shows her sympathy for those who have been less fortunate than herself; while the latter feels that somebody cared for her—that the world is less cold and careless of her welfare than she thought; and the days of labor seem shorter and brighter as she looks at the lilies, pansies, and violets, and pictures a happy future when she will have a home in the country, where the roar and boom of spindles will never drown the music of the world.

How any intelligent Republican who is not blinded by party infatuation, can support for re-election to the Presidency a man whose avarice has been so great that he has merited the apelation of the "National Hog;" a man of whom it is known that he never cared enough for the party principle to vote the ticket, and who has not sufficient information to enable him to form an inteligent political opinion; who is well and universally known to have been a constitutional inebriate before he became President; who is equally well known to have been in a state of unstable equilibrium since his elevation to the position of Chief Executive, and whose sole claims to the suffrages of an enlightened people are based on the fact of his supposed military qualification, is beyond our reach of comprehension.

MANHOOD.
How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

WHY?

Because we sell WALL PAPER cheap, and trim it without extra charge.

Because we keep the choicest Perfumery, Toilet Soap, Tooth and Hair Brushes in town, and sell them cheap. Because we have the finest lot of Writing Paper, Tinted and Initial Paper, Envelopes &c. &c., ever offered in Auburn.

All the children like us, because we have such a fine lot of SCHOOL and BLANK BOOKS and sell such a big slate for such little money.

We don't wish you sick, but if you are so unfortunate, remember the Pioneer Drug Store is the place to get pure fresh drugs and medicines.

THEY MUST GO!

No holding on, if giving goods to people at almost their own prices will do it. We are going out of the trade, and shall, therefore, sell our large and attractive stock of Men and Boy's Clothing, Hats and Caps, Trunks, Valises, Shirts, Men's Furnishing Goods, etc., at

The Auburn Courier
OFFICIAL PAPER of the COUNTY

Local and Miscellaneous.

Our trade is rapidly increasing.

Buildings are going up rapidly all over town.

Boxing gloves are used here considerable.

Going to have a big time on the 4th of July. Of course we are.

We extend many thanks to Frank. Davenport for favors received.

Smith & Hare are making ice cream that's nice.

Go to the post office if you want to see something nice.

Bummers has largely increased since the disappearance of the small-pox.

Lots of pea-nut stands preparing for the Fourth of July.

We are to have School again in a few weeks.

The weather has been quite hot for the past few days.

Arrangements are being rapidly perfected for the celebration on the Fourth of July.

Why can't we play a game of ball, with some of our neighboring clubs, on the Fourth.

We take Austin's Ague Drops for the Ague. They are a sure cure. Only 50 cents.

If you want the best Ague Cure, get Austin's Ague Drops. Sold by all druggists.

Fire-crackers are heard all through the day. The resut will be a runaway, by some high-toned horses

Mike Long & Son has made quite an improvement to their meat market. They can now boast of one of the best shops in the county.

Mary Sprott, of this place, has written out twelve reasons why Greeley is fit for President. They will appear next week. Thus they are coming one by one.

Con Schenck informs us that he intends giving a grand parade dance, at the Rink to-day, at Fort Wayne. He always has everything complete, and these occasions are always pleasant and enjoyable.

Moderwell & Fowler are offering fine bargains in the way of shirts at their popular establishment at Fort Wayne. To get a good fitting shirt at a reasonable price you should give them a call.

Davenport & Co's soda fountain yields forth a most pleasant and refreshing beverage, healthful and invigorating, and a delicious tonic. Remember this when you go along the streets hot and thirsty

Ice cream of a warm sultry evening is certainly one of the greatest luxuries extant. If you want a superb article go to Smith & Har's. A nice pleasant room and gentlemanly waiters add largely to its enjoyment.

The Huntington Democrat goes for Jim Slack and charges him with working into the hands of the Republicans. We never liked him as a Democrat, and don't think he amounts to much any way.

There is a fellow in this town, and he's got a "slapping big nose," and if he don't want his head to correspond, we would advise him to let other peoples business alone. If you can't do this try and tell the truth.

One of our citizens is now absent to secure an aeronaut to make a balloon ascension here on the Fourth of July. If a balloon ascension is advertised, all may be assured that it will take place, as we do not propose to humbug the people by advertising what we have not got.

Several new streets have been opened and graveled already, and the present Town Board are showing some activity and good sense in their administration thus far. We hope they will continue to do so and that all good citizens will aid them in their efforts to built up the place.

Mr. Abright, our popular jeweler, has formed a partnership with Mr. Shepherd, of Carey, O., and in connection with the above business a large stock of all kinds of musical instruments, from a piano down to to a Jewsharp will be for at the lowest rates. Mr. S. is a good musician has had a large experience in the business, and comes among us highly recommended We doubt not the new firm will meet with abundant success.

Come All, Ye People of Old DeKalb and spend One Day in Honor of Your Country's Independence.

Too Let.—The building of two School Houses, in Smithfield Township, at the Trustee's Office in Summit, on Saturday, June 22d, 1872, at 1 o'clock p. m. For further particulars inquire of S. B. Mottinger, Township Trustee.

Jas Harper & Co., of Fort Wayne, are ready to supply all demands for the celebrated Greeley hats. They are becoming quite popular and the white hat appears on every street. They are not so costly as the black, and add considerable in the way of dress.

The Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago road is to be straightened, cutting off Wooster and Loudenville, and running nearly direct from Orville to Mansfield—thus making a saving of twenty miles.—The great rivalry in competing through lines makes the saving of every mile of distance and every dollar of running expense an object.

When Mr. Hendricks came forward on the stand at the Convention, last Wednesday it was not necessary that he should give a pledge that he would not drink any more "meat," as Tom Brown did, when he was nominated. Mr. Hendricks stands far above the average in the purity of his private character, and when a vote is cast for him it is in favor of a man of the highest principles both in private and public life.

The Boston Peace Jubilee is in full blast Just think of 20,000 singers 1,000 inhabitants, artillery and other noisy things, and then congratulate yourself that Boston is a thousand miles away. Bands from Germany, France and England are in attendance. Get up to-night about 12 o'clock, when all is still and possibly you may hear the music, providing they happen to be playing at that time.

The harshest thing that has been said of Mr. Greeley is the remark of a Welsh paper in Scranton, Pa., which actually asserts that "Blpglnly ll Greeley mlfn-dmpi tamppl ypunt scrllgg gp Prllntyl ot gme shx drullizmt begplym writt wemrlz dr guannalt." We never heard Mr. Greeley accused of such scandalous things before, and, if these charges are true, he certainly is unfit to be President of the United States.

Fruit Trees.—Mr. Bailey, dealer in fruit trees, &c., has been in our midst taking orders for some of his choice fruit, and has received quite a liberal encouragement. Our citizens generally will find it to their advantage to purchase of a responsible party, as there are many agents going through the country swindling all they can. Mr. B. says that he will replace all trees which he has furnished if they do not prove satisfactory or happen to die. Farmers may rely on his promises.

Marriage License.—The following marriage license were issued from the Clerk's office during last month.

Jacob Snyder and Eva Snyder.
Michael Homan and S. M. Wolcott.
Albert Frank and Mary Alanick.
Thomas Carr and Susan Turner.
Israel Apple and T. M. Mentz.
Geo A. Bishop and M. M. Silbury
Milford Rogers and Jane Salsbury.
John Shaw and Emma A. McClish.
C. G. Smith and Mary A. Parish.
Wm. Hagurty and Olive Freeby.
James E. Ross and Ellen D. Aldrich.
M. Schoudel and Elisabeth May.
Hiram Allen and Jane Sleppy.
Wm. Kinsey and Lucy J. Pinchin.

Free Fight.—There seems to be a feud existing between the Jackson township boys, and a number of the country bucks from this township, and every time they meet in town a few peanuts are indulged in and they get drunk, and then a fight is sure to follow. Last Saturday two of the beligerents met in mortal combat and there was some bad blood spilt. We have always found it a general rule that when you hit a fellow's nose, the blood will come, and this was the result last Saturday. Jackson is charged with using undecent language to the lady friends of the Union boys, and if such is the case, Jackson ought to have its nose hammered and doubtless will in due time. In the mean time, boys, come to Auburn, eat your peanuts and fight, and we'll see to having you properly fined.

Baltimore & Ohio.—A surveying party in charge of Mr. Curtis passed through our town last Monday, eastward bound on the Baltimore & Ohio line. They commenced the survey of another line at Syracuse in Kosciusko county which passes about a quarter of a mile north of Arvilla, and about the same distance south of Albion. This new line passed our town south of the lower mill, and is only a preliminary survey, the same as the rest. Mr. Curtis informed us that he had no doubt but that work would commence on the line in a short time. We saw Judge Carter, of Defiance, in Fort Wayne last Monday and learned that a promise had been given by the company that the road would be ready to carry freight from Defiance east by the first of next January.

WHO?

The teachers of DeKalb County, doubtless, remember that at the institute held at Butler in the fall of 1870, they were solicited to pay fifty cents each. It was promised those who should pay this sum that they should receive in consideration a catalogue of the members of the institute, their standing in the several branches &c. Over forty dollars were extorted from the teachers in attendance by this promise. But no catalogues were issued. The promise was not fulfilled, somebody pocketed this money. We ask who?

A Teacher.

We learn from the Press that the Directors of the N. E. Indiana Agricultural Association met on Tuesday, June 19, 1872. The subscriptions to stock already made assure the success of the enterprise, although much of the stock is as yet not taken. The Executive Committee reported having purchased 31½ acres of land, lying near Waterloo, on the Holmes farm, for fair grounds. price $3,100, and that the first payment was made, the grounds surveyed, and a one-half mile time track laid out. Their action was approved. The grounds are beautifully located, and there is a never failing spring of water inside of the line. The Executive Committee were empowered and instructed to proceed immediately to fence and fit up the grounds and make all necessary arrangements for a Fair, to be held during the coming fall, probly the 9th, 10th and 11th of October. Those conducting the enterprise evidently mean 'business.' An assessment was made on the stockholders of 33⅓ per cent to be paid within 30 days, 33⅓ per cent. to be paid within 60 days, and 33⅓ per cent. to be paid within 90 days. The Secretary was instructed to collect the assessments, and to procure such assistance as he needed. E. R. Blattner was named as Assistant Secretary, and assessments may be paid to either R. Wes McBride or Mr. Blattner.

From Spencerville.

Editor Courier:

Quite an extensive riot occurred in the north part (called Upper Canada) of our town a few days ago. It happened in this wise: A disagreement had occurred between two belligerent females named, respectfully, Mary and Sally. Now, Mary came to the well of Sally for water, and Sally ordered Mary to leave the premises, but Mary unwilling to leave without her water proceeded to let down the pitcher. This angered Sally still more and she went for Mary, but Mary was a heroine and stood firm to receive the shock and with a flourish of arms exclaimed in the language of Shakespear.

Lay on McDuff
And d——ed be she who first cries hold enough

Now, Mary was more nimble of foot and of greater physical proportions than Sally and Sally was like to go under

So Sally gave her "mouth trumpet" breath
That harbinger of blood and death.

And lo, and behold, two of Sall's female allies appeared on the field of battle Upon the appearance of this reinforcement Mary retreated to the highway and commenced firing chin music at Sally at long range, which was promptly returned by Sally and her allies, interspersed with clubs and brick-bats. The battle was long and hot, but Mary was forced to retreat and leave Sally in posession of the field. I was informed by an eye witness that at the conclusion of the battle that the scen of blood and carnage was unparalleled in modern warfare. The dead were gathered and buried unduer a flag of truce, and the sun shines brightly o'er the graves of the fallen heroines.

Our town is improving slowly. John Lighty & Son are constructing a large and comodious business house 66x24 feet and two stories high, having a very fine hall above the store room. The contract was let to Mr. Henry Milliman, a good and reliable mechanic, who is pushing the work rapidly to completion.

Dr. S. Houghton has also erected a very commodious dwelling house.

Mr. Chanry is also building a dwelling house, which he will have ready to occupy by the first of July, and many other valuable improvements which I will mention in the future.

Reliable.

The DeKalb County Sunday School Association met in its 4th annual convention at Cornonna, Tuesday, June 4, 1872, and was called to order at 10 o clock a. m. by M. B. Willis, President. By a unanimous vote of the delegates, all active Sunday School workers in attendance were admitted as members, and permitted to participate in the deliberations of the Convention. On motion committees were appointed to nominate officers for the ensuing year, and upon resolutions, L. W. Tresh and H. P. Colgrove were elected choristers, and Miss Jennie Hamil organist of the convention. After discussion of the contents of the question drawer and singing, adjourned to 1:30 p. m.

1:30 p. m.—After praise meeting, the subject of uniform lessons was discussed, by several members, all strongly advocating them. Reports of the condition of the schools in the county were then made by delegates present, it appearing from the reports that the schools were, without exception, in flourishing condition.—The following question was then discussed:

"What periodicals and papers should a Sunday School have, and can be substituted for books." The permanent secretary gave notice that he could not attend on the following day, and H. P. Colgrove was appointed in his place. Rev. E. M. Baker was requested to take the place of Rev. Worth in the evening exercises. The contents of the question box were discussed, after which the Treasurer submitted the following report:

Received from old Treasurer	[illegible]
" other sources	[illegible]
Total	25 77
Paid out on orders	24 10
Balance in the Treasury	1 67

The report was approved and ordered placed on file, together with the vouchers accompanying it. Adjourned.

Evening.—The principal business of the evening session was a discussion of the question. "How can the Sunday School aid in promoting the temperance cause?" Closed.

Wednesday.—Called to order at 8 o'clock a. m. After time allotted to praise meeting, followed a discussion of "Foundation Principles of Correct Instruction." Then followed a lively discussion of the contents of the question box. The following was adopted:—Resolved, That, in the opinion of this convention, a uniform lesson system should be adopted by every School in the county." "Woman's work in the Sunday School" was then discussed, after which it was decided to hold the next annual meeting of the Association at Butler, next June. Adjourned.

1:30 p. m.—The President being absent the Convention was called to order by Vice President F. W. Willis. After opening praise meeting, the following question was discussed: "What is the best method of securing competent Teachers, and their preparation for their work." The Committee on nomination of officers presented their report, which was received and the committee discharged. The convention then proceeded to consider the report, and unanimously elected the nominees of the committee, as follows:

R. Wes. McBride, President, Waterloo H. P. Colgrove, permanent Secretary, Waterloo; C. P. Houser, Auburn, and W. H. Keller, Richland, Assistant Secretaries; G. H. Haines, Treasurer, Sedan.—Vice Presidents—John Zimmerman, Butler; Henry Shaffer, Jackson; B. A. Hadsell, Concord; Col. Sol DeLong, Newville; S. P. Wartenbee, Stafferd, L. Planson, Wilmington, P. V. Hoffman, Auburn; Simpson Duck, Waterloo; Peter Graham S. Richland; Levi Harding, N. Richland; John Treesh, Fairfield; Rev. E Baker Smithfield; Jeremiah Lewis Franklin; A. S. Casebeer, Troy. Executive Committee—Rev. J. B. Fowler, Chairman, Waterloo; Jim Griswold, Auburn; Lewis D. Button, Corunna; Rev. E. M. Baker, Waterloo; F. W. Willis, Waterloo. Delegate to State Convention, Rev. J. B. Fowler.—The permanent secretary presented his consolidated report of the Sunday Schools in the county, making the following showing

No. of Schools reported, 42; Officers and Teachers enrolled, 372; Scholars in infant classes, 682; in other classes, 2,170; Total enrollment of officers. Teachers and Scholars, 3,956; Conversions of Scholars during the year, 140; Volumes in Libraries, 2,266; Papers and Pamphlets distributed, 43,341; Verses recited, 59,646; Amount of Benevolent Contributions, $579,18; Amount contributed for expenses of Convention, $37,25. Of these 19 are Union Schools, 8 Methodist Episcopal, 8 United Brethren, 5 Christain or Discipal, 2 Lutheran, 2 Methodist, and 1 Presbyterian. The question, "What qualifications are necessary for a Superintendent and his work" was discussed, after which a vote of thanks was tendered Miss Jennie Hamil, for the manner in which she had discharged her duties as organist. Adjourned.

Evening.—The evening session was especially devoted to the children, who were address by F. W. Willis, W. H. Keller, Levi Harding, Col. Sol. DeLong and Rev. Mott. Adjourned sine die.

M. B. Willis, Pres.
H. P. Colgrove, Rec. Sec'y.
C. P. Houser, Assist'nt Sec'y.

MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the stockholders of the Building, Loan and Savings Association will be held on Thursday Evening, June 27,

at the Court House, at which time the monthly installments will be sold to the highest bidder.

J. M. Casebeer, Pres't.

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York:

"Messrs. Rothschild & Bros., proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 20 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No, send them on at once as we intend to give 'our customers the benefit of it.

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 35 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men have now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of 1872. We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at those astonishingly low prices. Remember the place

Wool being worth from 80 to 85c, woolen goods must advance. The popular Red Front Clothing men have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 30 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction guaranteed, they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods, and low prices that none dare to compete with.

Treatment of Small Pox.

If a patient, in the begining of the attact, be put in a room from which absolutely all light is excluded save that of a candle, the effect is to arrest the disease in the popular or vesicular stage; the skin between the vesicles is never inflamed or swollen; the large scabs of matter never form over the face; there is no intense pain, and only trifling itching, and the smell is either very slight or altogether wanting.—Loudon Lancet.

Burning Chimney.

If it be desired to extinguish fire in a chimney which has been lighted by a fire in the fireplace, shut all the doors of the apartment, so as to prevent any current of air up the chimney, and throw a few handsful of common salt upon the fire, which will extinguish the same. The philosophy of this is that in the process of burning the salt muriatic acid gas is eveloped, which is a prompt extinguisher of fire.

A Good Receipt for Gingerbread.

Take two pounds of fine flour, well dried by the fire, rub with it half a pound of butter, one ounce of carraway seeds, one ounce of ginger, half an ounce of coriander seeds, and half a pound of fine sugar. Mix them with one pound and three-quarters of treacle, and roll thin. A quick oven is the best.—Food Journal.

Treatment of Whetstones.

When first putting a new whetstone into use, try water upon it, and if this keeps the surface from being glazed or burnished oil will not be needed.—Some stones work better with water than oil. A dry stone is very apt to give a wire edge. It has been said that a little carbolic acid added to water will increas the friction on either a whetstone or a grindstone.

Bee Sting.

A correspondent of the scientific American says that "a good absorbent' will ease the pain of stings. 'The best absorbing substance that I have tried is lean fresh meat. This will relieve the pain of a wasp sting almost instantly, and has been recommended for the cure of rattlesnake bites. I have also used it with marked effect in erysiplas.

Neuralgia.

A correspondent of the Lancet says: "A few years ago, when in China I became acquainted with the fact of the natives when suffering facial neuralgia using oil of peppermint, which they lightly apply to the seat of pain with a camel hair pencil. Since then, in my own practice, I frequently employ this oil as a local anaesthetic, not only in neuralgia, but also in gout, with remarkable good results.

Indestructable Ink.

On many occasions it is of importance to employ an ink indestructible by any process that will not equally destroy the material on which it is applied. For black ink, twenty-five grains of copal, in powder, are to be dissolved in two hundred grains of oil of lavender, by the assistance of a gentle heat, and are then to be mixed with two and a half grains of lampblack and a half grain of indigo.

Potato Puff.

Take cold roast meat—beef or mutton, veal and ham together—clear from gristle, cut small, and season with pepper and salt and cut pick'es if liked.—Boil and mash some potatoes, make into paste with an egg, and roll out, dredging with flour. Cut round with a saucer; put some of the seasoned meat upon one half, and fold the other over like a puff; pinch or nick neatly round, and fry a light brown. This is a good method of warming up meat which has been cooked.

A Quaint Hit.

The Rev. Mr. Talbot, a clergyman of some reputation in the western part of Pennsylvania, was a good hater of cant. Born and reared a farmer, he took to the church as a matter of choice, and without doubt his sincerity was the eclectrical effect in which he procured so many converts from the "ways that are dark."

Dr. Talbot was without doubt, always an original wit, and when the purpose served him, a cynic. On returning his former home at one time, his neighbors having heard of his fame as a sower of the gospel," assembled to meet him, and one sanctimonious fellow who caried a whining air about him on all occasions, was one of the first to come fawning about Mr. Talbot.

"By the way," said the clergyman, "what has become of old Smithers?"

"Dead," said Uriah Heap, with a light groan.

"Dead."

'Yes—whiskey killed him."

"How old was he?"

"Seventy."

"Unfortunate man! And old Slater?"

"Dead."

"Poor old Slater. What did he die of?"

'Whiskey.'.

"How old was he?'

"Eighty.'

"Deluded wretch! And Daddy Wood?"

"He too has gone the way of all flesh. He drank himself to death, when he should have been thinking of the future world. "He was eighty, and even with the grave—"

"Brother, brother," said Mr T., with a quiet laugh in his eye, "can you tell me where I can get a hogshead of that same liquor?"

Printers should seldom wash their hands in turpentine, as the practice if presisted in will lead to the worst serious results, even to the loss of the power in the wrist joints.

Why should a sailor know there is a man in the moon? Because he has been to sea.

Sewing

Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

Horse and Cattle Powders.

[illegible] will invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to [illegible], such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific roads. 2d, to Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with railroad lands and homesteads. 3d, to St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the "Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleeper's, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the west. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific roads, be sure that you go "By Way of Burlington."

[From the Boston Commercial Bulletin]

CHAPTER I—UNREQUITED LOVE

'Twas leap year. Olive D'Erringer sat on an elegant fauteuil, adorned with the family chevaux-de-frise, a poinard, or, on a field gules, with the chasted motto, 'penses a moi.' Our heroine was sad.—Her life was blighted by a union with one who could not understand and sympathize with her finer nature. She sighed for an affinity.

The door-bell rang. She looked up listlessly at the entrance of a manly form. It was that of her family physician, Dr. Pillsbury. A strange magnetic chord in her susceptible heart thrilled his approach. Here was a being whom she could love.

Or hate!

'Madame, I have called to inquire after my patient, my friend, Mr. D'Erringer.'

Olivia drew herself up to her full height and flashed an elegant glance.

Sir, can't minister to a mind diseased?

I beg you pardon, but—

She interrupted him with a meaning gesture; then melting in all woman's tenderness, she fell upon his neck and said:

Doctor Pillsbury, dear Doctor, I know what you would say. 'Tis enough, you love me. I am thine.

But, madam, I am—you—think for a moment—my friend D'Erringer—

Olivia touched a bell. An obsequious servant appeared. Olivia opened her [illegible], took [illegible] and handed it to the servant with a significant gesture in the direction of the invalid's chamber.

CHAPTER II—SCORNED!

Olivia awaited in silence the menial's return. He reappeared, and said with a bow:

Madam, it's done.

Enough! Inform the undertaker.

Turning to her guest, with a winning smile, she said:

Dear Doctor, the upas tree of our happiness [illegible]. Be mine.

Doctor was confounded for a moment, then replied:

There's my wife.

Olivia frowned darkly.

Man, are there not divorce courts? she hissed rather than spoke.

But my children! he feebly remonstrated.

Olivia smiled scornfully.

And you call yourself a doctor, she said contemptuously.

But, urged the unfeeling wretch, here is some misconception. I do not—

Ha! then you love another?

I must confess that——

Enough! she shrieked. Vile dissembler, you would crush a loving bosom! You would trifle with a gentle heart! She drew a condensed navy of elegant workmanship. I go to an early grave, but not unavenged! Die, villain!

He died.

CHAPTER III—VILLAINY BAFFLED.

A coroner's jury sat on the two sets of remains. They brought in a verdict of murder against Olivia.

She smiled calmly, and with womanly tact invited the jury to lunch.

She waited on them with outward composure but with an aching heart.

The obsequious servant waited on them also.

Then the martyr went to her iron clad dungeon.

The jury died that simultaneously of a peculiar disease. Unfeeling calumny pointed the finger of suspicion at our heroine.

She smiled calmly.

CHAPTER IV—INNOCENCE TRIUMPHS

A miscreant who had read the newspapers was expelled from the jury box. A doubly-dyed wretch who could tell black from white was also put out. Three dark and bloody desperadoes, who pleaded guilty of common sense, were also excluded.

Twelve sympathic idiots, duly proven to know nothing of the case, and to be incapable of forming an opinion about anything, were selected.

A bull, for the defense.

A 'chivalrous gentleman' for the prosecution.

A martyr in the dock.

An owl on the bench.

Two rival doctors testifying as to cause of demise.

A lunacy Commissioner, to prove that crime was insanity, as he always treated insanity as a crime.

An audience to [illegible].

Some money.

Result: a verdict of justified eccentricity.

The crowd cheered.

Olivia fainted.

She had fourteen offers of marriage and 60 engagements to lecture before leaving the dock.

Her counsel called the next day with his bill

* * * * * * *

The bar passed resolutions of respect to his memory.

CHAPTER V—THE FROZEN HEART.

But Olivia is unhappy. She feels a void in her life, an unfulfilled mission. The [illegible] is gone. She fled with her offspring to a far distant land.

Olivia would fain avenge her wrongs but cannot. Her heart is frozen.

MORAL

Never put off a murder.

There are now 20,810 Odd Fellows in this State.

Thirteen Reasons why Greeley is Fit for President.

1. Because he carries an autocratic, muddled brain in a cranium covered by a white broad brimed hat.

2. Because he carries a perfidious black heart in a politically putrid carcas enveloped in an old white coat.

3. Because he can do more hard swearing and practice more profanity than perhaps any other prominent man, and is a fraud upon all christain sentiment.

4. Because he emerged from poverty by his apititude to assail republican men and principles, thereby secure the patronage and material aid from all enemies of republican government.

5. Because being a scientific farmer, having learned the best time to cut elders and the best position to place cabbage to make the head grow rapidly, and a profound philospher in the science of freeloveism he claims and was entitled to the degree of LL. D.

6. Because of his filial association with negros rather than with naturalized citizens, whom he terms d———ed ignorant Dutch and filthy Irish.

7. Because he cannot bear restraint—must lead—and when forced into the ranks of any party, his native autocratic, disposition and Anti-Republican proclivities become manifest.

8. Because having lead the party in power as far as they would follow, he kicks out of the traces and exhibits some of the perverseness of his perfidious heart.

9. Because he affiliates with negroes and infidels, and upholds and defends the rich in oppressing the poor and virtually says that upon the consummation of a certain contingency, he would support the continuance of the corruption, fraud, nepotism, perfidy, and despotism which he has lately pretended to denounce.

10. Because he has such a malignant and bitter feeling towards pure (not modern) Republican principles that he would vote for any candidate that would promote Anti-Republican sentiment and action.

11. Because he was nominated by the slippery, nauseous, gangrene sloughings off of the putrid [illegible] carcass, now in power, the habitation of and food for political maggots, and he is now with his hypocritical suavity courting, and bidding for support of a party which he spent a long life in denouncing as cut-throats, scoundrels, and such like (to him) proper and appropriate epithets, and the members of which party he has shown a disposition all his life to persecute and no position in which he might be placed would remove that inherent rancour from his vile carcas.

13. Because always being to big to attend a country dancing school, and Geo. Thompson and other British emisaries in conjunction with Wm. Floyd Garrison, Wendell Philips and others having formed a dancing association on a large scale after some time he joined said association, becoming a full partner now become strong with such energy and vigor did said association push their schemes, that in a few years, it had danced the souls out of more than a million of citizens, at a cost of more than fifty billion of dollars leaving the widows and orphans in connection with other survivors, to pay the expanses thereof into the pockets of the managers of said association at the same time being exempt from paying any part of said expense; and he having during said dance endeavored to form an association with said Garrison and others to buy all the negroes in the south, (about four million in number at a price estimated at about five hundred millions having then in view a plan which is fast approaching consumation to wipe out all lines defining the boundaries of the thirty-seven forms (called states) and of the ten or eleven patches (called teritories) within the limits of Uncle Sam's jurisdiction, and make one great farm thereof, without any provincial dividing lines. Now upon the consumation of this vast scheme, (to the advancement of which, Horace Greeley has given more weight and encouragement than any other ten men) toward which the party in power including the immaculate Horace, who would have the hardihood to say that he would not be a fit person to manage and control the concern, and with his experience and liberal mind, and extensive knowledge of farming, would he not be a fit person to draw long and deep furrows on the backs of all refractory "cusses," and generally make things burn. Whew! I guess.

Strategy.

A ragged little boy was called before the teacher of a school at Jersey City to be whipped for being an hour late in the morning. Said the teacher:

Take off your coat and vest.

Boo-oo hoo-oo!

I'll warm you nicely for being late, and for setting a bad example.

Boo-oo-hoo-oo-oo!

What made you so late, you young rascal?

Mo-mo-mother has got the small pox this morning, and I had to stay to wash the dishes!

Get out of here, or I'll skin you! cried the schoolmistress as she dropped the whip and ran out of the house followed by the children.

A young lady, in the kitchen, making a pie, said to her cousin, who was hanging around, 'Frank, the kitchen is no place for boys. Has dough any attraction for you?'

'It isn't dough (doe), cousin, but it is the dear that attracts me.'

All wild fruit promises to be plenty this year.

Horticulture Hints.

When fruit trees occupy the ground nothing else should—except very short grass.

Fruitfulness and growth of the tree can not be expected the same year.

There is no plum that the curculio will not attack, though any kind may sometimes escape from one year in one place.

Peach borers will not do much stiff clay is heaped around the tree a foot or so hight.

Pear blight still puzzels the greatest men. The best remedy known is to plant two for every one that dies.

If you don't know how to prune, don't hire a man from the other side of the sea who knows less than you do.

Don't cut off a big lower limb unless you are a renter and don't care what becomes of the tree when your time is run out.

A tree with the limbs coming out near the ground is worth two trees trimmed up ten feet, and so until they are not worth anything.

Trim down, and cut.

Shorten in, not lengthen out.

If you had an arm cut off, you would feel it at your heart—a tree will not feel but rot at the heart.

When anybody tells you of a gardner that understands all about horticulture and agriculture, and that can be hired, don't believe a word of it, for there are no such to be hired.

A Philosophical Darkey.

An elderly darkey, with a very philosophical and retrospective cast of countenance, was squatted upon his bundle on the hurricane deck of a Western steamboat, toasting his shins against the chimney, and apparently plunged in a state of profound meditation. His dress and appearance indicated familiarity with camp life, and it being soon after the siege and capture of Fort Donelson, I was inclined to disturb his reverie, and on interrogation found that he had been with the Union forces at that place, when I questioned him further. His philosophy was so much in the Falstaffian vein that I will give his views in his own words as near as my memory serves me.

Were you in the fight?

I had a little taste of it, sa.

Stood your ground, did you?

No, sa, I runs.

Run at the first fire, did you?

Yes, sa, an' would had run soona had I know'd it was comin'.

That wasn't very creditable to your courage.

Dat isn't in my line, sa—cookin's my profession.

But have you no regard for your reputation?

Reputation! nuffin to me by side ab life.

Do you consider your life worth more than other people?

It's worth more to me, sa.

Then you must value it very highly

Yes, sa I does; more dan all dis world; more dan a million dollars, sa; for what would dar be wuth to a man wid de bref out of him? Self-preserbashun is de fust law wid me, sa.

But why should you act upon a different rule from other men?

Cause, sa, different men sets different value upon derselves; my life is not in de market.

But if you lost it, you would have the satisfaction of knowing that you died for your country.

Not much satisfaction would dat be to me, when der power of feelin' was gone?

Then patriotism and honor are nothing to you?

Nuffin' whatever, sa—I regard dem as amoung de varieties.

If our soldiers were like you, traitors might have broken up the Government without resistance.

Yes, sa; der would hab been no help for it. I wouldn't put my life in de scales gainst any guberment dat eber existed, for no guberment could replace de loss to me. Spect, dough, dat de guberment safe, if da all are like me.

Do you think any of your company would have missed you if you had been killed?

May be not, sa. A dead white man ain't much to dese sogers, let alone a dead nigga; but I'd a missed myself, and dat was de pint wid me.

It is safe to say that the darkey corpse of that African will never darken the field of carnage.

Spiritual Facts.

That whisky is the key by which many gain an entrance into our prisons and alms houses.

That brandy brands the noses of all who can not govern their appetite.

That wine causes many [illegible] winding-way homes [illegible].

That punch is the cause of many unfriendly punches.

That ale causes many ailings, while beer brings many to their bier.

That champaign is the cause of many real pains.

That gin-slings have "slewed" more than the slings of old.

That the reputation of being fond of cocktails is not a feather in any man's cap.

That the money spent for port which is suplied by portly gents, would support many a poor family.

That porter is a weak support for those who are weak in body.

"Come into the Varden Maud," is the way in which musical mammas urge their daughters to try on their new calico dresses.

After "Lost Sheep."

A Methodist minister was tramping through the settlements of Wisconsin, doing good where he might. He tarried for the night at one of the 'pioneer's' cabins. The old woman, while preparing supper entered into conversation with her visitor, and the following colloquy took place.

Stranger, where might you be from?

Madam, I reside in Shelby county, Kentucky.

Wall, stranger, hope no offence, but what mought you be doin' way up in this region?

Madam, I am searching for the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

John, shouted the old lady, come right here this minute; here's a stranger all the way from Shelby county, Kentucky, a huntin' stock. I'll just bet my life, that that tangle-haired old ram that's been in our lot for the last week, is one of his'n!

Short Catechism.

Who got Grant a commission in the army, and stuck by him when the western Governors wanted to turn him out for drunkedness? Washburne: Minister to France.

Who contributed most liberally for the purchase of the house presented to Grant in Philadelphia? Adolph E. Borie—late Secretary of the Navy.

Who headed the list for the purchase of a house presented to Grant in Washington Alex. T. Stewart—appointed Secretary of the Treasury, though ineligible.

Who gave Grant the 'cot by the sea' at Long Branch? Thomas Murphy—late Collector of New York.

Who [illegible] Grant [illegible] in the [illegible] up Washington? Henry D. Cooke—Governor of Washington.

Who refused to take the Democratic nomination against Grant in 1868, because, as he said, 'Grant always stood by me when I was crazy, and I by him when he is drunk?' W. T. Sherman—Lieutenant General of the army.

Whoever made Grant a present, from a 'brown stone front' to a 'yaller dog,' without being presented with an office in return? Nobody that we know of.—Frank Leslie.

Sheridan's Ride

It ought not to be forgotten in the notices of Thomas Buchanan Read, poet and painter, that among the creatures of his fancy was the fame of General Philip Sheridan. Mr. Read, by a poem and a picture, made a hero out of a third rate cavalry officer, and converted discreditable incident into a great achievment. The facts were simply these: Sheridan was in the Shenandoah valley in such force as to be entirely indifferent to the presence of a few Confederate troops, under Early. So General Sheridan found Willard's hotel more lively quarters than the field. While he was away, leaving an over confident and ill posted army, Early made a sudden attack in the grey of the morning, and put the whole of Sheridan's forces to flight, in one of those suden panics to which even good troops are subject. But after they had run some distance, they checked their flight, formed ranks and were going back, under Gen. Wright, when Gen. Sheridan returned from his truancy.—Probably he rode rapidly when the news reached him that his camp was taken. This was not an extraordinary merit. He also went back with his army, easily driving off the feeble enemy, who were busy with the spoil.—The event was not in any way creditable to Sheridan, who rather deserved censure for his negligence and absence. But with the help of some camp letter-writers, reinforced afterward by Mr. Buchanan Read, a very pretty gloss was given the matter. And so history is written!—Philadelphia Age

You flatter me, said an exquisite to a young lady who was praising his moustache.

For heaven's sake, ma'am, interposed an old skipper, don't make that monkey any flatter than he is.

It is rumored that young ladies who object to the word 'obey' in the marriage ceremony, now hoodwink the guileless youths who lead them to the altar by glibly promising to 'love, honor and be gay.'

During a class meeting held sevral years since by the Methodist brethren of a Southern village, Brother Jones went among the colored portion of the congregation and said:

Brother Dick, I'm glad to see you here. Haven't stole any turkeys since I saw you last?

No, Brother Jones, no turkeys.

Nor any chickens, Brother Dick?

No, Brother Jones, no chickens.

Thank the Lord, brother.

That's doing well, my brother, leaving Brother Dick, who immediately relieved his overburdened conscience by saying to a near neighbor, with an immense sigh of relief:

If he'd said ducks, he'd a had me.

It is said when a young man of Dubuque, where the small pox has had a run of seven weeks, asks a young lady to take his arm, she gazes on him with a vaccinating smile.

'I don't mean to reflect on you," said a coarse, would-be wit to a man who he insulted.

'No,' was the reply, 'you're not polished enought to reflect upon anybody."

A NEVADA FUNERAL.

There was a great time over Buck Fanshaw when he died. He was a representative citizen. He had 'killed his man'—not in his own quarrel but in defense of a stranger be-set by numbers. He had kept a sumptuous saloon. He had been the proprietor of a dashing helpmeet, whom he could have discarded without the formality of a divorce. He had held a high position in the fire department, and been a very Warwick in politics. When he died there was a great lamentation throughout the town, but especially in the vast bottom stratum of society.

On the inquest it was shown that Buck Fanshaw, in the delirium of a wasting typhoid fever, had taken arsenic, shot himself through the body, cut his throat, and jumped out of a four story window and broken his neck; and, after due deliberation, the jury, sad and tearful, but with intelligence unblinded by its sorrow, brought in a verdict of death 'by the visitation God.' What could the world do with such juries?

Prodigious preparations were made for the funeral. All the vehicles in the town were hired, all the saloons were put in mourning, all the municipal and fire company flags were hung at halfmast, and all the firemen ordered to muster in uniform and bring their machines duly draped in plain black.

Regretful resolutions were passed, and various committees appointed; among others, a committee of one was appointed to call on a minister—a fragile, gentle, spiritual new fledging from an eastern theological seminary, and as yet unacquainted with the ways of the mines. The committeeman—'Scotty' Briggs made his visit.

Being admitted to his presence, he sat down before the clergyman, placed his fire hat on an unfinished manuscript sermon under the minister's nose, took from it a red silk handkerchief, wiped his brow, and heaved a sigh of dismal impressiveness explanatory of his business. He choked and even shed tears, but with an effort he mastered his voice, and said, in lugubrious tones:

'Are you the duck that runs the gospel mill next door?'

'I am the—pardon me, I believe I do not understand.'

With another sigh, and a half sob, Scotty rejoined:

'Why you see we are in a bit of trouble, and the boys thought may be you'd give us a lift, if we'd tackle you—that is, if I've got the rights of it, and you are the head clerk of the doxology works next door.'

'I am the shepherd in charge of the flock whose fold is next door.,

'The which?'

'The spiritual adviser of the little company of believers whose sanctuary adjoins these premises.'

Scotty scratched his head, reflected a moment, and said:

'You rather hold over me, pard, I reccon I can't call that hand. Ante and pass the buck.'

'How? I beg your pardon. What did I understand you to say?'

'Well, you've rather got the bulge on me. Or may be we've both got the bulge, somehow. You don't smoke me and I don't you. You see, one of the boys has passed in his checks, and we want to give him a good send off, and so the thing I'm now on is to rout out somebody to jerk a little chin music for us, and wa'tz him through handsome.'

'My friend, I seem to grow more and more bewildered. Your observations are wholly incomprehensible to me. Can not you simplify them in some way? At first I thought perhaps I understood you, but now I grope. Would it not expedite matters if you restricted yourself to a categorical statement of fact, unincumbered with obstructing accumulations of metaphor and allegory?'

Another pause, and more reflection. Then Scotty said:

'I'll have to pass.'

'How?'

'You've raised me out, pard.'

'I still fail to catch your meaning.'

'Why, that last lead of yourn is too many for me—that's the idea. I can't trump nor follow suit.'

The clergyman sank back in his chair perplexed. Scotty leaned his head on his hand, and gave himself up to reflection. Presently his face came up, sorrowful but confident.

'I've got it now, so's you cavvy,' said he.

'What we want is a gospel sharp. See?'

'A what?'

'Gospel sharp.'

'O! Why didn't you say so before? I am a clergyman.'

'Now you talk! You see my blind and straddle it like a man. Put it there!' extending a brawny paw, which closed over the minister's small hand, and gave it a shake indicative of fraternal sympathy and fervent gratification.

'Now we're all right, pard. Let's start fresh. Don't you mind me snuffling a little, becuz you're in a power of trouble. You see, one of the boys has gone up the flume—'

'Gone where?'

'Up the flume—throw'd up the sponge, you see.'

'Thrown up the sponge?'

'Yes—kicked the bucket.'

'Ah! has departed to that mysterious country from whose bourne no traveler returns.'

'Well I reckon not. Why, pard, he's dead!'

'Yes.'

'Well, I thought may be you might be getting tangled once more. Yes, he's dead again—'

'Has he ever been dead before this time.

'No. Do you reckon a man has as many lives as a cat? But, you bet, he's awful dead now, and I wish I'd never seen this day. No man ever knowed Buck Fanshaw to go back on a friend. But they've scooped him!'

'Scooped him?'

'Yes, death has. We've got to give him up.'

'Yes,' and he left his pard.

Well, your back again. Could you say it over once and say it slow?'

'To simplify it somewhat, was he, or rather had he ever been, connected with any organization sequestrated from secular concerns, and devoted to self sacrifice in the interest of morality?'

'All down but nine—set 'em up on the other alley, pard.

'What did I understand you to say?

'Why, you're most too many for me, you know. When you get in with your left, I hunt grass every time.'

'Begin again.'

'That's it.'

'Very well. Was he a good man, and—

'He was always for peace, and he would have peace—he could not stand disturbance. Pard, he was a great loss to this town. It would please the boys if you could chip in something like that and do him justice. Once, when the Micks got to throwing stones into the Methodis' Sunday School windows Buck Fanshaw, all of his own notion, shut up his saloon, and took a couple of six shooters, and mounted guard over the Sunday School. Says he, 'No Irish need apply!' and they did'nt either. And you can say that he never shook his mother.

'Never shook his mother?'

'That's it—any of the boys will tell so.'

But why should he shake her?'

'That's what I say—but some people does.'

'Not people of any repute?'

'Some that average pretty so-so.'

The obsequies were all that 'the boys' could desire. Such a marvel of of funeral pomp had ever been seen in Virginia City. The plumed hearse, the dirge-breathing brass bands, the closed marts of business, the flags drooping at half mast, the long, plodding procession of uniformed secret societies, military battalions, and fire companies draped engines, carriages of officials and citizens in vehicles on the foot, attracted multitudes of spectators to the side walks, roofs and windows; and for years afterward the degree of grandure attained by civic display in Virginia City was determined by comparison with Buck Fanshw's funeral.

A Lone Widow Underground.

The other day, on the Metropolitan railway, I sat next to a little, long nosed man with red whiskers. Opposite to us sat a middle-aged lady in black. The little man stared at her very hard fidgeted a good deal, and opened a conversation.

'In mourning, ma'am, I see.'

'Yes.' [spoken Sharply].

'Sad thing that. One of the old people, perhaps?'

'No.'

'One of the young ones? Baby, eh?'

'I have no babies.'

'Of course not. The guvnor—husband, you know?'

'Yes.' (Very sharply.)

'Sorry. Sudden, perhaps?'

'No.'

'Ah, illness; that's worse sometimes In trade, was he?'

'He was a sailor.'

'Caught a fever, eh?'

'He was drowned.'

After a pause—

'Save his chest?'

'My husband's effects were not yet lost.'

'Religious sort of a man?'

'Yes.'

'Glad of that: Suppose you are glad the chest wasn't lost.

'I suppose so.'

After another pause—

'Suppose you'll be getting married again soon?'

The lady made no reply to this, but got out at the next station.

The little, long-nosed man looked around as though in search of another victim. And he fixed on me.

'Got a hat-band on.'

'Yes, I put it on because my hat was shabby.'

After a brief interval—

'Would you feel inclined to swop your umbrella for my walking stick and five shillings?'

I felt that the time had come for decisive action. I struck the miscreant dead at my feet and stepped out upon the platform. I believe he is buried now. I have heard no more of him since.

The New York city missionaries of the Episcopal Church report that they have, during the past year, furnished 85,000 meals to the poor, preached to 80,000, and visited 10,000 in prison, reaching in various ways in all 70,000. Now this is Apostolic Christianity.—The loaf is a divine institution. The prison is an excellent church building, whose audience is always ready to assist the poor.

An Illinois minister drives stage on week days, and yet the inconsistent divine tries to make out that there is no antagonism between the pulpit and the stage.

DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

For Governor,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS.
Lieut. Governor,
WASHINGTON C. DePAW.
Congressmen-at-Large,
JOHN S. WILLIAMS and M. C. KERR.
Secretary of State,
[illegible]
Auditor of State,
JOHN B. STOLL.
Treasurer of State,
JOHN B. RYAN.
Supt. of Education and Instruction,
MILTON B. HOPKINS.
Attorney General,
H. W. HANNA.
Clerk of Supreme Court,
[illegible]
Reporter of Supreme Court,
[illegible]

The little town of Springfield, Ohio, [illegible] 70 Greeley Republicans.

J. P. C. SHANKS was re-nominated for Congress in the 9th district.

Grant and Wilson take well—Philadelphia Press. Especially Grant.—Louisville Journal.

"Let Greeley drive the hearse," says the Chicago Post. He will drive it, and the Philadelphia ticket will furnish the corpses.

As Wilson is intended to carry the temperance vote, we suppose Grant is good for the intemperate. We [illegible] in both ends.—Washington Capital.

Mr. Greeley's supporters being known as the "white tile" party, it is proposed to distinguish the adherents of the present stable administration as the hoss-tile party.

At the opening of the new Lincoln Park church, in Chicago, the pulpit, and the cabinet organ of the old church which were buried at the fire, to save them from destruction, were used in the new building.

The Campaign Opened.

The campaign in Indiana has now fairly commenced. The State Convention has met, adopted its platform, and made its nominations, and the work for the election of the candidates is already in hand. During the next five months we propose to make THE COURIER a campaign paper in every sense of the word. Every Democrat in the County should subscribe for, and read this paper, in order that he may vote intelligently on all local and national questions. The Democratic Ticket is a strong one, and if the people throughout the county are thoroughly informed of their capabilities, their characters and positions, the State ticket will have a large majority in this County at the October election.—We will send THE COURIER to any address until the first of January, for one dollar. Subscribe and read!

We have lately had political thunder all along the sky—all for Greeley. At first the smaller States of South Carolina, Florida, Kansas and Vermont pronounced for him. Then came the larger and more important States of Iowa, Wisconsin, Indiana and Missouri, which have declared for him with an acclaim that has resounded throughout the country. But on the 26th and 27th instant we shall hear from two of the first-class States—regular ships of the line, with tiers of seventy-four guns. They are Illinois and Ohio. Won't they speak loud? Won't they thunder! Big as the reports have already been, they will be drowned by the tremendous fire which these great States will open from their port-holes. We say, therefore, make way, within the next ten days, for Illinois and Ohio which sends no less than eighty-six delegates to the Convention, and all for Horrace Greeley and B. Gratz Brown.—

Well Done Indiana.

We felt perfectly confident from the tone of our dispatches from Indianapolis yesterday, that the Democratic State Convention of Indiana would take such action as every friend of the National Reform Ticket would be pleased with. After nominating a strong State ticket with the popular Hendricks at its head, the Convention passed resolutions that the Cincinnati platform, taken in connection with Horace Greeley's letter, constitute a platform on which the Democracy and all other elements of opposition to Grant can stand. They repeat and reaffirm the principal points in the Cincinnati [illegible], and urge that the Democratic Convention [illegible] at Baltimore [illegible] the Liberal Republican candidates, instead of causing two sets of candidates to be in the field as standard bearers of the same principles, and instructed the delegates to Baltimore to vote as a unit on all questions.

It is understood that the Liberal Republicans of Indiana will support the State ticket nominated yesterday, and the Democrats and Liberal Republicans of the State will be a unit in their support of Greeley and Brown.—Thus is Indiana sure to go right in October, and equally sure for the [illegible] ticket in November.—Chicago [illegible]

THE Cincinnati Enquirer very pertinently says, "It is [illegible] in these times, when Democratic State Conventions are held every day, [illegible] for Greeley and Brown at Baltimore, to post the books without continual revision. Thus, yesterday, we had the return of eleven States on the election of delegates to the Baltimore Convention, by which it appeared that there were 253 delegates virtually instructed for the endorsement of Greeley and Brown to seven against. Since that article was written we have heard from Missouri, which has increased the Greeley delegates by 30 votes, Wisconsin, which adds 20 votes, and Vermont, which adds 10, to the list, total thus far is 310 for Greeley and 7 against him. In this we do not count several [illegible] New England delegates, which are in the same interest. Of the 732 delegates in the Convention there will be at least 700 that will urge the endorsement of the Cincinnati nominees. If this is [illegible], what is it?"

A Grant Delegate Declares for Greeley.

Governor [illegible] of West Virginia, while attending the Philadelphia Convention on the 8th of June, seceded from the delegation from that State to the Convention and in his speech to the delegation declaring his preference for Greeley, said he had hoped, "when I was elected without soliciting to come as a delegate to this Convention, that there might be still an opportunity to save the party by a nomination of an acceptable Presidential candidate, one who would obey the laws and respect the popular will, but it is now evident it was hoping against hope; that this was a meeting for deliberation [illegible] in the interest of the Republican party or of the demands of an arrogant power.—Neither the admonitions of Cincinnati or of Sumner are heeded, and it is resolved to destroy the organization to gratify a mere personal government. I, therefore, withdraw from the delegation, and I give you this timely notice to fill my place. I shall stump the State to give my honest support to Horace Greeley."

Attorney General.

The selection of a candidate for Attorney General being declared the next thing in order, Hon. Hayden W. Hanna was re-nominated by acclamation. The announcement of his selection was followed by hearty applause and calls for his appearance. He came forward and spoke as follows:

FELLOW CITIZENS:—I thank you for this renewed manifestation of your confidence in me. I accept the trust and promise to do the best I can. In my deliberate judgement the ticket you have nominated to-day will be elected in October (Cheers), and I further believe that the garrulous platform and dumb candidate of Philadelphia will be ingloriously beaten in November next. [Great applause.] I do not know what the Baltimore Convention will do. I believe, however, it will do right. But I want to say: That as between the white hat and friendly hand of amnesty and the crested head and bloody hand of [illegible], I am for the white hat, white breeches and all. [Applause.] I have been asked why, as a Democrat, I could support Horace Greeley [applause] and my answer is this: It may at thought seem a little strange that Democrats should rally around his standard. We opposed him in times gone by, because he was engaged in trying to liberate four millions of negro slaves, a matter that I thought belonged to the States; but that he has accomplished, and now he is trying to emancipate thirty million of white slaves in this country. [Applause.]—The past we cannot consider—the future only is ours. The dismal wilderness of [illegible] and the bitter waters of Mara have long been our portion, but we go now to the land of Elim, where, at the promised twelve wells of water, and beneath the three score and ten palm trees, we will spread [illegible] feast of rejoicing and restitution. [Applause.]

Nebraska for Greeley.

LINCOLN, June 21.—The Democratic State Convention met to-day.—Resolutions were unanimously adopted endorsing the Cincinnati platform and appointing delegates to the Baltimore Convention instructed to vote as a unit for Greeley and Brown. The greatest harmony prevailed and the Convention adjourned amid great enthusiasm.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The President to-day appointed ex-Congressman Clark, of Texas, to be Postmaster at Galveston, at a salary of $4,000 a year. It is not more than a month since Mr. Clark was expelled from his seat in Congress by a unanimous vote of the House on the unanimous report of a committee that he held it by the grossest fraud. There are no charges made against the Post master at Galveston and his supercedure is not only a violation of the new Civil Service rules, but is followed by an appointment that is equally denounced by friend and foe alike of the Administration.

There is more rejoicing among the President's newspapers over one Democrat who "repudiates Greeley" than there is over ninety and nine office holders who vote for Grant.

The Washington Patriot, in a leading editorial, says: "It is useless to conceal that Greeley will control the Baltimore Convention, and that it is the duty of Democrats to abide by the result, no matter if the candidate then forced upon them is more objectionable than Grant. For the sake of party organization Democrats should not vote for Grant."

The Political Outlook.

The Radical leaders in Indiana are not hopeful of the result in October next. The prospect does not look as encouraging as when they were nominated. The skies then were somewhat bright to Radical eyes, but a change has taken place. Clouds intervene where all was sunlight and promise.—The harmonious action of the Democratic State Convention and the strong ticket it nominated, have changed the political outlook. Indiana will decide against the officeholders' party in October, and against Grant in November. As the St. Louis Republican remarks: The people know more than these self-appointed leaders, and are determined to exert that authority which belongs solely and exclusively to the people.—[illegible] who do not like the plan of campaign, they can go [illegible] to the rear [illegible] have resolved to fight, and to fight to win. The enthusiasm which inspires the people is born of two elements—the consciousness of patriotism and the prospect of glorious success. It therefore need surprise no one to see Democratic Congressional district and State conventions, North, South, East and West, falling into line and preparing for battle. The day of divided councils and Bourbon tactics is over—the grand Democratic army has closed the columns, flung out its flags and awaits the order to advance.—When the Baltimore Convention shall have performed the task assigned it, the army will march forward to the attack—offensive, this time, on the part of the allied forces, an offensive, not a defensive war. The skies are bright, the omens auspicious, the field is clear, and the enemy, entrenched though they be behind the bulwarks of patronage and plunder—will be met and conquered.—Ind. Sen.

NEW YORK, June 21.—At the Fifth Avenue Conference yesterday, Senator Trumbull delivered a short address, in which he said: "To the question that comes up [illegible] there is [illegible] to me [illegible] Mr. Greeley." Carl Schurz said, respecting the Cincinnati [illegible], perhaps a better ticket could have been selected, but perhaps not. Mr. Greeley is near to the people, and his name can't be withdrawn. [illegible] opinions are rising in his favor, and it would be idle, to attempt at this juncture to stay its progress. The speaker expressed an opinion that if Greeley is elected, as he would be by an overwhelming vote, he would select from all parties, such a Cabinet, and draw around him such men as the nation would place entire confidence in. The World [illegible] treats the Conference as a [illegible].

The Herald thinks the Conference developed the fact that the Democratic party, old and young, will go for Greeley.

The Times says it amounted to nothing.

The Tribune believes nothing but good has resulted from the Conference.

To-night other members of the Conference are speaking with little prospect of any definite action. Nearly all present are expected to be in favor of Greeley, [illegible] in favor of the meeting [illegible].

At 12:30 this morning the Anti-Grant Free Trade delegates were still talking, [illegible] Pennsylvania then having the floor. There is no prospect of this meeting ending before dawn. Schurz will speak last. All the indications are that the meeting will endorse Greeley and Brown.—The Conference is considered here as rather a triumph for the Cincinnati candidates, and Greeley men are jubilant over it.

Wellington Strategy.

On a certain occasion during Wellington's campaign in the Pyrennees the Great Captain being displeased with the disposition General Picton had made, and having received the report of Marshal Soult, who menaced him in front, decided the plan to be entirely changed. But the difficulty was to delay the attack of the French until the change could be effected. This he accomplished in person in the following manner: doffing his cocked hat and waving it in the air, he rode furiously to the head of a regiment, as if about to order a charge. There arose a tremendous cheer from the men, which was taken up by corps after corps until it reverberated along the whole extent of Picton's line. As the roar died away, Wellington was heard to remark, musingly, as if addressing himself—"Soult is a skillful but cautious commander, and will not attack in force until he has ascertain the meaning of these cheers. This will give time for the sixth division to come up and we shall beat him." It turned out as he anticipated.—Soult, naturally enough, supposed those tremendous shouts announced the arrival of large reinforcements, and did not attack until too late. Had he struck at the right moment he would have won an easy victory; as it was he met with a bloody repulse.

This was strategy. Not the strategy of books, but the [illegible] of genius, engendered and executed in the same moment. There is no such thing laid down in Jomini. The idea was born of the occasion and carried out on the instant.

It turns out that the reason why the Republicans carried Oregon at the recent election was simply that Ben. Holladay, the famous contractor, who owns about all the movable property in that State, helped them through as a speculation of his own. He intends to be well paid for it.

The first Greeley and Brown flag in Buffalo was thrown to the breeze Tuesday. It floated from the Hartford elevator on the dock. The owners were original Republicans.

Hiram Green says: "All the difference I can see between the late Artemas Ward and U. S. Grant, is that Artemas was willin' to sacrifice all his own and his wife's relashuns to save the country, while U. S. G. is willin' to sacrifice the country to save all his own and his wife's relashuns."

THE PEOPLES' PLATFORM.

We, the Liberal Republicans of the United States, in National Convention assembled at Cincinnati, proclaim the following principles as essential to just government.

1. We recognize the equality of all before the law, and hold that it is the duty of the government in its dealings with the people to mete out equal and exact justice to all of whatever nativity, race, color or persuasion, religious or political.

2. We pledge ourselves to maintain the Union of the States, emancipation and enfranchisement, and oppose any reopening of the question settled by the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and fifteenth amendments of the Constitution.

3. We demand immediate and absolute removal of all disabilities imposed on account of the rebellion, which was finally subdued seven years ago, believing that universal amnesty will result in complete pacification in all sections of the country.

4. Local self-government, with impartial suffrage, will guard the rights of all citizens more securely than any centralized power. The public welfare requires the supremacy of the civil over the military authority, and the freedom of persons under the protection of the habeas corpus. We demand for the individual the largest liberty consistent with the public order, for the State self-government, and for the Nation return to the methods of peace and the constitutional limitations of power.

5. The civil service of the Government has become a mere instrument of partisan tyranny and personal ambition and an object of selfish greed. It is a scandal and reproach upon free institution, and breeds a demoralization dangerous to the perpetuity of Republican Government.

6. We therefore regard a thorough reform of the civil service as one of the most pressing necessities of the hour; that honesty, capacity, and fidelity constitute the only valid claims to public employment; that the offices of the Government cease to be a matter of arbitrary favoritism and patronage, and that public station become again a post of honor. To this end it is imperatively required that no President shall be a candidate for re-election.

7. We demand a system of Federal taxation which shall not unnecessarily interfere with the industry of the people, and which shall provide the means necessary to pay the expenses of the Government, economically administered, pensions, and the interest on the public debt, and a moderate annual reduction of the principal thereof; but recognizing that there are in our midst honest but irreconcilable differences of opinion upon the merits of the respective systems of Protection and Free Trade we remit the discussion of the subject to the people in their Congressional districts and to the decision of Congress thereon wholly free from Executive interference or dictation.

8. The public credit must be sacredly maintained, and we denounce repudiation in every form and guise.

9. A speedy return to specie payment is demanded alike by the highest considerations of commercial morality and honest government.

10. We remember with gratitude the heroism and sacrifices of the soldiers and sailors of the Republic, and no act of ours shall ever detract from their justly earned fame or the full rewards of their patriotism.

11. We are opposed to all further grants of land to railroads or other corporations. The public domain should be held sacred to actual settlers.

12. We hold that it is the duty of the government in its intercourse with other nations to cultivate the friendship of peace by treating with all on fair and equal terms, regarding it alike dishonorable either to demand what is not right or to submit to what is wrong.

13. From the promotion and success of these vital principles, and the support of the candidate nominated by this Convention we invite and cordially welcome the co-operation of all patriotic citizens, without regard to previous political affiliations.

Henry Wilson's Record.

Foreign born citizens who propose to support the Philadelphia Convention nominees, can sit down and read the political record of the Massachusetts Senator, to make way for whom the great smiler of South Bend was slaughtered in the house of his friends by and through the friendly machination of the canting loyalist [illegible] Morton.—This scrap of history reads as follows:

In 1854 Mr. Henry Wilson was the chief of the Know Nothing organization in Massachusetts, which party, in secret convention, nominated a candidate for Governor, who was elected.—Mr. Edward Everett, who was then United States Senator, resigned and the Know Nothing Legislature elected Mr. Henry Wilson to fill the vacancy. Mr. Wilson did not take his seat until the 10th of February, 1855, and on the 23d of the same month, in a long debate on a bill providing for the enforcement of the United States laws, he repeatedly spoke of the American or Know Nothing party, "with which I act." He claimed to be, and was the representative of that party in the Senate.

On the first of March, 1855, Mr. Wilson, as the Senatorial representative of that party, presented the petition of citizens of Boston Massachusetts, praying a repeal of the naturalization laws of the United States. On the 4th of March the session of Congress closed and Mr. Wilson did not appear again until the December following. He remained a representative of the Know Nothing party until 1856, when that organization became a "national party," repudiating anti-slaveryism. Mr. Wilson then joined the Republican party.

The Bangor Democrat makes its point rather cleverly when it says; "Our genial neighbor, the Whig, is anxious that we should quote some of the hard things that Horace Greeley used to say about the Democracy.—We prefer the good things he is now saying. The things that Paul said after that remarkable noonday vision are remembered and repeated by the whole Christain world. While the things which Saul said before the vision of light are forgotten."

The Rensselear Union is out in a lengthy article in review of the acts of the Plymouth Convention. It characterizes the nomination of Gen. Packard as a fraud and a swindle and avows its intention to oppose his election from the first to the last.

Since purchasing our stock clothing has advanced 25 per cent. in all the eastern markets, and the Red Front Clothing men have now the advantage of all others as they have purchased their entire stock, for the spring and summer of 1872. We were first in market and first in the field and will continue to sell at those astonishingly low prices. Remember the place.

Wool being worth from 50 to 55c, woolen goods must advance. The popular Red Front Clothing men have took advantage of it, and commenced buying their spring stock 30 days ago and to-day the same goods are worth 25 per cent. more than when they were purchased, so all can readily conceive that they can sell clothing for less than they can be manufactured. For the past year the Red Front clothing men, at No. 5, Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, have had the lead and by fair dealing, low prices, and in all cases satisfaction guaranteed, they have established not only for themselves but among the public generally a reputation for good goods and low prices that none dare to compete with.

A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN.

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in plain envelope, to any address, post paid on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps.

Also Dr. Culverwell's 'Marriage Guide,' price 25 cents. Address

IF you want the best Ague Cure, get Austin's Ague Drops.

J. R. LANNING, Esq., our efficient county Clerk, is a delegate to the Baltimore Convention.

REMEMBER the Grand Dinner to be prepared on the Fourth of July. Delicacies and nice things for everybody.

WE take AUSTIN'S AGUE DROPS for the Ague. They are a sure cure. Only 50 cents.

THE grand celebration on the Fourth, at this place, promises a good time. There are many attractive features to be presented.

ARRANGEMENTS are being made to have Main street sprinkled regularly every day during the summer. A much needed improvement.

We learn from responsible citizens of Spencerville, that one case of small-pox occurred about a mile from that place in in the family of a Mr. Dilley.

WE were consulted as to getting the Institute proceedings printed, but found that it would cost more than there was money on hand, about twenty-five dollars

Delicious strawberries—cool, crimson, fragrant and luscious. There isn't a more seductive dish on earth. Go to Smith & Hare's, and get a dish with ice-cream attached.

THE bower dance, under the management of Puff and Culver, will be one of the best ever given in this place. They have secured the Goshen string band, the best in the State, and we will assure you entire satisfaction.

Mock Bros. & Co., are putting up an extensive establishment for the manufacture of scroll work and chair stuff. They have located near the new saw mill at the south end of town and will be in operation in a few days.

ICED tea is in season. Those who have not used it will find a goblet of it at the dinner hour refreshing and invigorating. No drowsiness follows its use in hot weather, and it is therefore invaluable to people of sedentary occupation and habit.

THERE will be but two bona fide Balloon Ascensions in this State on the Fourth, one at Lafayette and the other at Auburn. As thousands have never witnessed a scene of this kind, they can now be accommodated by visiting Auburn.

SEVERAL cows made a luxuriant repast of the tender co n and cabbage in Mr. Fluke's garden, last Saturday night. He now has a Dolly Varden garden. Somebody [illegible] to call around.

Drs. Ford & Spooner have now about the nicest location for an office in town in Case's new brick. When fitted up it will take the lead. Dr. Knott is also located in the same building and will indulge in similar elegance.

THE Elkhart Union has been enlarged to a nine column paper. Such encouragements as these indicate that Indiana is wheeling into line again and that the rank and file of the Democracy have gone to work to give Hendricks a handsome majority next October.

A Kentucky newspaper has a subscriber who has paid his subscription regularly for fifty-four years.—N. Y. Times.

And we have several who haven't paid their subscription "regularly" for one year. Dear friends, take warnin' and come and see us.

We would like to know how soon the O'Connel House is to be conducted upon the European plan, will be opened to the public. There is a demand for a house of this kind in Fort Wayne, and travelers would like to know how soon they can avail themselves of its comforts.

THEY are having a hot time over in the 11th Congressional District. Gen. Packard was nominated by a ring and a majority of the voters say they will not support him. The Republican papers denounce his nomination as a fraud and a swindle. An independent candidate will be placed in the field.

IRON FENCES.—The excellent iron fence, recently erected on the residence of John L. Davis, Esq, our popular hardware merchant, is so durable, handsome and attractive, that others of our citizens are fashioning after it. C. S. Hare, Esq., has just completed a similar one, with some improvements in design, that make it really beautiful. These are substantial improvements as well as ornamental.

Paul Schrader, well known as the first baseman of the KeKiongas, at Fort Wayne died very suddenly last Monday. While very much heated he drank a large quantity of ice water, inflamation was produced and in a few hours he was a corpse.—Paul was a good boy, with as warm a heart as breast ere wore. A large number of friends were shocked at his untimely end.

TO FARMERS.—Foutz's Cattle Powders are now regarded as the standard article of this preparation. The immense quantities of it sold yearly testify to its efficacy and popularity. They are for sale in any town from Maine to California, and we would advise our farmers to give them a fair trial and see the good results they bring about. For sale at Davenport & Co's Drug Store.

GREELEY HATS.—We have been presented with a nice Greeley hat by that popular firm, Jas. Harper & Co., of Fort Wayne. They are splendid—just as cool—and so is Greeley. This excellent hat and cap establishment are head quarters for northern Indiana, and we know from their fine stock and selection that they can give better satisfaction than all others. If you want a hat made to order go to Harper's in the Phoenix block.

SOUTH BEND was visited by a destructive fire last Monday. It originated in Studebakers large wagon shop, north of the railroad depot, and burnt the entire building and its valuble contents. The fire totally destroyed all the buildings on one square and several dwellings across the street were consumed. All the water in the neighborhood was exhausted and the citizens were obliged to stand and see the flames play havoc until they had spent their fury. The loss is reported to be about $100,000.

MRS. SPROTT, and not Mary Sprott, as we had it last week, has written a bitter satine, entitled "Thirteen Reasons why Greeley is fit for President," which appears in this issue. We admit it to our columns from the fact that it will have no force with fair, candid, reasonable men, it being made up wholly of personalities and vituperation. The public mind is not to be influenced by that kind of argument. A fair statement will always have some claim upon our attention. A monstrous rabble of words generally falls powerless and ineffective to the ground.

BALLOON ASCENSION.

Prof. Charles Rivers will make an ascension at this place on the Fourth, in his monster Balloon "Union." Charles enjoys the reputation of a first-class aeronaut, having made over two hundred ascensions. He does a magnificent trapeze act in mid air, with daring intrepidity. He says he very seldom makes a failure and then it is owing to stormy weather. He promises a first-class ascension, Providence permitting, on the Fourth. He is a clever, genial fellow, not a bit stuck up, and will be pleased to show you all about the the balloon before it ascends.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—Last Thursday eve., Albert Baumer, in the employ of Judge Ed. Randall, near Avilla, was engaged in hauling rails. The horses became frightened and ran away. Albert was thrown from the wagon, and being entangled in the lines, was dragged a considerable distance, and his head and body were frightfully mangled. Fragments of his clothing and boots were scattered along the road. When the unfortunate man was found, life was almost extinct. He was carried to the residence of Judge Randall, but expired in a few moments after.—Ligonier Banner.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—On Friday of last week a serious accident resulted in town from the careless use of fire-arms. A number of small boys started for the woods on that day, armed and equipped, for the purpose of 'playing Indian.' Among their implements of war was a pistol, and when at the south side of town, the boy having the pistol discharged it accidentally, the ball passing through the leg of Frank Leas, son of A. S. Leas, and lodging in the foot of Mrs. Yant's son. While both the wounds are very painful, no bones were broken, and both the boys will recover in a short time.—Press.

WOOL.—A quiet feeling prevails in the wool market, yet a demand for all that comes forward at following quotations:—45 to 48c. for unwashed and 57½ to 70c for tub washed. The Eastern wool trade extremely dull, caused by the manufactures bearing so heavy on the market in order to press down prices to their relative value. This season our Indiana manufactures have brought at exhorbitant prices so as to secure a supply for their own use, and so far kept the eastern wool operators out of the market. Now our home mills have got a good stock on hand and we expect a further decline, in order to meet the views of eastern buyers.

THE Democracy of Allen County convention at Fort Wayne, and nominated the following ticket: For Representatives—Jeff. C. Bowser and Mahlon Heller; for Prosecuting Attorney, Jos. S. France; for Sheriff, J. D. Hance; for Treasurer, John Ring, County Dommissioners, Jacob Hillegas, H. T. Turner; for Land Appraiser, J. E. Aikon; for Surveyor, W S. Goshorn; for Coroner, J. P. Waters.

"To Teacher."

After defraying the expense of the Institute alluded to, there remained $25 for which sum Mr. Barns had agreed to print in pamphlet form 'precedins of Institute.'

The Air Line became the Auburn Courier, with Mr. Mays editor. That gentleman consulted with parties of Mays and found that the work could not be done for that sum, and I abandoned the plan.

My bill with the county for time occupied with official business exceeded $25, with the concurence of the Auditor and Commissioners I drew an order for the excess and left the $25 in the hands of the County. I did not think that the voluntary donation of 50 cents was an extortion, many of the teachers paid nothing. I regret that "Teacher" was not one of the number, if he was not.

Not knowingly have I ever unjustly acquired or retained a cent of the money of others. There are some things which I lack which others have abundantly but integrity is not one of them.

Very Respectfully,
WM. H. MCINTOSH, Ex-Examiner.

The Northwestern Ohio Editorial Association purposes an excursion on the lakes this summer, and W. P. Walker, Esq., has offered members of the Association, and their ladies, free passes on the boats of the Vermont Central Transportation Company—$1 per day during the trip to be charged for rooms and meals. Liberal.—Toledo Blade.

Wonder if the Northern Indiana Editorial Association can't ring in on such an arrangement? Nothing would suit us better than to join our editorial brethren of Northwestern Ohio in such an excursion. The terms are certainly very liberal Can't the Excursion Committee of our Association make some similar arrangements for the 10th of July?—Goshen Times.

Consent. The Committee ought to do something pretty soon.

For anything gay in the gents' furnishing line go to Moderwell & Fowler's, at Fort Wayne. They keep all kinds of shirts, the best and prettiest collars, the nicest suspenders and other articles to be found in the city.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

On Tuesday last we had the pleasure of meeting Wm. Keyser, Vice President, J. R. Cowen, Attorney, and G. R. Dennis and W. C. Quincy, Directors, of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, on the W. Columbia. In conversation with Mr. Dennis he stated that a loan had just been negotiated in England, by the Company, for $10,000,000, with which they propose at once to build their extension from Pittsburg to Chicago, and were ready at once to place the whole line under contract, or as soon as the towns along the line had [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] visit here was to confer with our city Council in regard to the right of way through this city. They were all favorably impressed with Tiffin, and some of them expressed their belief that this would be an excellent point for the establishment of their works of their road. They left on the Thursday evening train for Defiance to look after matters in that locality. The following letter was addressed to our Railroad Committee.

TIFFIN, OHIO, June 6th, 1872.

Messrs. S. B. Sneath, W. H. Gibson and L. A. Hall.

GENTLEMEN—The line of the Baltimore, Pittsburg and Chicago Railway Company being definitely located from the Lake Erie Division of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to the western boundary of Ohio the company is now ready to advertise for bids, and let all the work on that section of the line and will do so as soon as the arrangements made between the Company and the citizens of Tiffin and Defiance are satisfactorily consummated. By those arrangements, a clear, free and unincumbered right of way is to be secured and granted to the Company from the Lake Erie Division of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to the western line of the State, together with ample facilities and grounds for freight and passenger depots, and necessary side tracks in Tiffin and Defiance.

Our chief engineer herewith submits a showing of the grounds needed in the City of Tiffin. If satisfactory arrangements can be made with the other companies whose railroads enter your city, it is the purpose of the Company to join in building a joint freight and passenger depot in Tiffin; to furnish all needed facilities to the public, and be an ornament to your city. To complete this portion of the work during the summer and coming fall requires your prompt and immediate action in securing the right of way. The Company therefore asks you to act at once Hoping, therefore, that your citizens will at once act in the matter, and thus secure this great route to the west, and the sea board.

I remain Respectfully Yours,
WM. KEYSER,
2d Vice President B. & O. Railroad Company.

These gentlemen represent that their company means business, and we have no doubt but what our Council will take early action toward securing grounds for Depot and right of way, as our people have the utmost confidence in the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and that it will do all that it promises. There is no question but what our people will heartily endorse the action of the Council in this matter. The road will be graded and in running order within twelve months from the day the contract is let and we we will then have direct communication with Pittsburg Baltimore and Washington. Let the Council hurry up their ordinance for the purchase of grounds for Railroad purposes.—Seneca Advertiser.

LOT'S OF WORK.—Now comes the busy season for the farmer. First the hay crop and corn plowing. It would be to sit down at the end of a cool shade, and watch the hands tearing into the clover and timothy. It looks so easy and don't require much effort—to lie in the long cool grass until you get sleepy, and then you can turn over and go to sleep just as easy as rolling off a log. Oh, who would not be a farmer of this kind. But plowing corn was always our best holt.—One of the most exhausting sensations we ever realized was that associated with corn plowing. We generally plowed several rows and made for a fence corner, and that's where the sensation came in.—One of the most terrible feelings one can imagine is that of being suddenly wakened up from a state of torpor engendered by this practice. It was the old man, we believe, yes, we're sure it was, that general [illegible] the waking, and [illegible] or other we never had much of an inclination to go to sleep the balance of the day. Bless [illegible] next day we could not [illegible] snooze because visions of the old man kept flitting before us, and sometimes we would make a spring in a stooping posture towards the plow that would have put to shame a catamount. We always liked it, especially when it was hot, for then we would have to blow the horses often.—There's nothing like giving a horse time on a hot day. We were often complimented that we could give them more time than anybody else on record. If there was one luxury more than another that we delighted to indulge in it was that of giving a poor tired horse rest, and the more he was the better, for we were supremely happy in knowing that the horse could not stand much in the hot sun.

Harvest time is a genial time, and about the best season for hard work. With such implements as Reapers and rakes and pitch-forks, and jugs, "for water," &c., it [illegible] lively times. [illegible] very [illegible] work [illegible] more at [illegible]. Our forte was with the &c., named above, we [illegible] and paid accordingly. We could take up a jug with a gentle grace that was really captivating. One of the first positions we ever held was that of [illegible] watching the [illegible] and the boys sweating to keep up. How we did work. Everybody was enthusiastic, especially the reaper. If any one should want a good hand for this position they can count on us any time.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Announcements for Sheriff and Treasurer $5, Recorder and Commissioner $3, all others $3; invariably in advance.

MR. EDITOR, Please announce the name of Dr. J. J. HOOPINGARNER as a candidate for the office of Treasurer of DeKalb Co., subject to the decision of the Democratic County Convention, and oblige

MANY VOTERS.

The Convention at Kendallville to nominate a candidate for Congress, must have been a turbulent one, from the accounts we have received by various members thereof. There seem to be considerable bad feeling between the Baker and Tousleyman, so much so that His Honor was exasperated to making a speech in which he went for the Baker folks. After a number of ballots, without changing results, Maj. Sailor, of Huntington, was brought in and won the race. Baker said you can't have it Tousley, and Tousley said you can't have it Baker, and so they cut their own noses off to spite their face.

James I. Best was nominated for Judge of the Circuit Court. This is an excellent choice, as we know Mr. Best possesses all the ability and qualification necessary to discharge all the responsible duties of the position.

Judge Clapp was re-nominated for Common Pleas Judge.

Mr. Hey Moon of Warsaw, was nominated for Circuit Prosecutor.

J. H. Morris, of Waterloo, was nominated for Common Pleas Prosecutor.

THE current issue of Lippincott's Magazine, which forms the opening of a new volume, contains a large number of interesting contributions. The initial article 'Crumbs from the Rhineland' by Alice Grey, is a sprightly, varied, and finely illustrated description of travel and adventure in one of the most picturesque regions of Europe. 'Sunstroke,' by H. C. Wood, Jr., who is one of the most industrious and intelligent medical investigators in this country, is discriminating and highly suggestive treatise, in a popular vein, upon the nature and symptoms of sunstroke, and the proper method of treating it. 'Virginia in Water Colors' is a gossipy, attractive sketch of life, manners, and scenery at the principal springs and other fashionable resorts of the Old Dominion. It is from the pen of Mary B. Dodge. 'Travels in the Air,' an illustrated article of much interest, furnishes an account of some thrilling adventures in ballooning, and describes the singular and beautiful aerial phenomena [illegible]

This is what the Trade Circular published at Indianapolis says of SUTERMEISTER, BECKER & BOND, Architects and Contractors and dealer in Stone and Marble, Fort Wayne Ind.

The firm of Messrs. Sutermeister, Becker & Bond is doing the most extensive business of any similar establishment in the Northwest, and its work is regarded everywhere as among the best produced in this country. Possessing abundant capital, they are able to carry out any contracts they enter into. They have acquired an enviable reputation for promptness, reliability and for finishing work in [illegible] manner.

The high character of this firm is sufficient guarantee of a faithful performance of duty, and those who entrust orders to them will reap an advantage not attainable elsewhere.

In addition to their business of Architects and Builders, they make a specialty of Granite Monuments, and in these are not to be surpassed either in beauty or elegance of design; in the quality of stone; nor in that still more requisite desideratum, found in reasonableness of price. They are also among the largest dealers in Marble in the country, beautiful Monuments, in Lindenwood and other cemeteries, attesting the superiority of their work.

Those who wish Monuments will find it greatly to their advantage to call upon Messrs. Sutermeister, Becker & Bond, as they are amply prepared in all departments of the trade to give unqualified satisfaction.

Persons at a distance disirous of procuring Monuments in Granite or Marble can, by communicating with this firm, have designs furnished, or one of the firm will visit them with specimens and designs if desired. They are prepared to furnish building stone of all kinds, and all orders entrusted to their care will be promptly tilled, and at low prices.

We notice with pleasure the growing popularity of our old friend, at Ft. Wayne. Their prosperity is deserved, and we advise all who need any thing in their line to deal with them. Capt A. Sutermeister, to our personal knowledge, is one of the best architects in the country.

All the members of the firm are genial good hearted fellows, glad to see all who call on them and ready at all times to furnish information or estimates of material &c. In fact, as the Columbia City Post says, "their latch string is always out. Give them a call.

PALACE OF FASHION.

What to buy and Where to find it

From the time that Adam and Eve partook of the forbidden fruit and discovered their nakedness, and realized that it was not just the thing to always go just as nature had clothed them, men and women have [illegible] the manner of dress, and to-day there is not a nation on the face of the globe but what has its peculiar fashion, and most of them are far from being like the laws of the Medes and Persains, but on the contrary, change with the seasons and caprice of the rulers To-day it is universally admitted that American women and men are the best looking and the best dressed of any people in the world, and our fashions change every season. The question is frequently ask, where is the best place to buy the prettiest and best clothing. In answer we would say that the Palace of Fashion has the finest stock of goods ever opened in this city. We will insure those who buy at the Palace of Fashion that they will get the best goods and at as low prices as could be had at any establishment in the West. Goods always in style and active accommodating clerks are kept busy day and evening showing and selling them.—Remember the place, Palace of Fashion, one price [illegible], No. 1 Keystone Block, Ft. Wayne Ind.

MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the stockholders of the Building, Loan and Savings Association will be held on Thursday Evening, June 27,

at the Court House, at which time the monthly installments will be sold to the highest bidder.

J. B. CASEBEER, Pres't.

The following is a dispatch received ten days ago from our buyer in New York:

"Messrs. Rothschild & Bros., proprietors of the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone Block, Fort Wayne, Ind. Will you take 30 per cent advance for the goods we sold you and not move them from here. Their reply was 'No, send them on at once as we intend to give our customers the benefit of it.

Administrator's Sale.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, Administrator of the estate of Jacob Snyder, deceased, will on the 5th day of July, 1872, at the late residence of said deceased, in Jackson township, DeKalb county, Indiana, sell at public auction the personal property of said decedent, consisting of Horses, cattle, hogs, wagons, Saddles, harness, farming utensils, such as, Reaper, Sled, Mower, sulky Rake, etc., grain in the bushel, grain in the ground, also a set of carpenter tools, together with household and kitchen furniture, etc. On all sales of three dollars and under cash must be paid in [illegible] and on all sales over three dollars purchasers must on the day of sale, give notes with approved security, nine months after date, payable with interest from date, waiving valuation and appraisement laws.

A. PROVINES, Adm'r.

June 11, 1872.

A farmer north of Wabash recently killed 250 cut worms within a space of three feet square, and it wasn't a good day for [illegible]

It is considered doubtful by some whether the Fort Wayne & Pacific R. R. is built this year or not.

A Yankee was boasting of his decent to an Irishman, and claimed that his ancestors came over in the ship May-Flower; and mine, said Paddy, came over in the ship Jamebug, only a month later.

"Why, Emily, how do you do?" "I am very well, Julia. I celebrated my wooden wedding last week." "Why, I didn't know you were married.—How did you celebrate it?" 'By marrying a blockhead.'

An elderly maiden lady, hearing for the first time that matches are made in Heaven, declared that she didn't care a straw how soon she left this sinful world for a better land.

A Week Day Marriage.—One day last week, in Chickasaw county, Mr. Lorenzo Day, married Miss Martha, Week whereupon a local "Poie,' got off the following:

A day is made, a week is lost,
But time should not complain,
There will soon be little days enough,
To make the week again

The lady (?) who yesterday called the attention of another to our patched breeches, whereat they both laughed so hartily, is informed that a new pair will be purchaced when her husband's "little bill" is settled; it has been due nearly a year. Don't criticise a printers dress to closely while wearing silks purchased with money due him. Tell your husband to send us $23.70 at once, and save the cost of an entire suit.—Exchange.

"He who would thrive must rise at five." So says the proverb, though there is more rhyme than reason in it: for if

He who'd thrive must rise at five,
It must follow, literally, that
He who'd thrive more must rise at four, and it will insure a consequence, that,
He who'd still more thriving be
Must leave his bed at turn of three,
And who this latter would outdo,
Will rouse him at the strike of two.
And by wax of climate to it all it
[illegible] good, that
[illegible]
Must ever rise as soon as one.
But the best illustration would be,
He who'd flourish best of all,
Should never go to bed at all.

"Dat Ish Goot."

[illegible] was [illegible] Louis corner of Freeman and Hopkins streets, Cincinnati, about three weeks ago, he observed that at another table, seated with several others, a German, who seemed uneasy and anxious as if there might have been a Franco-Prussian disturbance between his beer and himself. Presently in ran a little girl, her face radient with smiles exclaiming—

"Oh, father? we've got a little baby at home!"

"Dat ish goot," said the Dutchman as the anxiety disappeared from his countenance; "fill up der glasses."

Not many minutes elapsed before in rushed the little girl again with the announcement—

"Oh, father, we've got two little boys at home!"

The Duchman looked a great deal astonished and not at all gratified at this little family redundancy, but rising at length to the magnutude of the occasion, he said—

"Vell den, dat ish also goot. Fill up der glasses."

In a few moments again appeared the radient messenger, with the astounding proclamation—

"Oh, father we've got three little boys at home!"

This was to much even for Teutonic impressiveness. There was no farther call for glasses.

"Vell, den," says he, "I goes up dere and stops der whole tam pisness!"

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Because it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

Advertising alone does not produce success. The thing which is advertised must have intrinsic merit, or else large advertising will eventually do it more harm than good. If you have anything which you know to be good, advertise it thoroughly, and you will be sure to succeed; if it is poor, don't praise it, for people will soon discover you are lying.

Such is the policy of the Burlington route, which runs to three great regions in the West: 1st, to Omaha, connecting with the great Pacific roads. 2d, to Lincoln, the capital of Nebraska, and all that beautiful region south of the Platte, filled with railroad lands and homesteads. 3d, to St. Joseph, Kansas City and all Kansas points.

The roads are splendidly built, have the best bridges, finest cars, the Miller platform and coupler, and the safety air brake (to prevent the loss of life that is everywhere else happening); Pullman's sleeper's, Pullman dining cars, large and powerful engines (to make quick time and good connections), and are in a word the best equipped roads in the west. So that if you desire to go safely, surely, quickly and comfortably to any point in Southern Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, or on the Pacific roads, be sure that you go "By Way of Burlington."

Kicked by a Mule.

Jake Johnson had a mule. There was nothing remarkable in the mere fact of his being the possessor of such an animal but there was something peculiar about the mule. He, the animal, could kick higher, hit harder on the slighest provocation, and act uglier than other mule on record.

One morning, riding on his property to market, Jake met Jim Boggs, against whom he had an old but concealed grudge. He knew that Boggs' weakness lay in bragging and betting; therefore he saluted him accordingly:

How are you, Jim? Fine morning.

Hearty, Squire, replied Jim. Fine weather. Nice mule that you have. Will he do to bet on?

Bet on? Guess he will that. I tell you, Boggs, he is the best mule in this country. Paid five hundred dollars for him.

Great smash! Is that so? ejaculated Jim.

Solid truth, every word of it. Tell you confidential, Jim, I'm taking him down for better purposes. I'll bet he can kick a fly off from any man without hurting him.

Now, look here, Squire, said Jim, I'm not a betting man, but I'll bet you on that myself.

Jim, there is no use; don't bet; I don't want your money.

Don't be alarmed, Squire; I will take such bets as them every time.

Well, if you are determined to bet, I will risk a small stake—say about five dollars.

All right, Squire, you're my man. But who will he kick the fly off? There is none but and I; you try it.

No, said Johnson, I have to be by the mule's head to order him.

Oh, yass, said Jim. Then probable I am the man. Well, I will do it; but you are to bet ten against my five if I risk the thing.

All right, quoth the Squire. Now, here is a fly on your shoulder; stand still—And Johnson adjusted the mule. Whist, Jervey, said he.

The mule raised his heels with such velocity and force that Boggs rose in the air like a bird, and alighted on all fours in a muddy ditch bang up against a rail fence.

Rising in a towering rage he exclaimed:

Yass, that is smart! I knew the darned mule couldn't do it. You had that all put up. I would not be kicked like that again for fifty dollars. You can just fork over them stakes.

Not so fast, Jim; Jervey did just what I said he could; that is, kick a fly off a man without hurting him. You see the mule is not hurt by the operation. However, if you are not satisfied we will try it again.

The duce take you! growled Jim. I'd rather have a barn fall on me than try it again. Keep the stakes, but don't say anything about it.

And Boggs trudged on in bitterness of soul, murmuring to himself, Sold, by thunder, and kicked by a mule.

Fashion Gosip.

All the light dresses this summer will be looped up with large velvet bows with black ends.

The feathered-edged ribbons are very much used this season for sashes, bows and bonnet strings.

The most beautiful belle in New York society at present is a Spanish lady, said to be the most beautiful woman in America.

The most fashionable style of coiffure at present is known as the Louis Quinze dressed high with a coron of flowers and a small aigrette.

A new style of trimming round hats is with a long scarf of tulle edged with wide fringe, which is wound loosely around and fastened with a jet anchor or cross.

It is now proposed that those ladies who wish to wear real hair mattresses on their heads surmounted by several stories of hat, with a parterre of flowers to crown the whole, shall insert in their head dress for the theater an opera glass to rest on the top of the head, ranging fore and aft so that gentlemen sitting behind them can see through it to the stage.

Dr. Cox was going out of my church one evening, there was a shower of rain falling outside, and the people were therefore detained at the door and did not pass out as rapidly as usual; and he said to a distinguished clergyman of the Baptist denomination, then in Pierrepoint street, who was walking out with him:

Brother what is the reason of this delay?

I think, answered the other, there is a shower outside.

Ah said the Doctor, there are quite a number of your persuasion here; they out not to be afraid of water.

No, said the brother, it is not the water but the sprinkling that they are afraid of.

Ah, said Dr Cox, I know they are afraid of that; and yet it comes from heaven.—Dr. Storrs.

A subscriber to the St. Louis Republican in Madison county, Arkansas, who says he has passed his three score and ten years, writes that Greeley stock is raising rapidly in his county and that he has never witnessed so thorough a revolution in the minds of the people, the campaign of 1840 approaching more nearly to this movement than any other he ecollects.

Three Chances to get Married.

A Yankee old bachelor was once bantered on the subject of matrimony by a young girl, who told him she didn't believe he ever found a woman who would have him.

Yes I did, replied he, I had three chances to get married, and they blusted so I never tried a fourth.

Pray, how was that? inquired the young lady.

Why you see, I courted deacon Hawkin's darter Deborah—Deb, they used to call her—and so one night we made it up between us to get married. Well, while we were going to the parson's, I accidentally slouched my foot into a mud puddle and spattered mud all over Deb's new ground, it was made out of one of her grandmother's chintz petticoats, and she was so proud of the rig that she got mad as hops.

Wa'al, we got to the parson's the ceremony began, and he asked Deb if she would take me for her lawful wedded husband. No, says she, I've taken a mislikin to him since I left home.

The parson laughed, and so did his wife and darter, and I felt streaked as thunder while Deb went off in a miff.

Wa'al, it was all up, of course, for the time being; but I was determined to have some satisfaction for such mean treatment, so I began to shine up to her again, I gin her a new string of beeds, a few kisses and some other notions, until finally we made it all up, and we went to the parson's a second time. We was stood out in the middle of the room, and he axed me if I would take Debrah for my lawful weded wife? No! said I, I have taken a mislikin to her since I was here last.

This was a stunner to poor Deb., who turned white as a sheet, and the parson's wife ran for her smellin salts.

I began to relint a little when I saw how she took it; but it proved to be only a mad fit after all, for in a few minutes more she was skitting away for home, lively as a cricket.

It was some weeks before I could bring round the gal agin to let me spark her, and it proved rather an expensive job too, for I had to buy her a new calker grown which cost nigh on to four dollars. That fotched her, and made a sure thing of it So we went a third time to the parson's, expecting to be tied so fast that all natur couldn't separate us. We axed him to be gin the ceremony, as everything was now ready.

I shan't do any such thing! said he, for I've taken a mislikin to both of you since you were here last.

Thereupon Deb burst out crying and the parson burst out scolding; and I burst out the front door and put for home.—Next day, hearing that Deb had licked the parson and pulled out nearly all of his wife's hair, I concluded that my chances with such a fillybuster would be rather squally, so I let her slide.

Judge Baker Will Sing for Greeley.

Our interviewer met Judge Baker, of Vincennes, yesterday, and informed him that Colonel Allen had stated that at least half of the Republicans in Knox Co., were in favor of the Cincinnati nominations, and that he (the Judge) was entitled to the distinction of being the only Democrat in that county who did not go for Honest Old Horace.

The Judge is a fine story teller, and proceeded to explain his position by the following good one:

Once there was a good old Baptist preacher, whose custom it was every Sunday morning on entering his pulpit to open his well worn hymn book at random and read the first hymn that caught his eye. Some wicked boys one day got hold of his hymn book and pasted in a leaf containing the famous, but not very orthodox hymn, 'Old father Grimes.'

Next Sunday morning the good parson entered his sanctuary, carefully adjusted his spectacles, picked up his book and read to the congregation:

Old Grimes is dead, that good old man,
We ne'er shall see him more.

He stopped, rubbed his glasses, examined his book to see that he had made no mistake, and proceeded:

He used to wear an old grey coat,
All buttoned down before.

He then laid down the book, and tearfully but firmly addressed the congregation:

Bretheren, I've used that book twenty years. I never came across that hymn before, but it's thar, in the book and it's all right. Sing.

So, said the Judge, I've been a Democrat a long while, and never thought of such a thing as being asked to vote for Greeley, but make the best music I can for him under the circumstances.

The Reason Why.

The Mormons tell a good story of Brigham Young. Among the applicants for the special privilege of taking a second wife, there came, one day, a brother of very doubtful character; and something like the following dialogue ensued:

So you want another wife?

Yes, if you please, Brother Brigham.

Well, the short of the matter is, that you can't have one.

Why can't I have one as well as the other Saints?

So you want to know the whole story, do you?

Yes, I should like to know why I can't have more than one wife, as well as the rest of 'em?

Well, you shall know, then, in short order. I want your race to die out!

AMUSING.

The passengers on one of the Baker street cars laughed some yesterday morning at a scene between the conductor and a well dressed young man from Georgetown. As the car was passing the avenue the young man at the time standing on the platform taking easy, it with one foot on a trunk, he was approached by the conductor and his fare demanded. He quietly passed over his five cents.

I demand twenty-five cents for that trunk.

Twenty-five cents, you say? I will not pay it.

Then I shall put it off.

You had better not or you may be sorry for it.

Conductor pulls strap, stops car, dumps trunk on avenue, starts car, and after going some two squares, approaches the young man, who was as still as a Summer morning, and in an angry mood says: Now I have put your trunk off what are you going to do about it?

Well I don't propose to do anything about it: it's no concern of mine; it was not my trunk.

Then why did'nt you tell me?

Because you did not ask me, and I told you you'd be sorry for it.

Then go inside the car.

Oh, no, you're good enought company for me out here.

At this juncture a portly German emerges from the car, and angrily says, Mine Gott? you feller, where is mine drunk,

My friend, I think that is your trunk down on the avenue.

Who puts him off? I will see about dot.

The car was stopped, and shortly afterwards the conductor was seen to come sweating up with the trunk on his back—a part of the performance he did not enjoy half as well as the passengers.

An Unfortunate Mercantile Venture.

Luke Lurk and Jonah Pitfall sat astride of a cotton bale, on a North River pier, and debated their desperate fortunes.—The form of Tom Swallowtail, the tailor, staggering down the street, suggested an idea. They would run Tom's shop while spree lasted; and this sketch tells how they were SUITED AND NONSUITED.

Accordingly they opened the shop of the absent Swallo tail, a tailor, more devoted to his turkey than his goose, and then walked down the Bowery to Chatham street for a victim. Soon they espied a countryman feeling of the tails of coats and the bottoms of pantaloons, which hung and swung, wooing purchasers. Lurk and Pitfall soon out talked the Hebrew salesman, and convinced the rustic that his best policy was to go at once with them to the extensive establishment of Messrs. Lurk & Pitfall, and there be measured for a suit by the famous cutter, the great Luke Lurk himself. The countryman complied, on arrival at the shap Pitfall assumed great loftiness toward the intended victim, but showed the most profound reverence for Mr. Lurk, who, as head of the firm, put on a look of tremendous dignity, and pulling out a dirty handkerchief, wiped his forehead leisurely, and then proceeded to take the man's measure.

Put down his name, said Lurk, with the tape in his hand. What name?

Rufus Raw.

Put down Rufus Raw, Esq, Mr. Pitfall, and be careful to take everything correctly.

Certainly, Mr. Lurk, certainly.

Our system is peculiar, Mr. Raw, as you will readily perceive. We make it a point to guage a man thoroughly; get his bearings, some knowledge of his character, and so fourth, and then sir, you understand, we take his measure, and know how to suit both his form and his feelings—you understand.

Ya a-as, said Raw, looking confused.

Where were you raised?

In Vermont.

Will you be so kind as to give me your age?

Swallowing a Sword.

It looks like a hazardous exploit to push a steel blade from the mouth down into the stomach. It is one of those astonishing feats which take well with the multitude.

In the first place, instead of a sword, a polished bar of steel with smooth edges is carefully measured, so that when the bar of the hilt rests on the front teeth, the end extremity exactly reaches the lower level of the stomach. Throwing the head back so as to make a straght line, the instrument glides down about twenty-two inches without the slightest difficulty.—Anybody who has moral courage enough to imitate professed sword-swallowers can do so with impunity.

Surgeons are constantly performing a vastly greater feat without exciting admiration, and sometimes without being thanked or paid. They direct a flexible tube into the stomach and actually pump out materials that would end life tragically if allowed to remain.

A stomach pump is of such importance in meeting with the contingencies of humanity that both physicians and druggists should always have them in good working order, ready for any emergency. Many valuable lives have been lost just because a stomach pump could not be procured before some deleterious article, perhaps by mistake, was absorbed into the system.

Hager's Revenge.

"Rolf, you have not done your duty to-night; you have, been out here smoking instead of smoking. Come, I shall not let you off any longer, I want some one to dance with Miss Lenox; she is a stranger, and we must be polite to her."

"Have mercy on me, Kate, it is too warm to dance to-night."

"Nonsense! You mean you are too lazy."

"Well, I don't know which would be the worse, to dance or to have you talk to me."

"Impudent!"

"If you won't go away I suppose I must come."

Rising languidly, Rolf offered his arm to his sister, and together they entered the dancing saloon.

"There she is, the young girl by the window," said Mrs. Adams to Rolf.

"Heavens! Kate, why must I always dance with the ugliest girls in you rooms?"

"Well, she is not pretty, Rolf, but then beauty is not everything. No doubt she talks well," returned Mrs. Adams in that gently pitying tone which a pretty woman affects when speaking of a lack of beauty in another woman.

"Upon the principle that an ugly person is always virtuous. Lead on, Kate! The victim is ready."

"Hush, Rolf! I'm afraid she heard you."

In a few seconds more the introduction was performed, and Rolf and Miss Lenox were seated alone.

"You are are a stranger in our part of the universe, I believe?" said Rolf, seaing thet she evinced no intention to begin the conversation.

Her eyes had been fastened on the floor, and at his words she blushed deeply; apparantly with a great effort she pronounced the word "Yes."

"Evidentlp from the country, painfully shy, and not at all pretty," was his inward comment.

"Have you liked your visit here, so far?"

"No—Yes! I mean yes, very much," she answered, turning red and white by turns.

Rolf Ranleigh looked at her curiously. "By Jove, I might almost think that she is in love with me; love at first sight!" How the girl blushes! thought he.

"Have you been living in the country, Miss Lenox?" She'll I'm deuced inquisitive! I don't want to know where she lives, but she won't talk, and I must say something. The latter part of this speech was delivered internally.

"In the country, I believe," returned Hagar, confusedly.

"She believes," Is the girl a fool?" This was also to himself.

A few more effectual efforts on his part, anp the conversation ceased. Rolf was getting slightly piqued at his failure to draw her ott, and he reflected wrathfully that he was not playing a very brilliant part.

At length in desperatson he proposed that they should join the dance; to his infinite relief she consented. After a few turns he led her to a seat, and in a short time excused himself. Passing out upon the piazza he threw himself into a chair and gave a sigh of intense relief.

"Rolf, old fellow, you look as if a mountain had been lifted from your shoulders," said a young man who was standing near him.

"You show infinite penetration. A mountain, in the shape of a girl, has just been taken off them.

"The girl you were dancing with?"

"Yes, the same. You witnessed the sacrifice, then. When Kate gives parties, I always dance with the ugly girls. This one was not only ugly, but a fool." In a like strain Rolf gave free vent to his thoughts, and, as fortune would have it, Miss Lenox was seated inside, at the very window outside of which he was. At the sound of her own name she rose to her feet, but seeing that the throng was so great that she could not pass, she quietly reseated herself. As she listened to his candid expression of his opinion of herself, a slightly sarcastic smile rested on her face, but it was the only evidence she heard.

That evening, when she had closed her door, she walked straight to the mirror, and pushing back her black hair, gazed intently at her face.

"No, it is certainly not a pretty face," she answered, composedly, as if in an answer to a question. "But I did not know that I could be such a fool as to care for a man's opinion of me. Hagar Lenox, I am ashamed of you. My lord thinks that I must be in love with him, because I blushed when he spoke. I think, before we part, sir, I will undeceive you." For a long time she sat with her hands folded and her splendid dark eyes looking dreamily before her; at length she rose to her feet, and laughing in a low tone, said, while her eyes glittered brilliantly, "I think Mr. Ranleigh, before we part, you will a knowledge that I am not quite a fool, neither am I in love with you.

Next morning Hagar entered the breakfast room rather late—there was only one vacant seat, and that by Mr. Ranleigh. She seated herself by him, smiling inwardly at his half concealed dissatisfaction. At first they merely exchanged good morning, but Hagar exerted herself, and in a few minutes he found himself, to his great surprise drawn into a lively conversation with the woman who the night before could not open her lips. As he talked to her he marveled why he could have called her ugly; but, truth to say, Hagar Lenox silent, and Hagar Lenox talking, were two different persons. Perhaps, as she talked to Rolf, she raished her 'midnight eyes oftener to his face than was absolutely necessary. Few men can resist a woman who is detemined to please, and Rolf was not an exception to the rule.

Before breakfast was over he acknowledged that Miss Lenox was a very charming girl, and in week he called himself a fool for ever thinking her stupid. So the golden summer days slipped by, filled up with all kinds of gayeties and pleasures. Rolf managed to be always near Hagar, and as his masculine friends rallied him about his flirtation with Miss Lenox, and all, his feminine looked daggers at Hagar who smiled sweetly, and seemed perfectly unconscious of their jealousy, and encouraged Rolf the more.

Rolf was soon forced to acknowledge to himself that his flirtation was no longer a flirtation, but verging rapidly to real love. At first he put aside the inca angrily. He in love with a penniless school teacher. He determined not to go near her until this idle fancy had died out—he would leave the house that morning. But, alas, for human nature! when he entered the breakfast-room, and she smiled at him, he discovered that there was no need for his speedy departure, and so he lingered on, each day becoming more perilously sweet.

One evening they strolled down together to the sea shore. The pale moon had just risen, and her silver rays flooded berch and ocean with light. The low murmur of the waves as they lapped the shore was the only sound that broke the silence. Presently Miss Lenox spoke: "How peaceful and calm the sea looks I have often wished I could go to sleep beneath those cool, glittering waves and wake up again."

"It is hardly a natural wish from the lips of a young girl, Miss Lenox. I confess I should not like to give life up as this." And he looked at her tenderly.

Hagar noted the look, and complimented him upon his flirting, in her thoughts.

Perhaps it does not sound well, but please remember that a village school marm does not naturally find her path strewn with roses," returned she laughing rather bitterly.

"God knows, Miss Hagar, that I would willingly take all your troubles on my shoulders, and leave only the roses of life, were it possible," said he, earnestly.

"I hardly think you would be accepted as schoolmistress in M——. I doubt your qualifications for teaching, and your patience to drum A A C into the heads of stupid children, and that is my particular burden," laughed she, lightly.

"Hagar, I must speak. You must hear me—I love you better than my life. Give me the right to make your path smooth through life."

"Admirably spoken! Tather high flown though, was it net, Mr. Ranleigh?" suid Hagar, believing him to be only flirting.

"Hagar!—"

"Miss Lennox, if you please.'

"Miss Lennox—Hagar, you wrong me. I love you truly, devotedly, and earnestly as man ever loved woman."

"That is certainly an honor done me; it would be greater if I could believe it," returned Hagar scornfully.

"Hagar, Hagar have you no mercy, no pity? Aare you a woman, or only stone, to stand there and taunt a man who pleaps before you for life or death,' cried he passionately.

"Do you really do me the honor to love me? Excuse me if I doubt it. I have grown no better looking since that night you spoke of me in such a complimentary manner on the piazza," she answered coldly.

"Hagar, that was before I knew you. You will not take such a cruel revenge on me for words thoughtlessly spoken? I thought you liked me a little, Hagar; out of pity answer me."

"You are mistaken. I do not care for you. My only answer is NO," she returned nonchalantly.

He had been standing before her, and nw he came nearer, caught her hands tightly in his own and said sternly:

"Hagar, look into my eyes, straight into them, and tell me that you do not oare for me."

"Does it not strike you that you are taking an unfair advantage of me? Remove you hands. I do not care for you." Answered Hagar, haughtily throwing back her head and looking into his eyes.

His face blanched, but he held her hands tighter. Then he loosed them but it was only to throw his arms around her and press her to his heart. Closer, and still closer he strained him his lips clung to hers in a long, burning kiss—and then his arms fell at his side.

'I ask your pardon; shall we return?'

Hagar, too much surprised and stunned to speak or even realize what had happened, silently retraced her steps. At the hall door he raised his hat, saying, coldly—

Good-bye, Miss Lexon; allow me to compliment you on your revenge.

That night Rolf Ranleigh left, and in a few days Hagan returned to her school and to the weary drudgery of her life. A nameless something seemed to have gone from her life, leaving it cold add void, what it was she knew not. The glorious glowing autumn days which followed were ever after remembered as the dearest, saddest in her life. Gradually came the conviction that she loved the man whom she had so heartlessly, cruelly repulsed; loved him as a woman loves but once in her life, and loved him hopelessly too, for he would never return after what had passed. Ah, I deserve it, she would moan to herself aily after day.

Whether she had loved him all along, or whether the burning kiss he had pressed on her lips wakened all her clumbering soul he knew not she was on stone, but a true-hearted woman who had discovered when too late that she had a heart by the bitter pain gnawing at it.

So the year passed and once more it was the golden summer time. Hagar's little cottage faced the sea, and one evening as the sun cast his last quivering rays on the water, she stole out and going down to the beach she placed up and down, thinking of the year before. Her eyes were bent on the ground, and after some time had passed in this way, she raised them and saw a gentleman standing a few feet from her; it was Rolf Ranleigh. For some time they stood looking at each other. Hagar's mind was in perfect chaos, the only distinct thought was that she could now ask Rolf's pardon for her conduct to him. Acting on the impulse she came quickly to his side and said—

Mr. Ranliegh, I behaved shamefully to you; will you forgive me? she raised her eyes to his, and something she saw there impolled her to say in a broken, hesitating voice, blushing deeply the while.

And Mr. Ranleigh—Rolf—if you care—for my—love now—it is yours.' At these last words she shyly extended her hands to him. Rolf caught her in his arms, and drew her closely to him, so close that she could feel the tumultuous throb of his heart against her own, and once more his lips clung to hers, and his eyes looked into hers with a world of passionate tenderness.

At length his happiness found words. Hagar, "I thought I would come and catch one more glimpse of your dear face before I left America forever, but I need not go now, need I little girl?

Not if my love can keep you, Rolf?

'And Hagar, are you satisfied with your revenge, or will you make me wretched for a few more years? asked he teasingly.

Now, Rolf, I will if you don't—but Rolf stopped all further threats by by pressing his lips to hers.

Horrible Suicide.

Two remarkable suicides recently took place in Paris. A strong, able-bodied man, who wished to shuffle off his mortal coil, took a large rope, reaching about half down from the fourth story. He then secured one end of the rope firmly, and tied the other end not about his ankle.—Fastened in this manner he made a leap from the window. Of course, when he reached the end of the rope he came crashing against the wall of she house with such force that his brains were scattered upon the wall and the people below. The other sought death by tying his hands and feet, and then sticking his head between his bed slats. He was found upright, but reversed, and appears to have made great efforts to escape from the trap he had so carefully prepared.

What it was About.

Well, now that puts me in mind of two old fellows down in Kentucky that had been the best friends in the world—for thirty years—never had a cross word, and would do anything for each other. They got into a top buggy and rode down to Lexington on business. You see they lived about six miles out of Lexington.—One was named Burr, and the other Clark About four miles from Lexington they passed a tract of land which belonged to a man named Baker. It had a brook running through a gully on it.

Tom, says Burr, coming to the gully, if Baker wanted to build a pond, all he would have to do would be to throw a wall across that gully.

Yes, says Clark, but Baker don't want a pond.

Well, replied Burr, raising himself up, I didn't say he wanted a pond, did I? say if he wanted a pond, all he would have to do would be to throw a wall across that gully.

Well, exclaimed Clark, firing up in his turn, I did'nt say that you did say he wanted a pond, did I? All that I said was that Baker did'nt want any pond.

Well, shouted Burr, in an angry tone, I did'nt say that you did say that I said he wanted a pond. I said if he wanted a pond, all he would have to do would be to throw a wall across the gully.

Well, said Clark now thoroughly enraged, you are a blamed old fool and I won't ride with you any further. Stop the wagon.

So Burr stopped the wagon, said the Blue-grass man and Clark wa ked all the way to Lexing before he would ride with him. That was seven years ago, and the cussed old fools have never spoken to one another since.—N. Y. Sun.

GUY PLUM, Chairman.

We have delayed our paper over three hours waiting for news from the Baltimore Convention, but nothing of much importance has been received as yet. Next week we will give them in full.

Our Republican friends are greatly distressed at the prospect of having Greeley against Grant. They are furnishing a thousand reasons why honest Democrats cannot and ought not to vote for him—Some of them insist he is still a double breasted dyed in the wool Radical, but if that is the case, they should not object to having him elected. There is dreadful amount of consternation somewhere.

The Philadelphia Post, a Republican paper of influence, has changed front and is now giving a hearty support to Horace Greeley. It remarks that the preliminary Presidential campaign is ended, and the people must choose between Horace Greeley and Ulysses S. Grant. "Our choice is Greeley. It has not been made in haste. —Against hope we have awaited the Philadelphia Convention, giving it the benefit of the doubt that it might represent the wishes of so many earnest and independent Republicans, and nominate for the Presidency a man upon whom the whole party could unite. This would have been the event had the Convention been chosen by the people. But the people had very little to do with it. It was the creation of the administration, the expression of the President's will, and in our deliberate opinion an insult to American manhood and independence. We cannot support Gen. Grant, for we do not believe him to be fit to be President of the United States."

—The Cincinnati movement is rolling up accreations like a snow-ball, and already assumes a formidable size. A committee of Germans waited upon Mr. Greeley on Monday of last week to inform him that a German Democratic Convention would meet at Baltimore July 7th, to urge his endorsement upon the National Convention. The committee was composed of distinguished German journalists and others. The colored men who have been roped into "Grant Clubs" are also repudiating the allegiance thrust upon them and sending letters by the score to the Liberal headquarters in New York announcing their determination to "go for Greeley. As many as fifteen presidents of Grant Clubs sent in such statement in one day, among them one who is a Federal office-holder Mean time Judge Davis has written a letter to the Labor Reformers, absolutely withdrawing his name from the ticket, and stating in addition that he will not appear at Baltimore as a rival to Greeley. In short, the canvass is narrowing down to Grant and Greeley, with wholesome desertions from the former to the latter, and with the enthusiasm increasing in the Democratic party in favor of an endorsement of the Cincinnati movement in Baltimore.

Hon. James M. Ashley addressed thousands of Liberal Republicans at Toledo, on Friday evening last. His speech was a most scathing review of the corruptions of the present administration, and his hearers were wild with enthusiasm for the old farmer of Chappaqua. Notwithstanding the Greeley and Reform army is coming as the fire sweeps the prairie, carrying everything in its work, the office-holders and old fogy apologists for Grant's corruption stick to their deserted and sinking ship.

Carl Schurz closed his speech in the Senate upon the sale of arms to France with the following eloquent and appropriate sentiment:

"As for me, I have fulfilled what I consider a solemn duty in warning the Senate and the American people of their danger. I rejoice to see a spirit sweeping over the land which makes the patriotic citizen rise above the partisan, breaking the fetters which have so long cramped every free movement and promising to restore to all the full liberty of political conscience. May that spirit be victorious, for surely the republic stands in great need of its speedy triumph, and I fervently hope that in the struggle which is now upon us the surest means will be found to unite, upon the most honorable and most fruitful ground, for a common, irresistible effort, all the forces that can and ought to work together for that end."

WHO FOR CONGRESS.

The near approach of the time when the Democratic Congressional Convention will meet, naturally makes Democrats of the district inquire, who for Congress? The desire of all who want an able Representative in Congress is to select a candidate upon whom the Democratic and Liberal sentiment of the district can unite. In looking over the district we know of no one who would more completely fill the bill than our old friend Hon. E. V. Long of Kosciusko County. His name has been suggested by a large number of Democrats and Liberals over the district and we have no doubt if nominated he would command more votes than any other candidate which could be named. He is a gentleman of large ability, a ready and brilliant debater, and a man of unexceptionable character Whitley County is heart and soul for him, and we think the entire district will be when his claims are considered. —Columbia City Post.

Pennsylvania and Indiana.

These two States may be regarded as pivots upon which the Presidential election will turn. As they go in October, so will the great contest go in November. They have been closely contested for years, and a few thousand votes will decide the fate of both. In 1868 the Republican candidate for Governor in Indiana was elected by 961 majority, and Grant by 9,572. In 1870 the Democratic Secretary of State was choosen by a majority of 2,568.—The latter, however, was not regarded as a severe party test. In Pennsylvania Governor Geary, Republican, carried the State in 1869 by 4.596 and in 1871 the Republican Auditor General had a majority of 11,315 net.—These figures speak for themselves.

The Democratic tickets in both States are of the very best, and the contrast with the Republican side is so striking as to excite general remark.—The candidates for Governor are men of national repute, the purest character, and of conspicuous ability. Mr. Hendricks and Mr. Buckalew are known throughout the country for their qualities as statesmen, and their eminence as citizens. They deservedly command the confidence of the public and are worthy of the higest distinction. If the election was to come off to-day in Pennsylvania and Indiana, there is hardly a doubt that both would be carried by the Democrats with strong majorities. Disaffection towards the Administration, the loosening of party ties, and the excesses of Radicalism, have disgusted and alienated multitudes of reflecting men.

BALTIMORE CONVENTION.

Greeley Expected to be Nominated on the First Ballot.

BALTIMORE, July 6.—Baltimore gives evident signs to-night of the coming convention. Delegates, politicians, journalists and even lookers on have been arriving freely since noon, and to-night it is estimated that quite two hundred delegates were on the ground. The INDIANA POLITICS.

The New York Times is principally edited by Englishmen and, as is well known, persons of that nationality have no regard for Republican institutions or can they, in fact, speak disinterestedly in regard to anything American. In its issue of last Tuesday this English organ pronounces the Indiana Democratic State ticket, "rank Copperhead." Refering to Mr. Hendricks, the Times says:

"In spite of his national reputation, he has never been a strong man in Indiana and has invariably ran behind his ticket. In 1868, the nomination of Conrad Baker, the Republican candidate for Governor, caused a considerable dissatisfaction, and it was confidently expected that Hendricks, his Democratic competitor, would be elected. Nevertheless, Baker defeated him."

If the facts could be made known in regard to the election of 1868, there is not a doubt but Mr Hendricks was elected and if the votes cast for him had been fairly counted out and returned or published, he would have a very handsome majority. But when the fact became evident the day after the election that Mr. Hendricks had been fairly elected, then word was sent to the leading Republican counties that the returns must be doctored so as to change the result. No doubt this was done, the parties who committed the crime justifying themselves under the plea that they were doing God service.

About an hour after the nomination of Mr. Hendricks he came around upon our side of the house, and while in conversation with O. H. Main, Esq., and ourself, the attention of the ex-Senator was called by a gentleman who approached and said he had a man with him who wished to be introduced as he had a bit of information to impart concerning the last Gubernatorial election.

After being introduced, the man stated that he had the facts at hand to show that Mr. Hendricks was elected by four thousand majority over Baker, the present acting Governor of Indiana, and that the man who was the leading instrument in perpetrating the fraud, which was by ballot-box stuffing and manipulations, is now in Nebraska; having been kept secreted in Indianapolis for some length of time while the charge of fraud was charged and agitated when the final result was announced that Baker was Governor elect. The informant further stated that the man would come back from Nebraska, now that the time had gone by to arrest and hold him for the crime, and not long hence there would be an expose that will plainly show that Baker is and has been during the entire term thus far, only Governor of this State by fraud and ballot-box stuffing, and that this was fully known to the ringleaders of the Republican party of the State of Indiana. If the statement of the man be true, it exhibits a rotten and disgusting basis for an upright Governor, such as they claim Baker to be.

A MEAN LIE.

We clip the following from the Elkhart Review:

Hon. J. B. Stoll made a speech on his return to Ligonier the burden of which was that the man belonging to the Democratic party, who would not endorse Greeley, was a madman, a fool and was not fit to be a citizen of free America.

The falsehood contained in the above was invented by a miserable, lying scalawag in this town. There is not one word of truth about the whole statement. Not a sentence, not a word, not a syllable of our speech on the occasion referred to was devoted to Horace Greeley or the Cincinnati ticket, as every one present will bear us witness. It remained for a mean, dirty, rascally, unprincipled pimp and bar-room loafer to invent and circulate this contemptible lie. If this buzzard craves an airing, we will agree to perform that job to perfection.

Will the Review, Waterloo Press, and Kendallville Standard please correct.—Ligonier Banner.

How readily a Radical lie will find favor with a certain class of journalists.

The Democratic Senatorial District composed of the counties of Allen and Adams, met in delegate Convention, last week, and nominated Hon. John D. Sarnighousch for the State Senate.

Says Oliver J. Dickey, successor of Thad. Stevens in Congress. "Notwithstanding my district gave 7.000 majority for Grant in 1861, it will be 2.000 for Greeley this fall. Therefore I shall not be a candidate for re-election."

In looking over our exchanges we notice that nearly all the Scandinavians in the country are in favor of Greeley—a fact which leads us to believe that he will be supported by nearly the unanimous Teutonic vote—owing to the kinship between the two peoplehoods.

Dr. Scott, a physician of Napoleon, Ohio, will probably be elected to the United States Senate from South Carolina, by means of negro votes, and carpet-bag influence. At home, he would be defeated for the lowest office to which he might aspire. Is it any wonder that the Southern people complain of the manner in which they

THE POLITICAL OUTLOOK.

The ballot can elect a Democrat, but the bayonet may elect a Republican to the next Presidency of the United States.

By the exercise of military power, by stuffing ballot-boxes, by repeating, and by threats, the party in power have succeeded in maintaining their ascendency for many years—the most deplorable and unhappy years of our history as a people.

But at last, the better and less prejudiced classes of that organization—disgusted with the tyranny and dishonesty of their associates, have manifested a willingness to join their political fortunes with ours, and the signs are propitious that this combination of the patriotic and conservative element of voters will be successful, unless prevented by the strong hand of force, and the hidden plots of fraud.

The Republican party has lost its brains. Its most brilliant statesmen in the Senate, its most shrewd and popular editors, its most able and influential local leaders have deserted Grant, and are now enthusiastic in their support of Greeley,—have manifested their patriotism and purity of character by breaking loose from partisan prejudices, and casting their lot with the only party that can save our country from bankruptcy and centralization.

Democrats have met these Republicans half way. The former are willing to forget all past differences and animosities, providing the latter will permit the dead past to bury its own corpses. It is by and through compromises of this character that the integrity and liberty of nations have invariably been saved, when they have fallen in to the hands of corruptionists and oppressors

No political organization can expect to maintain an unchanged and unchangeable creed. Events must necessarily modify ideas. The laws must keep step with the increase of wealth and culture of a government. The discipline that is good for a child wo'd ruin a man, and the system that benefits a country in its infancy would hamper and cripple it if continued through its maturity.

We do not assert, however, that a party naturally looses its identity, or that its cardinal principles are destroyed by the lapse of time, or occurrences of whatever nature. The Democrats have not relinquished one original vital plank of their platform. They stand to-day where they stood at the beginning, in favor of the States of the Union and Union of the States, in favor of tariff for revenue only, in favor of the Constitution, with all the rights which it confers, and all the duties which it commands. They do not indorse carpet bagging, nor consolidation nor prohibition, nor military supremacy, nor the higher law that overrides the work of legislators, nor any of the features which have characterized the Administration of Grant, but which will be speedily corrected when Greeley becomes the occupant of the White House.—*Ft. A well-kown Ohio Judge, who lives in a part of our State near Wayne Co., Indiana, said to us, on our way to Cleveland. "There is Wayne county, Indiana. It gave Morton 2.800 majority at the lat election. I am willing to bet now that Hendricks and Greeley will carry it next fall." Things are in motion in the Hoosier State.—Exchange.

THE PEOPLES' PLATFORM.

We, the Liberal Republicans of the United States, in National Convention assembled at Cincinnati, proclaim the following principles as essential to just government.

1. We recognize the equality of all before the law, and hold that it is the duty of the government in its dealings with the people to meet out equal and exact justice to all of whatever nativity crea, color or persuation, religious or

2. We pledge ourselves to maintain the Union of the States, emancipation and franchisement, and oppose any reopening of the question settled by the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and fifteenth amendments of the Constitution.

3. We demand immediate and absolute removal of all disabilities imposed on account of the rebellion, which was finally subdued seven years ago, believing that universal amnesty will result in complete pacification in all sections of the country.

4. Local self-government, with impartial suffrage, will guard the rights of all citizens more securely than any centralized power. The public welfare requires the supremacy of the civil over the military authority, and the freedom of persons under the protection of the habeas corpus. We demand for the individual the largest liberty consistent with the public order, for the State self-government, and for the Nation return to the methods of peace and the constitutional limitations of power.

5. The civil service of the Government has become a mere instrument of partisan tyranny and personal ambition and an object of selfish greed. It is a scandal and reproach upon free institution, and breeds a demoralization dangerous to the prosperity of Republican Government.

6 We therefore regard a thorough reform of the civil service as one of the most pressing necesities of the hour that honesty, capacity, fidelity constitute the only valid claims to public employmnet: that the offices of the Government cease to be a matter of arbitrary favoritism and patronage, and that public stations become again a post of honor. To this end it is imperatively required that no President shall be a candidate for re-election.

7. We demand a system of Federal taxation which shall not unnecessarily interfere with the industry of the people, and shall provide sufficient means to pay the expenses of the Government, economically administered, pensions, and the interest on the public debt, and a moderate annual reduction of the principal thereof; but recognizing the existence in our midst of honest but irreconcilable differences of opinion upon the merits of the respective systems of Protection and Free Trade we remit the discussion of the subject to the people in their Congressional districts and to the decision of Congress thereon wholly free from Executive interference of dictation.

8. The public credit must be sacredly maintained, and we denounce repudiation in every form and guise.

9. A speedy return to specie payment is demanded alike by the highest considerations of commercial morality and honest government.

10. We remember with gratitude the heroism and sacrifices of the soldiers and sailors of the Republic, and no act of ours shall ever detract from their justly earned fame or the full rewards of their patriotism.

11. We are opposed to all further grants of land to railroads or other corporations. The public domain should be held sacred to actual settlers.

12. We hold that it is the duty of the government in its intercourse with other nations to cultivate the friendship of peace by treating with all on fair and equal terms, regarding it alike dishonorable either to demand what is not right or to submit to what is wrong.

13. From the promotion and success of these vital principles, and the support of the candidate nominated by this Convention we invite and cordially welcome the co-operation of all patriotic citizens, without regard to previous political affiliations.

A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN.

Just published, a new edition of Dr Culverwell's celebrated Essay on the radical cure of certain weakness, the effects of errors and abuses in early life. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of such errors and abuses may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal machine or the application of the knife pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in plain envelope, to any address, post paid on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps.

Business a little dull since the Fourth of July.

A large crowd attended the lecture last Sunday evening.

Auburn, DeKalb County, is beautifully situated.—Angola Times.

There were only two fights here on the 4th. Benzine caused them.

The Bower dances were well patronized on the 4th and 5th of July.

We are under many obligations to M. F. Long, Jr., for favors received.

We would like to add to our subscription list about two hundred new names during the present month.

The creek is very low at present, and nothing but a good shower will help it—"honest injun."

A new style of broad brimmed hats is out. The brim can be taken off, or "en-smalled" at will.

A family that fails to keep less than six cats and two dogs, in this town, is grossly unfashionable.

Our sprinkling wagon is a success. Mr. Roth has lots of enterprise and will run the wagon in a first-class style.

We have been overrun with job work for a while past, a good omen that our work gives satisfaction.

Send us your orders for any kind of job work and we will convince you that we can do it as neat and cheap as it can be done anywhere.

Prof. Penfield, of Adrain College, Michigan, made a very fine Oration here on the Fourth, which we will publish next week.

The choir singing at the grove, on the 4th of July, was one of the best parts of the programme. Auburn can boast of some splendid singers.

Mad dogs in various parts of the State. Look out for the purps and when they show signs of sickness tie them up and await results or shoot them on the spot.

The political atmosphere does not suit our Radical friends in this county. The manipulators can not have things their own way, and they feel rather discouraged.

Henry Romer, commonly called Brick, of the Fort Wayne Sentinel, gave us a call last week. When Brick comes to Auburn, the girls here are happy.—Come some more, Brick.

Our fashionable barber, over Habel's saloon, is making some necessary improvements to his shop. After Bill gets fairly started we can boast of one of the best shops in the county.

The political excitement ran pretty high here last week. This thing of abusing men for giving their opinions should be stopped, and the man that is guilty of the deed should be severely punished.

The weather has been of on the mercurial order for some days past, the profane say "hot as h—ll." To moderate and modify ideas thus prevalent, needs only some of Davenport & Co's. Crystal Ice.

The Colorado potato bugs are chewing up the vines of the murphies somewhat.—Humbug.

The next term of the Auburn School will commence Monday, August twelve, under the management of Professor McIntosh.

The editor has gone to Baltimore to attend the Convention held there this week. "Since he's bin gone" we've had cigars, soda-water, ice-cream and sich, 'till you can't rest. But don't be in a hurry, Tom, about getting back, we'll begin to lay it on the shelf now.

Mr. Depew, a dry goods man at Corunna, had his store broken into last week.—We learn that he had quite a number of articles stolen, and most of them being his best goods. Parties living in the town are blamed for it, but there is no certainty as yet to whom the theives were.

While many of our neighboring towns are being visited by the destroying element—fire—this summer, we have been remarkably fortunate in that respect. Our citizens cannot exercise too much care however, to prevent the breaking out of a conflagration during the dry season.

The Herald notes that a woman recently went into one of the city saloons, and, after apologizing for being seen in such a place, proceeded to "blow up" the bar-keeping savagely for selling liquor to her husband—threatening him with her "big brother" who she said was a leading lawyer in Michigan. Two hours later, the same woman was seen in another saloon disgustingly drunk. Such is life.

County Orders at Par.—We are authorized to say that all County Orders issued prior to the first of June 1872, will be redeemed at par when presented at the County Treasurer's office. We are glad to note this great improvement in the financial condition of our county. As DeKalb County has prospered under Democratic rule there is no good reason why it should be changed.

Butler township and Waterloo banded together to beat McKay. The delegates from Butler township claimed that they voted for Mease because he was a Methodist. Is that township inhabited by Methodists alone, and if not, were they fairly represented? It was a put up job, and McKey, the best man named, was beat. A ring makes the nomination, and the party lash is raised for its support.

Accident.—As the procession was marching from the grove on the Fourth, one team became frightened, and commenced to back causing the one in the rear of it to turn around suddenly up setting the carriage containing the family of Rev. Mr. Petticord, of Allen County. Mr. P. held to the horses while Mrs. P. extricated one of her little sons from under the vehicle. The yonger child was thrown some distance and was severely but not dangerously hurt.

There is a clique in this place—not very intelligent—that are everlastingly reporting some of the boys drunk. They make this their business, and the very moment a young man is seen in a saloon, this report goes 'round the circle. We are not acquainted with the parties names or we would give them in full. Any person, or persons, that have nothing else to do but run down their neighbors had better find other employment, if its nothing better than to go a fishing.

Farmers have mostly finished their haying so far as their clover crop is concerned, and it is now generally secure and in fine condition. Wheat harvest commenced with some last week, but Saturday last may be termed the grand advance along the whole line. We noticed a great many machines at work on this day, in fact, almost every field between Waterloo and Corunna had men and machines at work cutting down the wheat. We are glad to state that DeKalb County will reap a good crop, and the farmers in general are feeling happy over the result.

Our gentlemanly and clever Omnibus man, Henry Mader, informs us that he received over sixteen dollars from one buss, on the Fourth of July. Hank might of made twice this amount had he put on a big price like the rest, but he is too much of a gentleman to take the advantage of anyone. He is now engaged by F. D. Ryan, Esq., to conduct the livery stable, and we can assure the public that all orders or contracts made with Hank will be attended to in a business like manner, and he will give you nothing but a good substantial rig.

WATERLOO, Indiana, July 1st, 1872.

Editor Courier,

Dear Sir:—In regard to the matter mentioned by Mr. McIntosh in last weeks paper, I would say that he is correct in saying that I agreed to print the Proceedings of the Teachers Institute in pamphlet form for $25. This sum might not have paid the entire expense, but I should have done the work, even at a loss, as I supposed the teachers wished the proceedings published, and as I believed that it would add a fresh impetus to the cause of education in our county.

Yours Truly,
JAMES A. BARNS.

Two of our young ladies, acting on a committee for the dinner to be given on the 4th, met with a very daring accident while performing their duty. It was a very dusty day and they would just as leave ride as walk, you know, so they secured Mr. Snyder's horse and buggy and drove around to the different houses where their business called them. After riding awhile in an open buggy, the sun came down a little too hot, and one of them raised an umbrella, when the horse took fright and run-a-way. Oh, my, how the dust did fly—but we are glad to say that neither of them was hurt much.

Chas. Rivers, the aeronaut, left us on Saturday last. It was plain to be seen from Charley's actions that he felt bad for not making his ascension. But we can't blame him, or at least had not ought to, for not filling that part of the programme. The balloon was torn accidently, and it was not safe for him to go three or four miles high while it was in this condition. He was urged by some to make the ascension anyhow, and if Charley had done this and broken his neck in the attempt, we have no doubt but that some would have been satisfied with the balloon ascension. Glad you didn't go, Charley.

An exchange says, the safest and most efficient remedy for destroying potato bugs is found in the refuse lime which has been used in the manufacture of burning gas. This can be procured at any place where gas is made. Pulverize and scatter over the potato vines. This is reported to be a sure exterminator of bugs, and without any poisonous effects on the potatoes. Try it, somebody, and report your success.

The Fort Wayne Gazette says:

A few mornings since just after daylight, a wagon passed up Berry street with a coffin in the box, and followed by several country wagons. The melancholy procession was noticed by a number of our early rising citizens, and a great deal of speculation has been indulged in by them as to the probable circumstances of the disgraceful affair. No one of the persons who took part in the procession could be recognized as ever having been in the city before, and the entire affair seems shrouded in mystery.

Burglars Around.—The Post-office at this place was entered on Sunday night last, and relieved of what postage-stamps it contained, also several boxes of cigars, and other notions of value belonging to the News Depot. We are sorry for our postmaster—he is a clever, genial fellow, and trying to make an honest living. He has just started the news depot and was meeting with abundant success, but we hope he will not get discouraged from this and still linger on. The persons that done the low contemptible act, had ought to be punished severely, if found out. They were not experienced hands, we think, for they performed the theft in a very awkard way. No letters were disturbed.

A Young gentleman, living in Fort Wayne, desiring to look well on the 4th purchased some piece goods a couple of weeks ago and carried them to a tailor to be made up into a nobby suit of clothes. Sad to relate, upon calling for his new suit on Wednesday evening, he found the tailor's door closed and a notice there on that said house was for rent. He wore his old clothes on the Fourth and is dilligently hunting for the aforesaid tailor.—We withhold names for the present at his request, for he has not yet made up his mind that the man of stitches will not give a satisfactory explanation and the desired suit when he finds his whereabouts.

We wonder who that lady was who wore a blue dress, trimmed in white, on the Fourth of July. Her fellow had a pillow-slip on for a shirt—we know a girl that helped him put it on—But oh, how they did enjoy that day, and for fear they would get seperated, they put their arms around each other—and she looked into his face so lovingly, and smiled contemptuously on his agonies—for she weighed about two hundred, and it was "fearful hot." They both seemed willing to be comforted thus, and we have no doubt but that it afforded them much pleasure. About five o'clock in the evening they were seen wending their way down the Saginaw track not to return—still clinched.

Baltimore Convention.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company will issue Round trip tickets to all persons wishing to attend the Democratic Convention which meets at Baltimore on the 9th of July. Tickets will be good for thirty days after their date, and include a free trip to Washington City. Fare from Cincinnati to Baltimore, including trip to Washington City and return to Cincinnati, sixteen dollars. Anybody and everybody who desires to do so can avail themselves of this opportunity to travel over a road which traverses one of the most picturesque regions of America, and to visit the finest city on the continent. It is an infinite pleasure to travel over such a road as the Baltimore & Ohio, which is distinguished alike for comfort and safety, while the scenery along the route, taking in Cheat River, the almost countless mountain fastness, and historic Harper's Ferry, will amply compensate for time and money.

To the Teachers of DeKalb County.

At a meeting of the Examiners of Indiana, held in Indianapolis last winter, it was voted to make the examination of teachers more rigid than heretofore, and for that purpose the State Board of Education has prepared lists of questions to be used by Examiners at their monthly examinations. The questions for this Fall and Winter are to be made more difficult than those already issued, and unless some steps are taken to secure greater thoroughness on the part of teachers, there will be difficulty in procuring teachers for our Fall and Winter schools. To save our county from such a discredit, I will organize at Waterloo, a Training School and Normal Class for teachers, and those wishing to prepare themselves for teaching, term to commence August 19th and continue ten weeks. Tuition for the eight branches required by law, will be $5,00. An extra fee of one dollar will be required of those studying additional branches.

The questions issued by the State Board during the last year will be reviewed, and the principles contained in them fully explained. It is hoped that trustees, parents and teachers will feel a sufficient interest in the matter, to assist in making this effort a successful one, that our county may not only retain its present high standing, but take still higher ground in the cause of popular education. Arrangements will also be made to receive other students who may not wish to fit themselves for teaching. Such will be received on same terms as teachers, and organized into classes according to grade.—County Institute will be held at close of term. All wishing to enter the class should send in their names as soon as possible. For further information address,

THE 4th OF JULY AT AUBURN.

The Ninety-Sixth Birthday of American Liberty was celebrated at Auburn, by the largest crowd ever assembled together on any occasion in DeKalb County. From early morn until late in the afternoon, the people poured into town from all directions till their numbers reached ten thousand.

The procession, as was previously announced, formed on Main street in front of the Court House, at 10 o'clock, in the following order.

Butler Band, Carriage containing the Soldiers of 1812; J. B. Fowler, Chaplain; H. P. Colegrove, Esq., Reader of the day; Zouave Company, of Angola; Ladies Car; Soldiers of the late war, and citizens generally.

The following was the line of march: South on Main-st to Eleventh, West on Eleventh to Jackson, North on Jackson to Ninth, East on Ninth to Main, North on Main to Fourth, thence West to Brandon's Grove.

After arriving at their destination the assemblage collected around the speaker's stand and were favored with music by the choir, after which the Rev. J. B. Fowler delivered an eloquent prayer.

After music by the choir, H. P. Colegrove, Esq., read the Declaration of Independence in a manner satisfactory to every one present.

After music by the choir Prof. W. L. Penfield, of Michigan, delivered a well written address in an eloquent manner.

Music by the band.

Song "Star Spangled Banner" by the audience, after which the procession reformed and marched back to town, where a sumptuous dinner was served by the members of the M. E. Church, to all who were the happy posessors of forty cents.

At 2 o'clock the vast concourse wended its way to the grove, to witness a grand Balloon Ascension, by Prof. Charles Rivers. After the balloon had been inflated and the aeronaut ready to step into the basket, and the expectations of the people raised to a fever heat, the balloon was blown over against the fence and a hole torn in its side about eight inches square, and thus ended the balloon ascension for the day, to the disappointment of everybody present.

The people now returned to town expecting a brilliant display of fire-works, but the manager being indisposed in the evening they were again disappointed. About the time the report was circulated that we would have no fireworks the grumbling became audible. Some said it was a "put up job," others that the Committee of arrangements had swindled them and others that the aeronaut did not intend to go up, but only wanted their money. We think the committee and aeronaut acted in good faith. The aeronaut was told by the committee to make the ascension, but he replied that it would be unsafe to do so, and therefore refused.—He has not been paid for what he has done and will not until he makes an ascension in Auburn, which we understand he now proposes to do on Thursday, the first day of August, 1872, the day of the Democratic Convention. We are now determined to have a free balloon ascension in order, if for nothing else, to convince the unbeliever that we meant just what we advertised in the first instance.—Next week we will publish the contract entered into between the balloonist and citizens of this place which we think will convince all that the citizens of Auburn were worse disappointed than those from a distance.

The Crowd, behavior, patriotism, and everything else was a success save that caused by the failure of the aeronaut, which we hope he will make right hereafter.

An Ordinance to Plank Sidewalks.

Be it ordained by the Board of Trustees of the incorporated town of Auburn, Ind., that it shall be the duty of all persons owning lots or parts of lots, lying on or adjoining the west side of Jackson street, between Fourth and North streets to plank so much of the sidewalk as lies fronting their said lots or parts of lots along, and adjoining said street, with a walk of good and sound plank, not less than one and a half inches in thickness nor more than eight inches in width. Said walk to be six feet in width and placed on three stringers, three by five inches—all lumber to be of oak. Said walks are to be completed in sixty day from the publication of this ordinance. By order of Town Board.

ALBERT ROBBINS, Town Clerk.

Communication.

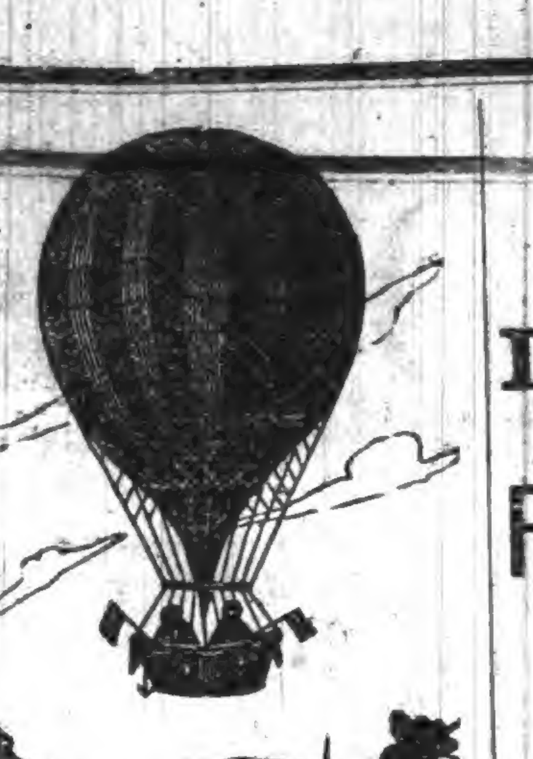
Mr. Editor:—As the time approaches for holding the Democratic County Convention I wish to put in a plea for the North Commissioners district (composed of the townships of Fairfield, Smithfield, Franklin and Troy) for its share of the candidates this fall, and, in addition, something to make up for defecinces in time past. A just division of the six principal offices, elected by the people of the county, to-wit: Clerk, Auditor, Treasurer, Recorder, Sheriff and Representative, would be to give each of the three commissioners districts two of said offices.

I cannot conceive of a reasonable objection that can be raised to that division, as all agree that a fair distribution, of the candidates, over the county adds strength to the ticket, and removes any cause of complaint on that score.

But how we been dealt with in the past. We will take ten years for instance, during that time we have had the candidate for Representative three times, or six official years, while we should of had twenty (ten years for each of the two we were entitled to) and previous to that time we found not much better. Thus it will be seen that if we have all the candidates to be nominated this fall, and the same number for the next ten years, we would be no more than even. The Democrats up here have heretofore acquiesced in the way they have been treated without serious objection, but is said that sometimes forbearance ceases to be a virture. Another reason why our claim should be taken under sirious consideration is that we give the Democratic majority that elected the ticket.

I refer to this matter at this to put the Democracy in mind of the true state of the case, so that they will not pledge their support to candidates in other portions of the county, that is, if they wish to do us justice, and we feel disposed to believe they do. "But we shall see, what we shall see."

NORTH FIELD.



Just as we go to press we received the following telegram:

LAFAYETTE, IND., July 10.—Mr. J. L. Davis, I will be on hand in time to superintend the Ascension, August 1st. Rivers will be there this week,

J. M. KINNEY.

We have received a communication from S. [illegible], Esq., of [illegible], Ind., which was received too late for this issue. Will appear in our next.

Good Fine-cut Tobacco for sixty cents at Smith & Hare's.

A good tea for fifty cents a pound at Smith & Hare's.

The best Teas in town are kept at Smith & Hare's.

A nice way to spend these warm evenings—take your lady to Smith & Hare's Ice Cream Saloon and enjoy a dish.

MARRIAGES.

MEYERS—FISHER—At the office of Drs. Ford & Spooner in this place, July 4th, by the Rev. Mr. Cone, Cyrus Meyers, of Elkhart Co., to Miss Mary C. Fisher, of his county.

The above parties were attending the Methodist festival on that day, held in the third story of Case's brick, and after being regaled with the good things set before them, thought that "then and there" was the place. So they, with a select company, retired to the Drs. office and were made of "one blood and one flesh." Why this should be thus, can only be accounted for on general principles, that accidents in due course of time, will occur, of which the M. D.'s will have due and timely [illegible]. No cake—no cards—and no charge.

How high up is that for a dedication of M. D's. new office—the coziest, nicest and coolest in town.

DEATHS.

SHERLOCK—On the morning of the 29th day of June, of consumption, Mrs. Annie E., wife of J. O. P. Sherlock, aged 28 years.

Funeral services were held at the Presbyterian church on Sunday at 3 o'clock. A large concourse of people assembled and listened to a very able discourse by Rev. A. B. Goodale. Mrs. Sherlock was beloved by all who knew her, having been an invalid for the last five or six years, and for the past nine weeks confined to her room where she quietly and patiently suffered out her days. To Mr. Sherlock we extend our sympathies, and also the sympathies of the entire community.—Marshall (Iowa) Republican.

With sorrow and regret we publish the death of the above named lady—who for a number of years resided in our village, and maintained an estimable character in every particular, and whose death will cause many a saddened heart. We extend the sympathy of this community to the bereaved ones who with them deplore the irreparable loss.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Abright & Shephard.

Auburn, In., June 24, 1872.

Gents.—In reply to your favor of the 22nd, would say that we have given Auburn and vicinity to Mr. Clark for the sale of the Estey Organ and could not honorably take the same from him so long as he keeps his contract with us. We would refer you to him on the subject.

Yours
STORY & CLARK.

Auburn, Ind., June 22nd, 1872.

Story & Clark

Chicago, Illinois.

Sirs.—We are going to engaged in the Piano, Organ and Music trade and we want to sell the Estey organ, we have been referred to you by the Co. I have handled the Estey for a number of years in Ohio, and think I understand the business pretty well. I have formed a partnership with Abright and we are going to make the organ business a speciality. We want the exclusive right for the conuty of DeKalb and others if we can get them.—We propose to advertise and we don't propose advertising for some one else. A fellow by the name of Clark is handling them but don't understand the business, neither can he perform on an organ or show it off. We will furnish instruments to Clark if you will give us exclusive territory and try and work the thing harmoniously. If we don't get the Estey we will run something else. We are bound to run some organ lively. We are going to keep a full stock of instruments of all kinds and run a wagon, advertise and and make it a permanent business. Tell us your best terms and time and whether you will give teritory or not. We don't want it unless we can control this county. Write and let us know the best you will do, and if necessary one of us will run up and see you.

Yours &c.,
ABRIGHT & SHEPHARD.

Short Catechism.

Who got Grant a commission in the army, and stuck by him when the Western Governors wanted to turn him out for drunkenness? Washburne—Minister to France.

Who contributed most liberally for the purchase of the house presented to Grant in Philadelphia? Adolph E. Borie—late Secretary of the Navy.

Who headed the list for the purchase of a house presented Grant in Washington? Alexander T. Stewart—appointed Secretary of the Treasury though ineligible.

Who gave Grant the cot by the sea at Long Branch? Tom Murphy—late collector at New York.

Who presented Grant his interest in the Seneca sandstone quarry at Washington? Henry D. Cooke—Govenor of Washington.

Who refused to take the Democratic nomination against Grant in 1858, because, as he said, Grant always stood by me when I was crazy, and I by him when he was drunk? W. T. Sherman—Lieu. Gen. of the army.

Who ever made Grant a present, form a browne stone front to a yaller dog, without being presented with an office in return? Nobody that we know of.

A place which gives it attention mainly to one branch of business will a remarkable degree of celerity in dispatching it. In Cannelton, Indiana, for instance—a woman rode into town one da the wife of one man and rode out before night the wife of another. She obtained a divorce, a marriage license and a husband between sunrise and sunset. It was a mere shopping excursion. Surely Indiana has worked up the marriage and divorce business to a high degree of perfection.

* * *

A very curious business enterprise has been recently discovered in Austria, carried on by insurance companies which undertake to pay certain sums to policy holders on getting married. Of course it was a swindle, but that was no reason why it should not flourish until the projectors had lined their pockets. There were policies enough issued, but the members of the company did the most of the marrying, and and the officers received large fees, and then there was little left for outsiders, and they didn't even get that.

Sewing Machine
IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and sti, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines. It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite, gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which everyone should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey and a little care taken in examination of routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R." running from Chicago, through Galesburg to Burlington, and the "I., B. & W. Route," running from Indianapolis, through Bloomington to Burlington, have achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading passenger routes to the west. At Burlington they connect with the B. & M. R. R. and from the great Burlington route, which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories and passenger starting from DeKalb county, on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the Burlington route.

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

A POEM.

From the German.

When I was young and tender, too,
I had to mind and had to do
Whatever mother bade me.
She used to have a walnut stick
Which kept me on the double quick—
And that's where she had me.

When older grown, and quite a beau
Among the girls I used to know
A Miss Priscella Cadmy;
And with the help of smiles and nods
I fell in love at forty rods—
And that is where she had me.

When I was older, say sixteen,
I thought it time to have a Queen,
An I asked her if sh'd wed me.
She said she did not much object,
Or words something to that effect—
And that is where she had me.

And when to make the matter straight,
I went down to negotiate
Affairs with Colonel Cadmy,
He said he did not care to sell,
He told me I might go to—well—
That was where she had me.

I drowned my sorrow in the cup,
Until I got my dander up—
I could not have been madder.
When she proposed that we be one,
In spite of Pa the thing was done—
And that is where I had her.

Two lovely children, on my knee,
I'm proud to say, belong to me—
That is, to me and madam;
For when we left our native sod
We spent a year or two abroad—
And that's where we had 'em.

ORATION!

DELIVERED BY

Prof. W. L. Penfield

On July 4th, 1872, at Auburn, Indiana.

FELLOW CITIZENS:—We are assembled to-day to commemorate the ninety-sixth anniversary of our national independence For, ninety-six years ago to-day our fathers declared this a free and independent nation; and after eight years of war our independence and government were established and became facts of history.

What was that government? It was a confederation of States with hardly enough of cohesive force to hold them together. It was christened a Republic. It embodied all that the practical wisdom of our fathers could devise of justice, of liberty, of human rights. But in this embodiment of wisdom and liberty and patriotism were the large gems of African slavery which they had sought in vain to eradicate.

But perhaps the course of events has justified the sagacity and forsight of our forefathers. For the alternative then was, union and slavery now and liberty finally, or, perpetual disunion, discord and war, with perpetual servitude in a large portion of the country. There can now scarcely be a doubt that their solution of the problem was the wisest and the cheapest in the ultimate expenditure of blood and treasure.

Again in 1812 did the Republic vindicate her liberties, for up to that time Great Britain had not whooly relinquished the idea of the resubjugation of the colonies to her rule. By that war our independence of the mother country was reaffirmed. By it we gained much in political and still more in moral effect; for it gave the Republic dignity and position abroad and was for it respect and stability at home.

Meanwhile, slavery grew in wealth and power. We enjoyed a long period of peace and prosperity. The country became rich and presperous. But slavery begot strife and hatred. Sectional animosities multiplied and intensified, till at last "dogged war" began to 'bristle his angry crest.' But we ought to avert for the time the impending calamity; and success crowned our efforts. But ever, under new shapes and upon fresh occasions, did the evil threaten us in all its frightful aspects Still we temporize and compromised the rights of the slaves for the sake of the preservation of peace. Still we vacillated sacrificing human rights to the peace of the country, making the worse appear the better reason, till at last Heaven gave compassion to their moans and prayers their bloody sweat and agony, and afar off we beheld the dread approach of war.

"With harsh resounding trumpets, dreadful bray, and grating shock of wrathful iron arms, for their master, God omnipotent, was mustering his armies of pestilence on their behalf and the fresh green lap of our fair land was now enrolled in flames and bedrenched with showers of blood. All over our country were heard and seen groans and tears, desolation, blood and massacre.

Finally the war was closed, the monster, slavery, that had spewed out of her filthy maw upon our country her blood of poison, was annihilated, together with her thousand young ones—"a fruitful brood of monstrous chaps." Liberty was proclaimed throughout all the land to all the inhabitants thereof. To-day our country is enjoying that liberty with all its sweet aspirations and hopes and influences—a liberty bounded and regulated by law, not leading to excess and license and insolence but, in the language of Burke, "tempered with an awful gravity." Now is the equality of men established. Now do we have a Republic in fact as in name. Now are we in the full enjoyment of peace restored; and

> "Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths,
> Our bruised arms hung up for monuments;
> Our stern alarms changed to merry greetings;
> Our dreadful marches to delightful measures."

And not only has come bringing prosperity and plenty in her train. Never was our country so happy in riches and prosperity. Our industries are rapidly multiplying, our harvests are bountiful, all our laws, all arts and institutions are vigorous and flourishing under the benign reign of peace—profound peace at home—peace, undisturbed and unthreatened abroad.

Fellow citizens: I have alluded briefly to the course of our national existence up to this time; and now let us consider for a few moments the present status of our country, material, intellectual and social or political. For what is it that makes this 4th day of July a great national holiday? Why is it that we celebrate this anniversary with all the popmp and circumstances of patriotic joy, with decorations and speech and music's sweet harmony that plays through the trembling leaves above us? It is not because of all the blessings and joys that sweeten and adorn our life; and do we not owe these to our fathers who transmitted to us a free government with all its attendant blessings, with all the unbought graces and charities which liberty bestows, as a heritage for us and ours forever? It is a day on which of all others it is most becoming to vanish low, sordid, ungenerous thoughts for the grand, swelling sentiments of patriotism which warm the heart and animate faith and exalt the character of the American citizen.

In considering the present state of the nation in its manifold aspects, observe first the condition of agriculture over all our country. Everywhere throughout the Republic you witness unmistakable proofs of the prosperity of our agriculture—the plains yellow with the ripening grain, the valleys flowing with luxuriant vendure On all sides the hum of industry rises and floats upon the air; on all sides do we behold the signs of thrift and increasing wealth. When were our noble husbandmen, our farming population, so properous? When were their toils as light or so well rewarded? When were their financial burdens so small or their means so abundant? When were their wants so easily, so swiftly or so cheaply supplied? When did they ever enjoy so much of ease and even of luxury? The condition of the peasant is ever a fair exponent of the prosperity and happiness of a great agricultural people. Compare the condition of the American husbandmen with that of Europeans, or even with that of our neighbors upon our Northern or Southern borders; and then you will say that not so much to the fertility of our soil, the easy bounty and beneficence of nature, not to the accidents of time or place, the goods fortune or the gifts of Providence but to the institutions bequeathed us by our fathers do we owe the independence the opulence, the nobility and dignity of the American farmer.

Equally flattering is the state of American commerce. Our merchants look sleek, plump and solid, their counters are laden with bales of goods. Their shelves are crowded with costly textures, precious fabrics—the products of the genius and magnificence of all nations. Their intercourse extends throughout the world, savage and civilized, thus bidding all people in closer bands of union by the ties of commercial interest and friendships—the ties which, as Burke beautifully says, though light as air are strong as links of steel. And we can not too much emphasize the importance and influence, politically and morally, of American commercial intercourse upon the world at large; for the channels, through which flow in upon all nations the currents of American ideas. They are thus disseminated through all lands and contain the gems of liberty which are fast taking root in monarchical countries, in Europe in Asia and Japan. Had it not been for American commercial intercourse, Japad would never have known the freedom and happiness of our institutions; and to-day we behold the spectacle of the oldest of nations sending her wisest and greatest representatives to gather wisdom at the feet of the youngest. "Westward, the stare of empire," said Berkley; and who knows but that when the time comes, as Macauley foretels, that England shall be known no more among the nations, when the New Zealander shall paddle his boat under the broken arches of London Bridge, and when the Republic itself shall be known and written of as a mouldering monument of antiquity,—who knows but that the seeds which Japan is now gathering here will have been planted there to blossom out into a finer flower of liberty and civilization?

Contemplate also the handicrafts. In no other country have the useful arts been so developed and perfected as in our own In what land and age was the condition of the artisan so favorable as in our own? What people can point, to such a long list of illustrious names that have been taken from the laboring classes? Where was labor so dignified? All this we owe, under the blessing of heaven, to American institutions which have fostered and matured the inventive genius of man. Why is it that our mechanics' daily toils are so light, so brief and so amply remunerative? It is because American inventive genius has devised implements which will do the work of hand, felling the grass and grain as the leaves are swept from the trees by the winds of autumn; the sewing machine that does the work of a dozen women that "weary-laden mourn;" our looms pouring out their rich music like the soft melody of flutes; our spinning and knitting machine whose flashing, busy needles relieve the heavy toils of our grandmothers at the winter fireside. Why our ancient grandmother is vanished. She is not the same woman she way fifty years ago, telling from early dawn till late at night, furrowed with care and worn with toil. Now she is a quiet old lady with folded arms and caps and nothing else to do but drink tea and gossip about her neighbors.

Consider also our Railroads, like a mammoth spider, pushing out their iron threads and weaving a mighty network over all our land; and our steamboats, floating mansions, palaces of luxury and ease.—But of vastly greater influence upon civilization, as well as of pride to our country, is the telegraph—the fruit of American genius solely. And right here we may know what has transpired ten minutes ago upon the remotest parts of the globe. But the chief glory and hope of our age is the printing press. We find the newspaper everywhere—by the fireside, in the counting room, and workshop. Thus are intelligence and knowledge universally diffused, and by this means our school boys are better informed of the relations of nations and of contemporaneous events than were the most accomplished statesmen in the time of our fathers.

But it is when we compare our general advantages and acquirements of education with those that the contrast is most striking. Our school boys could teach our grandfathers their A. B. C's in the sciences; and this general property in knowledge and ideas is to be attributed to the general diffusion of our common schools. The district school is the inseparable institution of every community. It is so omnipresent that we are apt to forget its complex and incalculable influence upon our country. How differently, with what different emotions do we regard the district school house from what we did 25 years ago! We then regarded them with something of the awe with which we should now look upon Oxford or Cambridge, or with which we should behold the architectual splendor and glory of the old world—St. Paul's cathedral or St. Peter's or the Porthenon. I remember when I looked upon the district school house as the seminary of all wisdom, the academy of all science. And the village school master, our fathers looked up to him with pious awe and reverence and solemn gravity. They regarded him as the prodigy of genius and learning, the bright particular flower of the communnity. They gazed at him with reverent, open-eyed wonder.

> "And still they gazed and still the wonder grew
> That one small head should hold all he knew."

Quite different is it now. The school-master is no longer a marked individual; he is no longer an illustrious personage, a distinguished character. Happily, the opportunities of culture are so ample that we are expected to imbibe it as we drink the water or breathe the air all about us Thus does the best mind of our country possess abundant means of nutriment and culture, of normal, expansive, imfettered growth. The result is seen in a wider and higher development of our national literature. Europeans have formerly reproached us with having no literature, no literati, no poets, no orators. But behold now the monuments of American literary genius—the names and works. Time would fail me to enumerate the long catalogue but they are surely worthy of a patriotic and honest pride.

Compare our political status with that of our fathers in '76. Then there were four elements in American society—each hostile to every other. There were the Indians swarming upon our western borders; and there were the negroes under our feet. There was homogeneity and no general harmony in society. There were few just nations of government least of all of representative government. Among our States and statesmen were discordant and dissimilar political views, Democratic and Republican, while each was laboring to mould and fashion the government according to his own ideal. But witness our social States to-day. Loyalty is exorcised, the Indians may be said to exist no longer and the negroes are no more a disturbing element in our politics. They are lifted to the same social plane with ourselves—diffused, blended, absorbed in the vast body politic,—our political system is placed in just correspondence and symmetry with the polity and genius of the Republic, and we are a free, a united people living harmoniously under Democratic government. This growth, these changes and improvements in our institutions have been the slow achivements of time; they are the fruit of the dear bought wisdom of experience.

I said we were living harmoniously—yes, almost harimoniously, for we can not disguise the fact, and would not if we could, that in some sections of our country exists a wide and deep dissatisfaction towards the government. I do not regard it as in the least dangerous or alarming yet high patriotism and a pure sense of justice demand a pious solicitude and the use of all honorable means to tranquilize and fraternize all sections of the country This is the highest interest of all; it is the behest of patriotism; it is the stern voice of duty. The chief wants of the nation and of the hour are purity in government and profound reconciliation of all parts of the country. And we should preach the law not from the hoarse, brazen throat of cannon, but the gospel of peace and good will; for as Burke has said, laws which should never be silent, are commanded to hold their tongues among arms; and tribunals fall to the ground with the peace they are no longer able to uphold. I care not what party or parties achieve this object but tranquility and political purity are the supreme consomation for which all good men should devotly labor and pray. I speak not as a partisan—not as a Republican or Democrat but as a citizen—an American citizen, and on this day, from this elevation of patriotism and American citizenship, I look over our great land—wider in domain than the empire of Rome in its palmiest days—and I behold everywhere lettered in gold on the high calendars of our constitutions; liberty, equality, fraternity, for fellow citizens, all men are now equal before the law, and the animosities, the votes, the arrows and political crimes of the past must be buried, and all parties and men who would fan the fires of insurrection and rebellion on the other hand, or who on the other hand, would tear open afresh the healing wounds of the past—all men and parties of this stamp and character must go down. To-day henceforward let parties, as parties, be forgotton in the love and pride and welfare of our common country. Parties, what are they good for but as instruments to promote the happiness of our country? So long as a party holds country above party, so long will it live in the deserved confidence of the people. The Democratic party in its day has made a splendid, a glorious history; and so has the Republican party made a record of deeds which will shine as long as the stars in the sky And now it is the duty of every citizen to see to it that the Republic be preserved in profoundest peace, in the freshness of her purity and in her integrity, by whichever party secured. Thank God, the slaves are free, and nowhere within the boundaries of the Republic has any one the right to be called master or the necessity to be called slave. And to-day let us open wide the portals to the Republic and to the repentant rebel say come, to the legal negro, come, to all who love America, come, thrice welcome!

SPEECH OF

HON. JAMES R. DOOLITTLE, of Wisconsin, President of the Baltimore Convention!

Gentlemen of the Convention: I thank you for this great honor—words can hardly tell how, much. But you will allow me to pass at once from what is personal to speak of the great occasion, the duty and the purpose which brings us here. Two years ago—nearly five years after the bloody period of the civil war had closed—the liberal republicans of Missouri, [applause] feeling keenly all the evil of the proscription, test oaths, the hates and strifes, the passions the war had left upon them long after the war itself had ceased, and feeling keenly the executive federal dictation in their local elections, determined to organize a movement to restore equal rights to all our citizens [applause,] white as well as black [applause,] to restore local self-government and to arrest the farther centralization of federal power.—[Applause.] They then said: "This thing has gone far enough, if not already to far. The time has come when all honest and patriotic republicans must say 'Halt!'" and the present vital doctrine of republican government—under the constitution, the powers of the radical government are defined and limited, [applause,] and cries of "good!" 'good!"] and that the people of the States have the right to govern themselves in their own domestic affairs upon the basis of the equality all the States before the higher law before the constitution and the equality of all men before the law, [applause,] of universal loyalty amnesty suffrage and peace. Taking no step backward, taking no right and no franchise which had been secured to the blacks, pledging themselves to support them all in their full vigor, they at the same time demanded in the name of peace, in the name of liberty, in the name of Republican government itself, that freedom and equal rights should be restored to the people. [Great applause.]

They organized nearly forty thousand strong and called upon B. Gratz Brown [applause] to lead the movement. They placed him in nomination for Governer, and then what followed? Eighty thousand democratic republicans, [cheers] looking upon the success of that movement above any party triumph, [cheers,] resolved to sustain it with their whole strength. Love of country, love of republican love, liberty of equal rights of all men, inspired that union and taught men to act together who had been politically opposed to each other all their lives upon other questions and other times, and without violating either honor, logic, concicnce or consistency on either side. This patriotic union was based upon higher grounds than ordinary control political action. [Great applause.] Even those who had fought against each other in battle clasped hands over the bloody chasm. (Renewed applause,) and side by side like brothers with hearts beating in unison, beating strong, with the same high purpose, they helped to bear its flag to a glorious victory.

That gentlemen, is liberal republicanism, (enthusiasm,) and that is democratic republicanism. (Great enthusiasm.) The victory which came from that union was the end of proscription, test oaths, of pain and of strife and of all disloyalty. In a word, the real end of the civil war came with that victory and did not come until then in Missouri. (Intense applause.) It redeemed that State. It gave the rights of freemen to seventy thousand men who have been bound and fettered. Missouri is now a free State in this Union with all her rights, dignity and equality under the constitution, and not one murmur of disloyalty is anywhere heard. By that union federal dictation in Missouri at their local elections was overthrown, and by that union strife and hate has given place to peace and to good will. By that union liberty, with equal rights for all, have given to the State, unbounded prosperity, and to her people a joy almost unspeakable. So great was their joy and so complete their success, the liberal republicans of that State were not content without making an effort to extend the same union of liberal democratic republicans, and with it the same blessing of liberty, peace, and fraternity to all other States. (Rounds of applause.)

Accordingly, in State Convention, on the 24th of March last, they resolved to invite the Liberal Republicans in all the States to meet them in mass convention at Cincinnati on the first day of May. That invitation was accepted. There was indeed, a great response. They came by thousands, in such vast numbers that a delegate convention of representatives of all the States was formed, both from principle and from necessity, to give form to its proceedings. Many of the ablest men of the country, lately leaders in the republican party, were there, and took part in its deliberations. They were assured large numbers of liberal republicans in every State, and from all portions of the country, stood behind them, ready to sustain them, and they were morally certain that if the millions whom we this day represent [Cheers] would only come to their support, the number of liberal republicans would reach half a million or more. [Cheers]

That convention presented a platform and presented candidates for the country—for President, Horace Greeley, [long and continued cheering] and for Vice President, B. Gratz Brown, [more enthusiasm;] and that convention for the promotion and success of the principles declared in that platform there enunciated, and the support of the candidates nominated by that convention, have invited and cordially welcomed the co-operation of all patriotic citizens, without regard to previous political affiliations. Those principles were so clearly and concisely stated in the platform itself, and restated in the letter of acceptance of Mr. Greeley, [more cheering] and they are so well-known to you all, that I will not restate them. For weeks that platform and those candidates have been before the country.

Meanwhile the convention called to nominate Gen. Grant [hisses] and to endorse and continue the principles, practices and policy of his administration has done its work. [Hisses]. As between the liberal republicans and the followers of the Grant administration the issue is now clearly made up. It is Greeley or Grant. [Immense enthusiasm, and cries of "Greeley,"] While these events were passing the democratic republicans, whom we represent, held their conventions in all the States. The liberal republican movement, the example of Missouri, the Cincinnati convention, its platform and its candidates, with their letters of acceptance, were all before those conventions, which were very largely attended by their ablest men, and the paramount questions before all these conventions were, "Shall we accept this invitation to co-operate with the [Great applause) liberal republicans?" Shall we adopt their platform? (Loud cries of "Yes! Yes!" and some cries of "Never!") Shall we nominate the same candidate, ('Yes! yes!') and shall we elect them? ('Yes! yes! yes!" and loud cheering;) or shall we refuse to co-operate, ('No!') nominate other candidates, ('No! no! Greeley! Greeley!"] and strive to elect them over both tickets already in the field?—Gentelmen, these are the questions which you are to decide now and here. That you will decide them wisely I cannot doubt, nor can any one who looks over this body of men, representing as they do, three millions of citizens, and who feels, as every one here must feel, the high and patriotic purpose which inspires you. Gentlemen, what means this great and rising movement which we everywhere see?—What means this proposed union of three millions of democratic republicans, with a million, it may be, of liberal republicans?

What means this union upon a common platform, and this proposed union upon the same candidates—a union so sudden, so compact, so earnest, as to surprise its friends and to confound its enemies, (applause,) which "comes as the winds comes," which, to borrow a figure, overwhelms the the ordinary currents of public opinion as the great storms always run counter to the surface currents. What means all this? There are some things, gentlemen, it does not mean. It means no abandonment of what is true, what is just, or what is good in human government. (Applause.) It means no union of the dead upon dead issues, but a union of the living upon the living issues of the present. (Applause.)

It was no union for the spoils of office, (applause) but it means a union of men with the same faith, upon the great and paramount issue of the present hour—a frank, manly, honorable and equal union of men who have the sagacity to see and the moral courage to accept the situation. [Good! good! and loud cheering.) It means a union of men who have the sagicity to see what is past and to deal with the issue of the present, and for the future to do their duty to their country, their god and their fellow-men. (Applause.) The issue of to day is not the repeal of the Missouri compromise nor the question of lavery in the Territories, upon which alone the republican party was organzed in 1856. It is not upon that which followed when the Lecampton constitution for Kansas divided the democratic party in twain and elected Abraham Lincoln to the presidency in 1860. It is not the question of secession nor of war to put down rebellion, nor the abolition of slavery in the States by military order or by constitutional amendment, upon which Mr. Lincoln was re-elected in 1864. Nor yet is it the question of reconstruction or of the fourteenth or fifteenth amendment, nor the question of negro suffrage, nor of the establishment of Federal power of universal negro suffrage as a condition precedent to the States of the South having any rights or any existence, even as States in the Union—it is none of these questions that is now in issue.—All these have been issues in the past—great issues, sufficient in themselves to create and dissolve political parties, because ideas are stronger than men or parties; but they are all past issues. They have been brought out and fought to the end, in the forum or on the field, and they are no more in issue to-day than the Mexican war or the war of rebellion. [Aplause.] We could not reopen them if we would, and they falsely misrepresent our purpose who say that we would reopen them if we could. [Loud cheering.] This great Union therefore, means no step backward. [Cheers] 'Forward!' is the word.—[Loud cheering.] And first of all it means to do for all the other States of the South what it has already done in Missouri. [Cheers.] Instead of proscription, test-oaths, suspension of habeas corpus, and military despotism, it means personal freedom for the individual and republican government for all. [Loud Applause.] It means another thing, and perhaps the most important of them all; it means to arrest the centralization of power in the Federal government. [Loud cheering.] It means to assert the vital principle of our republican system, in which it lives and moves and has its very being—that constitutions are made by the people in their sovereign capacity for the express purpose of defining and limiting the powers of government—[applause.] the powers of all governments, State or national. It means that we are determined that Presidents and Governors, Congresses and State Legislatures, and every department of the government shall obey the constitution. [Prolonged applause.] It means, also, a genuine civil service reform, beginning with the Presidential office. [Applause.]

It means to give strength and stability to our financial affairs and our national credit by bringing honesty and economy and fidelity to every position, federal, State and municipal, where public moneys are collected and disbursed. [Cheers.] It means also, the honest payment of all our obligations. [Renewed applause.) It means to give higher tone and greater vigor to the administration of our foreign and domestic affairs, so as to command the respect and the confidence of our own people and of all the civilized world. It means to place in the highest offices of our government men of whom all the world will say they are honest and they are capable. (Applause.)

Gentlemen, I have thus briefly stated the situation, the duties and the purpose which bring us here. A great responsibility rests upon this convention. If its action shall be such (and I doubt not it will be,) as to put an end to the misrule which for the last few years has afflicted our beloved country, this generation and generations to come after us will remember with pride and gratitude the convention at Baltimore of the 9th of July, 1872.

Amid loud and long continued applause, Mr. Doolittle took his seat.

"Do you mean to say" said a traveler to a Missouri sheriff, "that a man was shot here yesterday because he was caught in the act of carrying off a rope?" "Yes," quietly answered the sheriff, "but there was a horse at the end of the rope."

Anxious parent in the rural district—"John I suppose the students learn a great deal of astronomy at the Harvard Observatory." Innocent Son—"Well, the Observatory isn't quite so convenient as one of the Athenæums in Boston where we saw new stars every week." Parent—"Bless me, what advantages you boys do have!"

Mr. Nordhoff writes as follows from Visalia, California, to the New York Tribune: 'They showed me a man down there, who refused some years ago, to let the telegraph wires pass over his farm. 'He didn't want to let the whole country know when he whipped his children,' he said; and when it was explained to him that the wires did not of themselves take cognizance of passing events, he replied: "Well anyhow, he'd always heard that it killed corn."

An exchange regrets the removal of a family whose boy started out a year ago by shooting himself. Two months ago he choked himself with a fish bone. A few days after he built a fire in the barn and called out the steamers. He then swallowed a top, got run over by an ice wagon, fell into the river, was lost for three days, and first and last he has been a fountain of local news whose value cannot be estimated on a slate four feet square.

H. D. WILSON,
Chairman Central Committee.

Beecher won't fight Greeley; Forney won't fight Greeley; Gerritt Smith won't fight Greeley. Will Grant's other admirers notice these interesting facts, and follow these distinguished examples?

A $100,000 Bet.

Geo. Wilkes, the famous editor of the Spirit of the Times, has entered a wager with Grant's former Collector, Tom Murphy, that Horace Greeley will be the next President of the United States. Tom thought he could bluff the chivalrous Wilkes, but found himself mistaken in the man. Grant is understood to have encouraged his friend Murphy to make this bet.

The Grant party in Indiana are earnestly striving to retain the control of the State Government, and, like the Administration at Washington, put forth as one of their principal claims to public confidence the assertion that they have made great progress in paying off the public debt. It is true that they have taxed the people heavily, ostensibly for the purpose of clearing off the liabilities of the State; but the Indianapolis Sentinel, by a careful examination of the annual reports of the State Auditors for the last ten years, finds out of total receipts in 10 years of $11,441,238,68, the sum of $1,350-982.40 has mysteriously disappeared and remains unaccounted for. Unless this extraordinary deficiency is explained in a satisfactory manner, which would appear to be rather a difficult undertaking, the political leaders who have permitted one-tenth of the money collected for the payment of the public debt to slip through their fingers without leaving a trace behind will not be likely to gain much support in the coming contest on account of their prudent financial policy. When the affairs of the National Administration for the last four years come be investigated by honest officials, it is to be feared that the sums that will figure in the "leakage" account on the general balance sheet will attain proportions of startling magnitude.

The West Virginia election for Governor, and Congressmen, etc, is to be held on Thursday. August 22.

A farmer in Monticello, Iowa, writing to a Chicago commission merchant says: "This town gave 300 majority for Grant; it will now give Greeley a majority.

There are but 52 Grant men in the town of Lansing, Iowa. All the old "stiff backs" of the Republican party are for Greeley, and the rank and file go with him.

D. S. Freeman of Smithport, Pensylvania, a Grant elector for the Fifteenth District. sent in his resignation as elector, on Tuesday, and will support Greeley.

The German sentiment is in full accord with the Liberal movement, ex-Lieutenant Governor Hoffman who filled the place when Yates was Governor, lends his hearty aid to reform, and will throw all his influence in favor of the Liberal candidates.

Judge George W. Cate, who has been on the Wisconsin Bench since 1854, and who has voted the Republican ticket, beginning with Fremont's candjdacy, has announced his preference for Horace Greeley over Grant for next President.

Mr Colfax says he "intends, this year, to have a season of rest and quiet for the first time in twenty years, free from the toil and excitement of public speaking." His selection of the year of a Presidential canvass forest and seclusion does not argue much enthusiasm for Grant and Wilson.

The Liberal Republicans.

On Friday last the National Central Committee of the Liberal Republican party met in New York, Col. E. Allen was elected permanent chair man, and made an elaborate address which was a ringing indictment against Grant and the radical party.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, The Democratic party have adopted unanimously the platform and nominated the candidates for the Presidency and the Vice-Presidency of the Liberal Republican party, and,

Whereas, These parties should unite on all matters necessary to secure a common triumph, therefore,

Resolved, That the Liberal Republicans in the various States are hereby recommended to hold their State and Congressional Conventions, when posible to do so, at the same time and place with the Democracy, in order that conference may unite the two parties on one electoral, State and Congressional ticket.

After a long discussion the preamble and resolution were unanimously adopted.

During the meeting of the Committee Mr. Greeley was introduced and received with great cheering. Afterwards Carl Schurz was announced, and also received with cheers, and introduced to each member of the Committee. Before the meeting of the Committee at twelve o'clock, Gov. B. Gratz Brown came into the room, and the enthusiasm with which he was hailed gave token of the hold he has upon the affections of the people.

The committee visited Chappaqua, the next day to meet Mr. Greeley at his own home. In the evening they attended the Rink to hear the music of the national French band. The Committee will generally leave for home on Monday.

It was announced by Colonel Ethan Allen, President of the Committee, that Charles Sumner has consented to deliver half a dozen speeches in favor of Greeley and Brown in the Southern States, and the Colonel is confident they will prove of great advantage to the cause.

Senator Bayard for Greely.

In the Baltimore Convention Senator Bayard, of delaware, opposed the nomination of Greeley in a dignified able and eloquent speech, but his efforts made no impression whatever.—Since the Convention Mr. Bayard has reconsidered the hole matter, and in a letter to a friend in Delaware, which found its way into the public prints, refering to the nomination of Greeley and Brown at Baltimore, he says:

"Events as they now confront us were shaped in opposition to our efforts and as they are we are not responsible for them; but we are responsible for our mode of dealing with them now; and I hope that our State Convention will promptly and decidedly nominate an electorial ticket in opposition to Grant and Wilson and in favor of the only candidates who, as matters now stand, can be hopefuly expected to defeat them. I mean Horace Greeley and Brown, for whom I expect to vote the 5th day of November next.

If there is a Democrat who is holding back from supporting Greeley and Brown we direct him to the letter of Senator Bayard, ask him to consider attentively the many excellent reasons he gives why a Democrat can honestly and conscientiously sustain the action of the Baltimore Convention. Mr. Bayard will give his hearty support to the Greeley and Brown ticket, and on his return from abroad, with, be hopes restored health, he will take part in the political canvass. And he wants the entire Democracy to reach the same conclusion that he has done—yield whatever opposition they may have entertained against the Liberal Republican movement, and do all in their power to give it success.

Hon. Washington C. Depauw, candidate on the Democratic State ticket for Lieutenant Governer, has declined the nomination. The State Central Committee, it is understood, will supply the place

Before the war the debt of Alabama Arkansas, Florida Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South-Carolina, Texas, and Virginia, was $76,415,890. And at the present time under carpet-bag government, the debts of these same States has swelled to $291,626,015. Now it must be borne in mind that these States had nothing to do with contributing a farthing to the expenses of the rebellion, but have contracted this quadrupled indebtedness since the war through the carpet-bag goverments. Nearly all of this money has gone into the pocket of scalawag politicians who were sent there by Grant to rob the Southeren people.

Indiana.

The great battle field of the campaign is to be the State of Indiana.—Already preperations for a thorough campaign are being made by both parties. The Radicals have declared that, if Indiana is lost to them, all hopes of re-electing Grant is at an end. Money and all the appliances of the Federal government, are to be used in this State without stint. The crack of the party lash is heard on every hand, and all the office holders under Mr. Grant are charged with the especial duty of whipping in reluctant and obstinate members of the party. The defeat of the Radical state ticket is the defeat of Morton, and the pestiferous crew that hang upon his power. He has no longer that control over them that he once had, and which he exercised with so much despotism.

He no longer has one hand upon the state treasury, and the other upon the soldiery, as in 1864. He no longer has his tools to take posession of the ballot boxes and increase majorities at pleasure. He has no longer thousands of illegal voters who obey his command with discipline and obedience of regular troops, who vote and repeat votes at will.

The old days of d spotic power have gone, let us hope, never to come again, and with a victory this fall in the state and nation, we will send to keep them company, the corrupt men who used their power to advance their ambition.

There is a popular revolution abroad in the land. The air is rife with it, and that movement, originated on the 1st day of May at Cincinnati, will gath er in momentum until it sweeps from power the last vestige of radicalism and its intende nt evils. It is a movement that no party can withstand, and the effort that is to be made in Indiana to stay the mighty wave, will end in engulfing of every man who joins his political fortunes to the party of despotism, of corruption, and imbecility.

Some of The Ways.

The anxietby exhibited y the anxous supporters of Grant, which arises from their earnest desire to preserve intact the consistency of the Democratic party, is only equalled by their uneasiness at the tendency of those who have until now, been considered as part and parcel of their own flocks, to break from the folds of the great military shepherd, and take refuge under the guidance of the Chappaqua farmer and philosopher.

A Grant-ite meets a Democrat acquaintance and button-holes him at once. Of course he has a great respect for one of the uniform Democrats; he differs in opinion from his friend; but then you know. he likes to see a party of such grand tradition preserve itself from utter destruction. How his Democrat friend can make up his mind to support Greeley is what troubles his anxious soul, as Greeley is one of the bitter sort of Republicans, and up to all sorts of devilment.

The Democrat listens to his distressed friend, and most probably leaves him unconsoled with a reference to the nominee of the Baltimore Convention, and the great importance of defeating the party of political bribery and corruption, which has been for so long a time robbing the people of their money and the protection the Constitution vouchsafes unto every American citizens.

Scarcely has the Democrat escaped being washed away by the flood of crocodile tears, which flowed like a torrent from the eyes of the distressed Grant-ite, than a liberal republican is "button-holed," and stopped upon the high way to listen to the lamentations of this political Jeremiah over his fall of political grace.

To the liberal, Greeley is pictured as a traitor, who has abandoned the Republican party and thrown himself into the embraces of the Democrats.—He is told that it would be better to elect a straight out Democrat, than one who has turned away from his old friends, &c &c., while to the Democrat Greeley is portrayed as the greatest enemy his party ever had, and if elected will annihilate the Democratic party. This inconsistency will avail these tricksters nothing, for so surely as the fourth day of next November comes so surely will the old Chappaqua farmer be the next President of the United states

The Roll of Grant's Honest Supporters.

The Administration organs and the advocates of General Grant are claiming that they have the supporting of the honest portion of the people, and that the corrupt rings are against them. The following embraces a few of the many honest supporters of Ulysses I., which we give as the commencement of the roll of Grant's virtuous supporters:

The Custom House Ring.
The General Order Swindle Ring.
The Santo Domingo Ring.
The District of Columbia Ring.
The Seneca Sandstone Ring.
The Indiana Ring.
The Navy department Ring.
The Land Grabbing Ring.
The Chorpenning Fraud Ring.
The Cameron Ring.
The Washington Lobby Ring.
The Office-selling Ring.
The Internal Revenue Ring.
The Whisky Ring.
The Philadelphia Muncipal Ring.
The Carpet-bag Ring.
The Cameron Kemble "Ads" Ring.
The Monopolist Rings everywhere.
The Great Railroad Rings.
The National Bank Rings.
The Southern Plunders' Rings.
The Officeholders' Ring.

These embrace a few of the selfish supporters of Grant's re-election, who are drawn to that side believing that with his succes they can plunder the people and fill their pockets better and more successfully than with any other person for President. The list of rings can be continued indefinitely. With such an array the less that the Grant organs say about rings on the other side the better for themselves.

Greeley's Acceptance of the Democratic Nomination.

The Committee appointed by the Democratic National Convention, held at Baltimore on the 9th inst., through Hon. J. R. Doolittle, the Chairman, on the 12th inst., notified Mr. Horace Greeley of his nomination for President by the Democratic National Convention at Baltimore. Mr. Doolittle, accompanied by the members of the entire Committee, shook hands with Mr. Greeley, and addressed him as follows:

MR. DOOLITTLE'S ADDRESS.

MR. GREELEY: By the late action of the Democratic National Convention held in Baltimore it has become my pleasing duty to notify you of its nomination, and we have come here in a body, in response to your expressed desire to place in your hands its final action nominating you as its candidate for the office of President of the United States. The published proceedings of our Convention show the great unanimity which prevailed, but those only who took part in them can realize the enthusiasm and cordality with which it resolved to sustain the Liberal Republican platform adopted at Cincinnati, and with which also they resolved, as the surest mode of giving expression to those principles, to put you in nomination for the high office of President. We have both witnessed and felt that cordiality and enthusiasm, and can assure you that it was genuine. Without detaining you further, you will allow me to present to you the members of the committee of that Convention.

The members were then severally presented to Mr. Greeley, and it was a sight long to be remembered by those who witnessed it to see those who had been life-long enemies of the Liberal candidate now coming up and shaking him cordially by the hand and pledging him their support.

After the presentations had all been made and to which Mr. Greeley had some remark to make, appearing to know most of the gentlemen either personally or by reputation, Mr. Greeley addressed the committee as follows:

GREELEY'S ACCEPTANCE.

MR. CHAIRMAN AND GENTLEMEN OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE CONVENTION: I shall require time to consider how to reply fitly to the very important and, I need not say, gratifying communication that you have presented to me. It may be that I should present in writing some reply to this However, as I addressed the Liberal Convention of Cincinnati in a letter somewhat widely considered, it is, perhaps, unnecessary that I should make any formal reply to the communication made other than to say I accept your nomination and accept gratefully with it the spirit in which it has been presented. My position is one which many would consider a proud one, which, at the same time, is embarassing, because it subjects me to temporay—I trust only temporary—misconstruction on the part of some old and life-long friends. I feel assured that time only is necessary to vindicate not only the disinterestedness, but the patriotism of the course which I determined to pursue, which I had determined on long before I had received so much sympathy and support as has so unexpectedly been bestowed upon me. I feel certain that time and in the good providence of God an opportunity will be afforded me to show that while you, in making this nomination, are not less Democratic but rather more democratic—[great applause]—than you would have been in taking an opposite course, that I am no less thoroughly and earnestly a Republican than ever I was. But these matters require grave consideration before I should make anything that seems a formal response. I am not much accustomed to receiving nominations for the Presidency—[laughter]—and cannot make responses so fluently as some others might do. (Great laughter.)

I can only say that I hope some or all of you, if you can make it convenient, will come to my humble farm home, not far distant in the country, where I shall be glad to meet all of you, and where we can converse more freeley and deliberately than we can here, and where I shall be glad to make you welcome—well, to do the best the farm affords. [More laughter] I hope that many of you, all of you, will be able to accept this invitation, and I now simply thank you, and say farewell.

And now, follow citizens, let us view our country as a whole, and contemplate her probable destiny as indicated and determined by the laws of national evolution by the tendencies of the age and the currents of contemporaneous thought. If in a narrow strip, peninsula a little Republic of antiquity of a few thousand souls, enjoying a measure of liberty, has made some of the most splendid achievements and contributed some of the brightest names to history are we not justified in the concept ion of high hopes for our country? I am aware that we Americans accused of extravagance in our 4th of July orations; but why is it so? It is because it is a fact and not a mere device of rhetoric that ours is the happiest of all countries for the common people in the character of its institutions. The proof of it is simply this—when the laboring classes of the old world wish to emigrate a large majority of them come to this country. And when Europeans hear us recite the blessings we enjoy and recognize the intrinsic dignity and aristocracy of manhood, they can not comprehend us and denominate it bombast! It is true, as a general principle, that we ourselves are the measure by which we judge others; and monarchists, judging the eulogies of our country by the degree of estimation which their own governments merit, imagine that we are drawing upon the fancy and have passed the domain of facts into the region of fiction. Therefore narration of facts with us would be for them extravagant panegyries; for what Cicero of his consulship might be applied to our own history that it is most adorned when unadorned. It is right to be proud of our country. It is right to foster this national idea; and even though offensive, because reproachful, to the monarchist, it is also in pure taste on these national occasions to dwell upon the blessings of our liberty and even to decorate it with the flowers of rhetoric and the gildings of the fancy. For consider the naked facts simply. We are apeople of forty millions, and we are multiplying with unparalleled rapidity. We have a scenery whose diversity, nobility and magnificence rival any in the world,—vast chains of mountains—"monarchs of a thousand storms"—mighty rivers sweeping in majestic curves to the sea, broad prairies and valleys of inexhaustible richness studded with a thousand lakes as with clasps of silver, and the Republic, reposing like a Titan between the two oceans. Such a climate, such scenery and institutions must logically and naturally produce a great people. Here meet and mingle in friendly concourse the inimical Gaul and Teuton, the implacable Celt and Briton, the uncultured negro and Chinese celestial.—The loins of all nations are pouring their mighty hosts into the lap of the Republic This will cause increased activity and emulation of thought. This commerce of ideas and interchange of knowledge will purify and enlarge the general mass of public wisdom; for all bring here their peculiar ideas of government and society, paying a tribute of wisdom to the Republic, and ignoring the fallacies and errors they had imbibed. Thus will political ideas concentre here and flower out in higher beauty and perfection. This will become the centre of civilization as necessarly and logically as Rome was when she was the mistress and capital of the world. And may the Republic ever be the asylum of the oppressed, the nursery of learning, the abode of the arts, the home of great ideas!

I regard as one of the most auspicious omens of our future, the present universal fermentation of political and philosophic thought. Somebody has denominated an audience a sea of upturned faces; and looking over the angry sea of politics we behold the waves of thought ebbing and flowing in mighty tides of intelligence For what a throng of ideas come forth, thick as the leaves of Vallambrosa, from these high national debates! No two agree upon any complete set of principles which all are seeking to evolve. some great principle which shall give direction to the national politics and thought. This all will result in the purification of politics, the elevation and ennoblement of thought. This diversity and attrition of thought with thought will enlarge and liberalize the understanding; it will produce greater breath of views, enlightenment and toleration of opinion; and it will inaugurate the day of reconciliation and national good feeling.

Such is the present state of the Republic and such the hopes we entertain of her future with promise of wondrous beauty and enlarged bounty to man. What American can contemplate her without feelings of pride and gratulation and joy? Always the hopes, and the realization too of statesmen wiser and better, of a religion more pure, a morality more austere, purer politics and a more noble government with a liberty broad as the dome of the Republic.

All hail, then, the Republic, thrice baptised in blood, Hope of mankind, crown of civilization! Hail, thrice hail, Fountain of all our liberties and all our joys, the magazine of all our rights and privileges, thy name we cherish and for thy perpetuity will ever pray!

The Republican party offered an insult to the naturalized citizens of the United States when it presented Jeremiah Coleaith alias Henry Wilson for their suffrages. Wilson boasted that he was the father of the Know Nothing party of Massachusetts, declared time and again before the people of that state that "the time had come when the uniform of the state militia should no longer be disgraced by being seen on the back of a Catholic Irishman or an infidel Dutchman!. He drafted and advocated the passage of a law prohibiting any foreigner from holding a commission in the militia of Massachusetts. In a speech in Worcester, in the fall of 1854, while referring to the enormities committed by the Know Nothings of Louisville and St. Louis during the riots of that summer, he declared that "By the light of these burning shanties the Teuton and Celt may tread the certain doom that will overtake them in the attempt to compete with the native-born Americen for political supremacy on this continent."

If a man possessed of such a damning record can be elected Vice President of the United States, then foreign-born citizens have but little appreciation of what it is to be insulted.
—Ex.

Letters from Kansas report great activity in the Liberal cause, in every county in that State. Greeley Republicans are confident that their ticket will in many places squarely divide the Republican vote with Grant, and carry the electorial vote of the State by a fair majority.

Clayton county, Iowa, which gave Grant 800 majority, is claimed for Greeley by a full thousand; and the claim is attested by a list of well known names. There are four Greeley papers in the county. The "land slide," from Grant has been heard, and felt, and seen in that quarter.

From a trustworthy canvass it is ascertained that from twenty to forty per cent. of the Republicans in the counties of Orange, Sullivan, Broome and Tioga have decided to vote the Liberal Republican ticket for President and Vice President. We look soon for equally encouraging news from other counties.—N. Y. Tribune.

OFFICIAL PAPER of the COUNTY

Local and Miscellaneous.

Painters are very busy.

Wheat about all cut.

Balloon ascension on the 1st of August.

Balloon ascension at Hicksville on Saturday next

You can have cheep colic now by eating green apples.

Saw-mills are doing a lively business in this place.

Capt. Kinney will make a balloon ascension at Hicksville next Saturday.

It is estimated that 10,000 people visited Barnam's show at Toledo.

We must look for dull times in all departments of business for the the next month.

The frames of quite a number of new buildings are seen in almost every locality in our place.

Thomas A. Hendricks will address the citizens of Auburn, and vicinity, on the first of August.

We are indebted to Professors Rivers & Palmer, aeronauts, for helping our boys with the paper this week.

We are obliged to Jas. M. Goetschius, Esq., for a basket of nice ripe apples, the first of the season.

Our better half returns thanks to Mrs. W. H. Dills, for a handsome present of delicious ripe apples.

The wheat harvest is ended, and with few exceptions a better crop has been secured than was expected in the Spring.

On Wheels.—The Courier office was placed on wheels last week and moved a few yards east to make room for the mammoth new block now in course of erection.

There is to be a bower dance here on the first of August, under the supervision of the great bowerists, Messrs. Puff & Culver. A fine string band has been secured and a jolly time may be expected.

The Detroit Free Press heretofore opposed to Greeley has declared for the Baltimore nominees. The Chicago Times stands alone in the west in its opposition to Greeley.

The Liberal cause is perceptibly growing in this county. Most every day we hear of some Republican who has the moral courage to pronounce against the frauds and misdemeanors of the Grant administration. They are none the less Republicans, but not of that stripe that believe in robbing the people. They are tax-payers and are no longer in favor of putting money in pockets of office-holders until they become wealthy.

A rousing meeting was held at Corunna, last Saturday, and over one hundred voters took part in the proceedings. A good ticket was nominated and the anti-administration party went to work in earnest. This is the way it should be done in every township in the county.— Let all come forward who are opposed to extravagance and corruption in high places of the government to-day. Let every man do his duty and there is no fear of the result.

Billy Williams, Williams William, Hon. Wm. Williams has been nominated for Congressman at large. The irrepressible Billy is still for office. Billy was nominated over Gen. Kimball. Soldiers stand no chance against the greed of Billy. Republicans care nothing for soldiers when Billy is around. They want representatives, who go to Congress poor and soon get rich, and Billy is their man. Kimball was offered elector at large, to pacify him, but the General could not see it, and hurled it back in their teeth. Thus Radicals reward the brave and worthy.

Grand and Petit Jurors.

The following is the list of Grand Jurors for the August term of the DeKalb Circuit Court: John Shutt, Jonathan Simons, Samuel Cornell, William Young John Smith, George Swartz, Jacob McEnterffer, John York, Jr., Jesse M. Brumbeck, James Clark, Henry Wise, Miles Waterman.

The following is the list of Petit Jurors for the August term of the DeKalb Circuit Court: Samuel Plattner, Isaac Timberlain, Peter Lanning, Andrew Baxter, George Egnew, Joseph Walters, Daniel Mottinger, Charles Grimm, John Freeby, Benjamin Wise, Alexander Hammon, Isaac Sawvel.

GRAND RATIFICATION MEETING!

Let all Good Men Strike Hands For an Honest and Statesmanlike Administration of Public Affairs!

Hon. THOMAS A.

HENDRICKS!

Candidate for Governor.

Will positively be present and make one his able speeches in defence of Justice, Honesty and Economy.

COME OUT!

and hear the FACTS.

A GRAND

Balloon Ascension!

Will take place about four o'clock. Mr. Kinney, the manager, is here himself, and weather permitting we are confident there will be no failure this time.

Man's own inherent meanness sometimes prevents him from indulging even in a glass of soda water. Did they know the excellent effects produced by this beverage, they would resort to it as an economical measure. Go to the Pioneer Drug Store.

New Wagon.—J. W. Britton has placed upon the road a fine new transfer wagon and is now ready to attend to all demands made for hauling of all descriptions. It is a good spring wagon, and articles can be transfered from one place to another without danger of injury or breaking.

A Balloon Ascension.—In addition to the democratic county convention, on the 1st of next month, a speech from Mr. Hendricks and a balloon ascension is offered as an inducement to get the unterrified to turn out. If these should fail to draw, the democratic committee might add a wheel barrow race, a soaped pole and a monkey show to the list of attractions.—Press.

It has been decided to adopt the suggestion as to extending the programme so as to embrace the monkey "business," providing the editors of the Press will be on hand to do the monkey with their usual ability.

A party of "Roosters" went to Kendallville, the other day, and one of their number was stricken with the "jim-jams" by an over indulgence in soda water, lemonade, etc. By the time the party got to Corunna, on their return, this irrepressible patient imagined he was an Aeronaut, and with his long arms cleaving the air, hat off, and hair standing on end, he actually thought himself going up in a balloon. He made for the woods in double quick, and was left by the party to come home, on foot, which he did in good order by the next morning, singing, "I had dear companions,—boo-oo."

From Franklin Township.

Ed. Courier:— Having understood, since the announcement of my name for County Recorder that some person or persons have gotten up the idea that "it was a plan calculated to get one of my sons into office." I wish to say to the people through the columns of your paper, that that idea is a false one. I have been an operator in the ranks of the Democratic party, in this county, for thirty years, and never before asked for any office.— Now, if in the judgement of the people I am not entitled to any I submit my claim, and will not resort to any underhanded game to get myself or any of my family into office. I will, if elected, attend to it myself.

Respectfully yours.
Andrew Baxter, Sen.

"Brainard's Musical World" for July is on our table, and is a noteworthy number. Brimful of good things to the musical disposed, it contains in addition to its usual amount of interesting matter, an eight page supplement, giving a full and complete report of the Boston Peace Jubilee and the St. Lovis Saengerfest, with a full programme of each day's proceedings.

The World is the only paper, outside of the Boston dailies, that has had the enterprise to publish a full report of this great musical event.

The World also contains its usual spicy table of contents, and is a necessity to any one who wishes to keep well posted in the musical doings of the country.

Subscription, $100 a yer. Single copies, ten cents. Published by S. Brainard's Sons, Cleveland, O.

Bound to Win.—A prominent Republican of Corunna, has boasted, upon several occasions, that his party were bound to win, though they had to lie, cheat and steal to accomplish their ends. We do not know whether this is the sentiment of the party throughout the county, but it is the watch word with them at the above place. It comes from a prominent Radical, to judge from the amount of noise he makes, and though we do not know whether he can read or write, which he says receives the endorsement of those who are always ready to do the dirty work for the party. Henry Quince is the name of this conglomerated individual—has long been a howling representative of the party of great moral ideas, and should be elevated by this party as a fair specimen of Grant Republicanism. We would suggest that the yeomanry and good people stand aside and let this "lordly duke" have his strut out. Grant is doing the same thing down at Long Branch, and how can you blame poor Henry. Go in, Henry, and threaten bayonets and Gatlin guns, if they don't mind you.

FROM OHIO.

Bucyrus, Ohio, July 21, 1872.

Editor Courier:— The drouth that was prevailing at Auburn when I left, not only extended from there to Fort Wayne, but far into Ohio, and there began to be a change in vegetation showing evidently that showers had been more frequent. There has been heavy rains here for the last week. Fears were entertained that wheat would grow in the shock The wheat harvest has been completed. The grain is well filled, but not heavy on the ground.

From Van West, east, corn is excellent, equal to anything ever known before.— Oats and grass also very heavy. Potatoes plenty, with an abudance of apples, cherries and small fruits.

J. B. Casebeer, Pres't.

To the Teachers of DeKalb County.

At a meeting of the Examiners of Indiana, held in Indianapolis last winter, it was voted to make the examination of teachers more rigid than heretofore, and for that purpose the State Board of Education has prepared lists of questions to be used by Examiners at their monthly examinations. The questions for this Fall and Winter are to be made more difficult than those already issued, and unless some steps are taken to secure greater thoroughness on the part of teachers, there will be difficulty in procuring teachers for our Fall and Winter schools. To save our county from such a discredit, I will organize at Waterloo, a Training School and Normal Class for teachers, and those wishing to prepare themselves for teaching, term to commence August 19th and continue ten weeks. Tuition for the eight branches required by law, will be $5,00. An extra fee of one dollar will be required of those studying additional branches.

The questions issued by the State Board during the last year will be reviewed, and the principles contained in them fully explained. It is hoped that trustees parents and teachers will feel a sufficient interest in the matter, to assist in making this effort a successful one, that our county may not only retain its present high standing but take still higher ground in the cause of popular education. Arrangements will also be made to receive other students who may not wish to fit themselves for teaching. Such will be received on same terms as teachers, and organized into classes according to grade— County Institute will be held at close of term. All wishing to enter the class should send in their names as soon as possible. For further information address,

C. S. HARE,

Grand Balloon Ascensions, at Lafayette, Ind.

At about half-past six o'clock Prof. Kinney, who made the successful ascension from the Fair Grounds on the Fourth, went "up in a balloon," from the enclosure [illegible] on the Circus Grounds, near the Valley Depot, witnessed by a large concourse. There being but a light wind, the balloon was slow in ascending, much to the satisfaction of those present who witnessed his daring and dangerous feats on the trapeze. It sailed slowly away to the southwest, the daring æronaut still continuing his performances on the trapeze, much to the amazement and delight of anxious spectators, who watched his every movement, many of whom expected to see him fall to the earth. But no, he sailed on in triumph, and landed with fearful rapidity in a yard in front of Hine's carriage shop, corner of Alabama and sixth streets, stunned but not injured by the velocity of his descent on hard ground. In a few minutes the streets adjoining were thronged with animated nature, eager to see how he looked, and many were the inquiries regarding the extent of his injuries. He assured them again and again that he was not hurt, and after considerable delay he managed to get away from the jostling crowd. It is pronounced by all to be the best ascension ever witnessed in our city.

Next came the torchlight procession and fire works. The procession was formed near Newman's brewery, on Fourth street, and numbered about two hundred persons of all sizes and places in life, and headed by the Lafayette Cornet Band, marched to the enclosure aforesaid. Arriving there they dispersed, and each went to look for himself at what was to be seen.

The display of fire works was the grandest ever witnessed in this city, and though there were not as many present as there would have been had it been given on the evening of the Fourth—although it has not brought as many greenbacks into the coffers of Mr. Kinney as it would on that evening, still it has proved that Mr. Kinney is what he has shown himself to be while in our city, a man of his word, who understands his business, and fulfills his contracts for balloon ascensions, etc., to the letter.—Lafayette, Ind., Dispatch.

THE PEOPLE'S PLATFORM.

We, the Liberal Republicans of the United States, in National Convention assembled at Cincinnati, proclaim the following principles as essential to just government.

1. We recognize the equality of all before the law, and hold that it is the duty of the government in its dealings with the people to mete out equal and exact justice to all of whatever nativity race, color or persuasion, religious or

2. We pledge ourselves to maintain the Union of the States, emancipation and franchisement, and oppose any reopening of the question settled by the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and fifteenth amendments of the Constitution.

3. We demand immediate and absolute removal of all disabilities imposed on account of the rebellion, which was finally subdued seven years ago, believing that universal amnesty will result in complete pacification in all sections of the country.

4. Local self-government, with impartial suffrage, will guard the rights of all citizens more securely than any centralized power. The public welfare requires the supremacy of the civil over the military authority, and the freedom of persons under the protection of the habeas corpus. We demand for the individual the largest liberty consistent with the public order, for the State self-government, and for the Nation return to the methods of peace and the constitutional limitations of power.

5. The civil service of the Government has become a mere instrument of partisan tyranny and personal ambition and an object of selfish greed. It is a scandal and reproach upon free institution, and breeds a demoralization dangerous to the prosperity of Republican Government.

.6 We therefore regard a thorough reform of the civil service as one of the most pressing necessities of the hour that honesty, capacity, fidelity constitute the only valid claims to public employmnet; that the offices of tee Government cease to be a matter of arbitrary favoritism and patronage, and that public stations become again a post of honor. To this end it is imperatively required that no President shall be a candidate for re-election.

7. We demand a system of Federal taxation which shall not unnecessarily interfere with the industry of the people, and shall provide sufficient means to pay the expenses of the Government, economically administered, pensions, and the interest on the public debt, and a moderate annual reduction of the principal thereof; but recognizing the existence in our midst of honest but irreconcilable differences of opinion upon the merits of the respective systems of Protection and Free Trade we remit the discussion of the subject to the people in their Congressional districts and to the decision of Congress thereon wholly free from Executive interference of dictation.

8. The public credit must be sacredly maintained, and we denounce repudiation in every form and guise.

9. A speedy return to specie payment is demanded alike by the highest considerations of commercial morality and honest government.

10. We remember with gratitude the heroism and sacrifices of the soldiers and sailors of the Republic, and no act of ours shall ever detract from their justly earned fame or the full rewards of their patriotism.

11. We are opposed to all further grants of land to railroads or other corporations. The public domain should be held sacred to actual settlers.

12. We hold that it is the duty of the government in its intercourse with other nations to cultivate the friendship of peace by treating with all on fair and equal terms, regarding it alike dishonorable either to demand what is not right or to submit to what is wrong.

13. From the promotion and success of these vital principles, and the support of the candidate nominated by this Convention we invite and cordially welcome the co-operation of all patriotic citizens, without regard to previous political affiliations.

Grover & Baker's
Sewing
Machine
IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and sti, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

It makes the Stitch alike on both sides, and does not rip nor ravel.

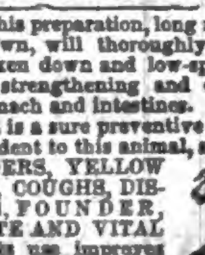
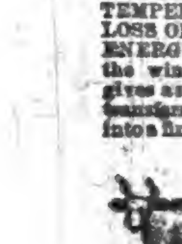
FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.

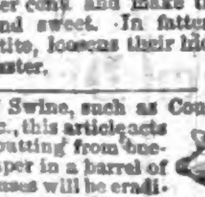
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.





To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.



In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which everyone should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey and a little care taken in examination of routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R." running from Chicago, through Galesburg to Burlington, and the "I., B. & W. Route," running from Indianapolis, through Bloomington to Burlington, have achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading passenger routes to the west. At Burlington they connect with the B. & M. R. R. and from the great Burlington route, which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories and passenger starting from DeKalb county, on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the Burlington route.

A Cool Robber.

Policeman Badger, of the Tenth station says the Newburg Journal, had a bit of experience the other night which he is not fond of talking about. It was past midnight as he was leisurely pushing his beat through Jessup street, and as he came opposite to Drayton & Fogg's jewelry store he observed gleams of light through the shutters, and he rapped at the door.

Is that you, policeman? asked a voice within.

Yes, answered Badger.

Well it's only me. It's all right. Kind o' chilly out, isn't it?

Yes.

Thought so. I was just fixing the fire. Good night.

Badger said 'good night," and pursued his way.

An hour afterward Badger passed up Jessup street again, and saw the light in the jewelry store. It did'nt look right, and he banged the door loudly.

Halloo! cried the voice within. Is it you, policeman?

Yes.

All right. Won't you come in and warm you? It won't hurt anything for you to slip from your beat a minute.

The door was opened and Policeman Badger entered, and he found the inmate to be a very gentlemanly-looking man in a linen duster.

Come right up to the stove, policeman. Excuse me a moment.

The man took the ash-pan from the bottom of the stove, and carried it down cellar and emptied it, and when he had returned and wiped his hands, he said with a smile:

Chilly night, isn't it?

Yes.

Chilly outside, and dull inside. (another smile.) New goods for the spring trade, and have to keep your eyes open. Lonesome work, this watching all night; but I manage to find some comfort it this. Won't you join me in a tip? You'll find it the pure thing.

And the man in the duster produced a black bottle.

The Policeman partook, and having wiped his lips, and given his fingers a new warming, he left the store and resumed his beat, satisfied that all was right at Drayton & Fogg's.

But morning brought a new revealment Drayton & Fogg's store had been robbed during the nigh of $6,000 worth of watches and jewelry; and though Policeman Badger carries in his mind an exact daguerrotype of the robber, the adroit rascal has not yet been found.

A man and wife living at Long Lake, in the Adirondack region, were, nearly two weeks since, fishing there at dusk. They were sitting on a rock in the lake—the woman with a handkerchief over her head. One Palmer, a guide, with a companion across the lake, and noticing the white handkerchief inquired what it was. The opinion was given that it was a gull, when Palmer, replying that he would soon decide, drew up his rifle and fired.—The distance was somewhat greater than he had thought, and the ball falling, struck the woman in the breast, killing her almost instantly.

Gen. HASCALL'S REJOINDER.

Some one of the many former admirers of Gen. Hascall, having in an article in the Goshen Times, taken him to task for deserting the rotten sinking hull of the Grantutes, he thus answers for himself, directing his remarks to the editor of the Times. The General talks thus:

"A Friendly Epistle" to William M. Starr.

Dear Sir:—Not knowing who my 'former admirer" is that addressed me the long and kindly letter through your columns last week, I will, with your permission, reply in a letter addressed to you.

The main trouble with my 'former admirer's' letter is, that he uses up a column and a half of your paper in showing that I have always been a straight Republican, and that I have been foremost in the ranks of those that were instrumental in establishing the principles of the Republican party on the firm foundation we now find them. It needed no argument to establish this. What every one knows to be true may safely be assumed. Once for all then, let it be understood that there is no one in this country who is a more sincere admirer of the vital principles of the Republican party than myself, or who did more, both on the forum and in the field, to establish them. The only point the letter of my 'former admirer' makes, is that I supported Grant four years ago, and this year support Greeley. This is true, and if the same conditions existed now as did then, I would support Grant again.—Gen. Grant never was my first choice for President, and I have never voted but once in my life for a President that was my first choice—that was Abraham Lincoln. Of two candidates and platforms presented we have to take the one that more nearly corresponds with our views. Mr. Greeley, I regard, a much better man for this crisis than Gen. Grant, and he is certainly running on a much better platform. He has been a much better Republican than Grant, because, while the latter was voting the Democratic ticket, Greeley was educating the public mind through long years up that standard of right and which rendered it posible for the Republican party to exist. If there had never been any better Republicans in the country than Gen. Grant, slavery would exist to-day, as it did twelve or fifteen years ago. All the principles of the Republican party are established, and, as Mr. Baker said in his speech at the Court House the other evening, 'in such a way that they can not be undone. Now, the question is can we have reform in the civil service? Can we prevent the Williams', the Idding's the Moon's, and the numerous other corrupt office-holders all over the country from perpetuating themselves eternally in office by virtue of the patronage they control. Mr. Greeley is in favor of the one term principal, which takes away all motive from the President for making appointments to office except for merit. This is the right beginning and is by all odds the most important principle at issue in this campaign.

Two years ago I opposed Williams in this district because, as I alleged, he was corrupt himself and was surrounded by a corrupt ring of office-holders and others, that could control his nominations in spite of every principle of justice and of right—You then denied this state of things. In your issue of last week you admit the existence of this corrupt ring of which I then spoke and charge upon them very properly the defeat of Mr. Baker. The same state of things that I was contending against in this Congressional District two years ago has now become co-extensive with the United States, and I oppose Mr. Grant now because he has himself surrounded by a corrupt ring consisting of Morton, Cameron, Tom Murphy and others who have not an honest hair in their heads, and who have absolute control of Grant, and who are running the government, not for the public good, but for the public good, but for their own private gain. The Democratic party having enthusiastically endorsed and approved of the principles of the Cincinnati platform and also its candidates, it motters not how they have been in the past. It is a blessed satisfaction to me to find them right now, and I pity the patriotism of that man that could wish them back upon their old platform with a representative man thereon simply because it would be easier to defeat them. On the contrary I say they are deserving of infinite credit for having taken the stand they have, and I propose to move on side by side with them, I that most bitter opposed when they were wrong until every corrupt carpet-bagger in the land, every sutler selling Williams, every Baker defeating ring of Moon and Iddings', every corrupt and demoralizing Cameron and Morton have been swept from the places they now occupy as the bosom of destruction. Thus my kind 'former friend,' will see that the reason why I now support Greeley instead of Grant, is not because I have lost faith in the glorious principle which the Republican party have contended for and established, but because I object to, see them prostituted to the base uses and purposes which would result from the election of Gen. Grant with his present surroundings.

MILO S. HASCALL.

Very bad Liquor.

The business of the court at one of the frontier Territories was drawing to a close when one morning a rough looking sort of a customer was arraigned on a charge of stealing. After the clerk had read the indictment to him, he put out the usual question:

Guilty?

Guilty, but drunk, your honor, he answered.

What is the plea? inquired the Judge, at the same time half dozing.

Oh pleads guilty but said he was drunk said the clerk.

What s the case?

May it please you honor, said the Prosecuting Attorney, the man is regularly indicted for stealing a large sum of money from the Columbus hotel.

He is, eh? and pleads—

Guilty but drunk, sir.

The Judge was now fully aroused, and said:

Guilty, but drunk. That is a most extraordinary plea. Young man, you are confident you were drunk?

Yes, sir.

State where you got your liquor.

At Sterrett's.

Did you get liquor any where else that day?

Not a drop, sir.

You got drunk on his liquor, and then stole his money?

Yes, sir.

Mr. Prosecutor, said the Judge, do me the favor to enter that man's case a 'noll prosequi.' That liquor at Sterrett's is enough to make a man do anything dirty; I got drunk on it myself the other day and stole all of Sterrett's spoons. Release the prisoner, Mr. Sheriff. Adjourn the court.

The Science of Advertising.

Judicious advertising pays.

If you have a good thing advertise it.—If not, don't Large type isn't necessary in advertising. Blind folks don't read newspapers.

Never run down your opponent's good in public. Let him do his own advertising.

You can't eat enough in a week to last you a whole year, and you can't advertise on that plan either.

It's as true of advertising as anything else in the world—if it is worth doing at all, it is worth doing well.

Small advertisements and plenty of them is a good rule.

Constant dropping will wear a rock.—Keep dropping your advertisements on the public as they will soon melt under it like rock salt.

Quitting advertising in dull times is like tearing out a dam because the water is low. Either plan will prevent good times from ever coming.

'Dull times,' it is said 'are the best for advertisers.' Because when it is tight and the people are forced to economize they always read the advertisements to ascertain who sells the cheapest, and where they can trade to the best advantage.

According to the character and extent of you business, set aside a liberal percentage for advertising. Keep yourself unceasingly before the public, and it matters not what business of utility you may be engaged in, for if intelligently and industriously pursued a fortune will be the result.

Dat Ish Geot.

"As a gentleman from New York was taking a glass of wine at the 'St. Louis,' corner of Freeman and Hopkins streets, Cincinnati, about three weeks ago, and observed at another table, with several others, a German who seemed uneasy and anxious, as if there might have been a Franco-Prussian disturbance between the beer and himself. Presently in ran a little girl, her face radiant with smiles, exclaiming:

Oh, father! we've got a little baby at home.

Dat ish good, said the Dutchman, as the anxiety disappeared from his countenance Fill up der glasses.

Not many minutes elapsed before in rushed the little girl again with the announcement:

Oh, father! we've got two little boys at home.

The Dutchman looked a great deal astonished, and not at all satisfied at this little family redundancy; but rising at length to the magnitude of the occasion, he said;

Vell, den, dat ish also good. Fill up der glasses.

In a few minutes again appeared the radiant messenger, with the astounding proclamation:

Oh, father! we've got three little boys at home!

This was too much even for Teutonic impossibilities. There was no further call for glasses.

Vell, den, says he, I goes up der and stop der whole pizness!

A gray-hair was espied among the raven locks of a fair friend of ours a few ago.

Oh, pray pull it out, she exclaimed.

If I pull it out, ten will come to the funeral, replied the lady who made the unwelcome discovery.

Pluck it out, nevertheless, said the dark-haired damsel; it's no sort of consequence how many come to the funeral, provided they all come in black.

ON GOVERNMENT EXPENSES.

Hear Senator Trumble on the Government Expenses, delivered in a speech at Springfield, Ill., a few days ago:

I could detain you here until daylight to-morrow morning in detailing cases of this same character which are justified by the action of partiisan committees appointed out for the purpose of sustaining the party. I was never a party man to the extent of being willing to serve it against my country. Parties are only useful to carry out measures for the good of the country. (Applause.) And if, today, I am acting with the Liberal Republican party, I have denounced these transactions at the hazard of being myself denounced. It was done in good faith upon my part, for the purpose of correcting abuses, and appealing from a dictatorial tyranny established by a Senatorial ring to the honest, inteligent, upright citizens of the country, who are bound by no such shackels as will compell them to cover up fraud and iniquity in behalf of anybody or any party. I must allude to one other publication, not the report of an investigating committee, but a table which has been put out and published broadcast throughout the land, in regard to the expenses of the National Government. The object of the table which has been published, and which was annexed to a speech which was delivered in the House of Representatives by Mr. Dawes, of Massachusetts, Chairman of the committee of ways and means, and also annexed to a speech delivered by my colleague (Mr. Logan) to the Senate, was to show that the expenses of the Government during the year 1871 were less per capital than the expenses of the Government in the year 1860, the year before the war. The purpose of that is to create the impression among the people that the finances of the country and the administration of the Government are economically managed, that the people may be made to believe that economy obtain and abuse do not exist. I was astonished when I read that statement. I knew that it could not be true, and I wondered that such a statement should be made up and published have twice taken occasion to compare that table with the official reports of the Secretary of the Treasury, and have satisfied myself that so far from being true the expenses of the Government per capita in 1871 were nearly double what they were in 1860.

You have my statement against the one which is published as a part of the speeches of these gentlemen but which was never read either in the house or in the Senate, although it was stated in the speeches that there was such a table. It was published in the official paper The Globe. Will you attach any importance or give any credence to this table if it is shown that it is erroneous to the extent of many millions?

Voices—No, no.

Mr. Trumbull—Well, now, I propose to show that, in a word, the expenses of the general government of the United States, as stated in the table, in 1860 were $63,000,000, and in 1871 they are stated at $292,000,000 it is not fair, however, to charge the whole of this expenditure of 292,000,000, to the ordinary expenses of 1871 and I will directly tell you why.—But $292,000,000 is not the whole expenses of 1871. And how do you think it occured? If you were to look at the official report of the secretary of the treasury which I have in my hand you will find that he also in one place states the expenditures of the government in 1871 at 292,000,000, and gives the amount in each branch of the public service, so much for the civil service; so much for the navy; so much for the military establishment, —and so on; and you will find opposite the amount of the expenses set down for the military establishment to-wit. $35,790,991,82, a star which refers to a note at the bottom of the page, in small type, and if you will read it, you will find that it says, amount after deducing, $8,200,093,13 repaid into the treasury as the proceeds of the sale of ordnance, etc. The true expenditures were, $44,008,084 25, instead of $35,799,991 82. Now there is a difference of more than eight millions, not taken into the account. Why? Because the war department derived the money from the sale of the property of United States its ordnance which consisted in part of the arms, sold to the French. The government received for your property more than $8,000,000 and then spent it, and did not take it into the account in the gen general statement of the expenditures of the year.

A Voice—Did not any go to the Rusians?

Mr. Trumbull—I think the most of them went to France, and they only got to Russia when the Russians took them from the hands of the Frenchmen. (Laughter) But it is no matter where they went. I do not propose to discus that. My object was to show that the war department and the government of the United States in the year 1871, expended more than $300,000,000, instead of $295,000,000 and the evidence is conclusive.

In order to impose upon the country the idea of the expenses in 1871, were not greater than in 1860, in proportion to population, various deductions are made from this $292,000,000 as the table states it. In the first place $125,000,000 are deducted on account of interest paid upon the public debt.—That was right. The present administration is not responsible for any extravagance in paying the legal interest upon the puplic debt, and it is properly to be deducted from the gross expenditures of the year 1871. All agree that that is proper. But in 1860, is not deducted from the expeneses of the year. We paid over 3,000,000, in interest on the public debt in 1860 which in Mr. Dawes, table is not included in the ordinary expenses of that year, but the 125,000,000, is taken out of the expenses of 1871. Is that fair? In 1871 we paid $34,000,000, in pensions, I do not think that ought to be charged to the extravagance of any administration, because these pensions are provided for by law and must be paid, no matter who is in power The $34,000 000 is deducted properly, but if you deduct the amount paid for pensions in 1871, does not common fairness say that you must deduct the amount paid for pensions in 1860 and yet in this table it is not done. So when you make the proper deductions it will be found that the ordinary expenses of the government in 1871 are more than double what they were in 1860. The amount paid by every man woman and child for the ordinary expenditures of this government last year was $3 80 while in 1860 it was $185, instead of the amounts as stated in the foregoing table. other deductions made from the expenses of 1871 as chargeable to the war, are preposterous, such as 16,607,073 85 from expansion of military establishment.

Not to detain you with these details which although, important for the infoamation of the people, and necessary to understand and expose this attempt, to mislead them, I have said enough I trust to call the attention of this inteligent audience to the unfairnes unreliabilabilities of this table, which you will see scattered all over this state as a campaign document by the friends of the administration. When you see it examine for yourself and see if the interests and pensions are deducted from the expenses of 1871 and left in as part of the expenditures of 1860, you will not see in the table the fact about the money realized from the sale of ordinance That little sum of over 8,000,000, is omited from the table altogether.

Was I right when with a knowledge of the transaction I have exposed I took ground against the continuance of this system? Should I sit still, as the representative of the people of this great state, who have so often honored me with their confidence, and suffer such plunder of the treasury as I have exposed to you to-night to go on; such false statements to go out uncontradicted? And when I found it was impossible to make a correction through the republican organization because I was borne down and voted down and denounced by the Senatorial ring, was I wrong in my resolve to go to the people and call upon them to denounce and put down the Senatorial ring? (Applause.

A Laughable Love Story.

A rich old gentleman had only one daughter, possessed of the highest attractions, moral, personal and pecuniary. She was engaged and devotedly attached to a young man in every respect worthy of her choice. All the marriage preliminaries were arranged and the wedding was fixed to take place on a certain Thursday. On the Monday preceding the wedding-day the bridegroom elect (who was to have received $50,000 down on his wedding-day and a farther sum of $100,000 on his father-in-law's death, an event which would probably soon occur) had a little jealous squabble with his intended at an evening party. The "tiff" arose in consevuence of his paying more attention than she thought justifiable to a lady with sparkling eyes and inimitable ringlets.

The gentleman retorted, and spoke tauntingly of a certain cousin whose waistcoat was the admiration of the company, and hinted that it was embroidered by the fair heiress herself.—He added that it would be soon enough or him to be schooled after they were married; and that she had adopted the "breeches" a little to soon. After supper they became reconciled apparently, and the bridegroom elect, in taking leave, was kind and affectionate.—The next morning the swain regreted the angry feeling he had exhibited, and the cutting sarcasm with which he had given it vent; and as a part of the amend honorable, packed up a magnificient sattin dress which he had previously bespoken for his beloved (which had been sent home in the interval,) and sent it to the lady with the following note:—

"DEAR JANE—I have been unable to close my eyes all night, in thinking of our misunderstanding last evening. Pray pardon me; and in token of your forgiveness, deign to accept the accompanying dress, and wear it for the sake of your most affectionate HENRY."

Having written the note, he gave it to his servant to deliver with the parcel. But as a pair of pantaloons happened to need repairing, he availed himself of the opportunity, (the servant having to pass the tailor's shop) to send in another package to the tailor. The man made the fatal blunder! left the satin dress with Snip, and took the note and damaged trowsers to the lady. So exasperated was she, at what she considered a determined and deliberate affront, that when her admireor called she ordered the door to be closed in his face, refused to listen to any explanation, and resolutely broke off the match.

The 34th of October.

A funny scene occured in the Hocking County Court, of Common Pleas some years ago, Judge E—— presiding.

A man had been arrested for horse stealing, and set up an alibi in defence The defendant's main witness was an old farmer named Buchanan.

He claimed the prisoner was in his employ at the time the horse was stolen, at a point nearly a hundred miles distant, and consequently he could not be guilty.

The stealing was done on the 29th of October, and Buchanan had his 'book' of accounts in court to refresh his memory. Mr. S., who represented the State, knowing the witness was both unscrupulous and ignorant, concluded to test his knowledge of dates, and cross-examined in this wise.

You say that Mr. Ellis plowed for you all day on the 29th of October.

Yes. (referring to his book.)

What did he do on the 30th.

He chopped wood.

On the 31st?

That was Sunday and we went a squirrel hunting.

Well what did he do on the 32d?

He harrowed in wheat.

What did he do on the 33d?

It was raining and he shaved out some axe-handles.

What did he do on the 34th?

Chopped cord wood.

What did he do on the—

But before the question could be finished Buchanan's wife cleared the railing in front of the Judge's seat seized B. by the collar and whiskeyed him outside of the 'bar,' yelling in his affrighted ear:

'You blasted old fool, don't you know that there are only thirty-one days in October.'

Ellis' attempt at an alibi failed, as might be inferred.

An examination of Buchana's 'book showed that there were no entries made after the 29th of October, and that he had been drawing on his imagination as to the work done on each day.

There is uproar at the Grant camp at Indianapolis. Colonel John F. Wood, Assistant Postmaster, and one of Morton's administration men, has been found short on his accounts 84 600. It's only a small steal however. Fortysix hundred dollars of the peoples money don't amount to much when the partisans of Grant are drawing money by the quarter of a million from the United States Treasury for electioneering purpose.

Only a short time ago the Radicals were denouncing the Democratic party as the sum of all villainies the very embodement of all that is low, treasonable and vile—but now we see these same virtuous Radicals patting Democrats on the back and telling them to "stand by their colors and not forsake their glorious old party." If a Democrat says he will not support Greeley they send up a howl of rejoicing and kill the fatted calf in honor of the event. What do Democrats think of an act that so pleases the men who once reviled them? Is it not obvious that the best way to defeat your enemies is to do just what they oppose your doing.

A countryman created quite a sensation in Troy, Kansas, by bringing two live skunks in a bag to the Republican Convention. The committee on credentials excluded him, and the motion to take the scents of the meeting in question of admitting him failed.

Liberalism in Pennsylvania.

Among the prominent Pennsylvania Republicans who have recently declared for Greeley and Brown, are Gen. J. K. Moorehead, for many years a member of Congress from the Allaghany District; Hon. John W. Riddle, a prominent republican politician; Hon. Thomas Marshall, the most eloquent orator in the State; ex-Congressman Wm. Stewart; ex-Senators Landon and Mason, of Bradford county, and all the leading republican politicians of Crawford county. Such prominent Republicans as Senator McClure, ex Speaker Galusha A. Grow, Congressman Cake, Col. Dick Coulter, Senator Morrow B. Lowry, and a number of others, have already taken the stump for Greeley and Brown.

Mr. Greeley's letter, accepting the proffer of the Democratic nomination which we have already published, is another frank declaration of the main issue of the present campaign—whether the white men of the South shall be accorded the same political freedom and consideration that have been given to the black men. Mr. Greeley fought for the enfranchisement of the negro and for his civil rights as long as the negro was enslaved; he now proposes to fight for the equal rights of white men as against military despotism, carpet baggism and virtual repeal of the habeas corpus law. Mr. Greeley makes no ambiguous or imbecile conditions about accepting a Democratic nomination. He really accepts the nomination of the people who will elect him and stands simply on the platform of reform and reconciliation not upon that of any party.

Senator A. G. Thurman.

Senator Thurman, who is one of the ablest men in America, and who is acknowledged by all to be one of the purest statesmen living, has this to say about the Baltimore nominations:

WASHINGTON, July 12, '72.

Col. P. T. Spencer, Cleveland, Ohio:

MY DEAR SIR:—I have been of the opinion, for more than a year, that to give us any chance of success in the election next fall, the movement indicating the policy and the man must come from the people and not from the politicians, and especially, that the democratic members of Congress abstain from entering into any coalitions, and from everything that might look like dictating the course of the party. And this was the view very generally taken by the members. Individually, I preforred fighting under the democratic banner, with a straight democratic ticket; but I could not shut my eyes to the fact that a great many good Democrats were of a different opinion. And to me it seemed clear that any couase that did not emanate from the masses of the party would surely fail. Acting on this principle, I have not answered a single one of the many letters that I have received upon the subject. Not that I was unwilling to express my opinions, or to take my share of the responsibility, but because, occupying the position that I do I thought it the part of wisdom and patriotism not to interfere with the formation of an opinion by the people—the only opinion that could be safely followed by the opponents of the radical party. I condemn no man who took a different view of his duty, but I think that time and events have shown that mine was correct. The nomination of Greeley and Brown at the Baltimore convention, was the work of the people. The politicians had little to do with it. It was a tidal wave that swallowed up every thing in its way.... The true explanation of it is that the people mean to have a change of administration and will not let pride nor prejudice stand in the way of success. Not that the democratic party abandons its principles, for it does nothing of the sort. On the contrary—alleging as it truly does that the course to the radical leaders, in the White House and in Congress, threatens to destroy all constitutional and democratic government—it is bound by its principles to seek the overthrow of those leaders. And if it cannot overthrow them in precisely the mode it would prefer, it is but common sense to take the next best mode. Therefore, although I would have been better pleased had our party unanimously resoived to make a straight democratic fight. I am now (since the party has so willed it, and believe that the welfare and liberty of the country require the defeat of the present administration) firmly resolved to work, with earnestness and zeal for the election of Greeley and Brown. What else can a Democrat do who believes what he has been saying for years, that the continance in power of Grant, and the radical majority in Congress, would endanger the very existnce of constitutional government?

We have to choose between these two men, or throw away our franchise by refusing to vote. But are we willing to throw their franchise away? Who is there who places so little value upon it that he refuses to exercise it? Who is there ready to acknowledge that he is so weak that he cannot make up his mind, and therefore will not vote? I trust that no Democrat will ever be found in any such category.—Let every man who hesitates reflect that any change of administration is likely to be for the better; and that certainly it cannot be for the worse.—Yours truly.

A. G. THURMAN.

Horace Greeley for the best Men.

Hon. Horace Greeley—Sir:—I have the honor to enclose you a scrap cut from the Milwaukee Sentinel (a Grant paper) giving an imperfect account of the proceedings of the Democratic Convention of this State. I send you this for the purpose of calling your attention to the second paragraph of that platform (which is correctly reported) and of asking you whether the assurance it expressed is well founded.

It is my purpose to 'stump' this State, which I think we can carry, in behalf of the only man who can beat Grant, and desire, if you can properly give it, an affirmative answer to the above question for public use in the campaign.

Very respectfully yours, etc.
MOSES M. LTRONG.

The paragraph referred to, is as follows:

"That the exposition and elucidation of the platform of the Cincinnati Convention by Horace Greeley in his letter of acceptance of the nomination for President, furnish a satisfactory assurance to the American people that he will, if elected, administer the government upon the principles enunciated in that platform."

NEW YORK, June 24th '72.

Dear Sir:—I have yours of the 15th inst.—I did certainly intend in my letter of acceptance, to pledge myself unreservedly to the doctrines of the Cincinnati platform, and especially to the principle of choosing the best men to aid me in administering the executive branch of the government regardless of past differences.

Yours,
HORCE GREELEY.

Hon: MOSES M. STRONG,
Mineral Point, Wis:

Greeley's Letter of Acceptance.

The following is Mr. Greeley's letter accepting the nomination of the Baltimore Convention:

New York, July 18,1872

Gentlemen: Upon mature deliberation, it seems fit that I should give to your letter of the 10th inst., some farther and fuller response than the hasty, unpremeditated words in which I acknowledged and accepted your nomination at your meeting on the 12th.

That your Convention saw fit to accord its highest honors to one who had been prominently and pointedly opposed to your party in the earnest and sometimes angry controversies of the last forty years, is essentially noteworthy. That many of you actually preferred that the Liberal Republicans should present another candidate for President, and would have more readily united with us in the support of Adams or Trumble, Davis or Brown, is well known. I owe my adoption at Baltimore wholly to the fact that I have already been nominated at Cincinnati, and that a concentration of forces upon any new ticket has been proved impracticable. Gratified as I am at your concurrence in the Cincinnati nominations, certain as I am that that you would not have thus concurred had you not deemed me upright and capable, I find nothing in the circumstances calculated to inflate vanity or nourish self-conceit.

But, that your convention saw fit, in adopting the Cincinnati ticket, to reaffirm the Cincinnati platform, is to me a source of profoundest satisfaction.—That body was constrained to take this important step by no party necessity, real or supposed. It might have accepted the candidates of the Liberal Republicans upon grounds entirely its own, or it might have presented them (as the first Whig National Convention did Harrison and Tyler) without adopting any platform whatever.—That it chose to plant itself deliberately, by a vote nearly unanimous, upon the fullest and clearest enunciation of principle which are at once incontestable Republican and emphatically Democratic, gives trustworthy assurance that a new and more auspicious era is dawning upon our long distracted country.

Some of the best years and best efforts of my life were devoted to a struggle against chattel slavery—a struggle none the less earnest or arduous because respect for constitutional obligations constrained me to act for the most part on the defensive—in resistance to the diffusion rather than to direct efforts for the extinction of human bondage. Throughout most of those years, my vision was uncheered my exertions were rarely animated, by even as much as a hope that I should live to see my country peopled by freemen alone.—The affirmance by your Convention of the Cincinnati platform is a conclusive proof that not merely slavery is abolished, but that its spirit is extinct—that, despite the protests of a respectable but isolated few, there remains among us no party and no formidable interests which regrets the overthrow or desires the re-establishment of human bondage, whether in letter or in spirit. I am thereby justified in my hope and trust that the first century of American independence will not close before the elemental truths on which its rightfullness was based by Jefferson and the Continental Congress of 1776 will no longer be regarded as "glittering generalities," but will have become the universal accepted and honored foundations of our political fabric.

I demand the prompt application of those principles to our existing condition. Having done what I could for the complete emancipation of blacks, I now insist on the full enfranchisement of all my white country-men, Let none say that the ban has just been removed from all but a few hundred elderly gentlemen to whom eligibilities to office can be of little consequence. My view contemplates not the hundreds proscribed but the millions who are denied the right to be ruled and represented by the men of their unfettered choice Proscription were absurd if these did not wish to elect the very men whom they have forbiden to choose.

I have a profound regard for the people of that New England wherein I was born, in whose common schools I was taught. I rank no other people above them in intelligence, capability and moral worth. But, while they do many things well, and some admirably there is one thing which I am sure they cannot wisely or safely undertake, and that is the selection, for States remote from and unlike their own, of the persons by whom those States shall be represented in Congress. If they could do this in good purpose then Republican institutions were unfit, and aristocracy the only true political system.

Yet what have we recently witnessed? Zebulon B. Vance, the unquestioned choice of a large majority of the present Legislature of North Carolina—a majority backed by a majority of the people who voted at its elections—refused the seat in the Federal Senate to which he was fairly chosen, and the Legislature thus constrained to choose another in his stead, or leave the State unrepresented for years.—The votes, of New England deprived North Carolina of the Senator of her choice, and compelled her to send another in his stead—another who, in our late contest was like Vance was arebed, and a fighting rebel, but who had not served in congress before the war, as Vance had, though the latter remained faithful to the Union till after the close of his term. I protest against the disenfranchisement of a State—presumptively of a number of States—on grounds so narrow and technical as this: The fact that the same Senate which refused Vance his seat proceeded to remove his disabilities after that seat had been filled by another, only serves to place in a stronger light the indignity to North Caralina, and the arbitrary, capricious tyrrany which dictated it. I thank you gentlemen that my name is to be conspiciously associated with yours in a determined effort to render amnesty complete and universal, in spirit as well as in letter, Even defeat in such a cause would leave no sting, while triumph would rank with those victories which no blood reddens and which evoke no tears but those of gratitude and joy.

Gentlemen, your platform which is also mine, assures me that Democracy is not henceforch to stand for one thing and Republicanism for another, but that those terms are to mean in politics, as they always have meant in the dictionary, substantially one and the same thing—namely, equal rights, regardless of creed, or clime, or color.—I hail this as a genuine new departure from outworn feuds and meaningless contentions in the direction of progress and reform. Whether I shall be found worthy to bear the standard of the Liberal movement which the American people have inaugurated is to be determined not by words but by deeds.—With me if I steadily advance, over me if I falter, its grand array moves on to achieve for our country her glorious beneficent destiny.

I remain, gentlemen yours,
HORACE GREELEY.

To James R. Doolittle, chairman of the Convention, and Messrs F. W. Sykes, John C McCabe, and others Committee.

John R. Cravens For Lieutenant Governor.

The Democrat State Central Committee met last evening, and at the suggestion of of the Liberal Republican State executive committee, unanimously selected Hon. John R. Cravens of Jefferson county, a liberal Republican, as the candidate for Lieutenant Governor in the place of Hon W. C. Depaw, who, for personal reasons declined the nomination for that position tendered him by the Deomcratic State Convention.

Mr. Cravens is well and favorably known throughout the State as a gentleman of fine ability and accomplishments, in every way qualified for the position; and of this he has given practical evidence by having served most acceptably as the presiding officer of the Senate, and, consequently, acting Lieutenant Governor. Mr. Cravens was a Whig, then a Van Buren elector, upon the Free Soil ticket, from whence he slid into the Republican party. He was elected to the State Senate by the Republicans of Jefferson county, and at the last 22d of February Republican State convention he was appointed elector for the Third Congressional District, which he resigned a few weeks ago.

Mr. Cravens is an honest man.—His public career is without a blemish upon his official integrity. And he has followed his convictions of duty regardless of party obligations. He would not depart from what he regarded to be right, to gain a party of personal advantage. And this fidelity to principle sometimes led him to oppose the caucus dictations of his party.—In identiying himself with the Liberal Republican party, Mr. Cravens is governed by what he regards to be duty and convictions of right. He hartily endorses the Liberal Republican platform and nominees, and he will devote his abilities his energy, and his time to the cause which he is identified in the canvass now pending.—He will be heard on the stump through out Indiana in the advocacy of Greeley and Brown, and in support of the State ticket upon which he is now enrolled as a candidate.—State Sentinel.

North Carolina votes next Thursday. It is difficult to guess what the result may be, owing to the vast amount of money being expended by the Administration at Washington to carry the State. North Carolina has been giving a radical majority of something like 10,000, but if the people, under the present issues, were left to act for themselves they would undoubtedly vote against corruption and misrule.—The governor has also the power to appoint Judges of election for each county, and he being a Radical carpet bagger, the order of the day, will be to stuff ballot boxes, and there is no telling what the result may be. Had the people a chance of an honest expression, there would be no more carpet baggers in office in that State.

Mr. Bowels calls an Senator Chandler for his sober sense upon the situation. Which is rather cruel.

Judge Frazier—$10,000.

One Judge Frazier, we believe whilom of the Supreme Bench and now a Grant officeholder—some foreign appointment—instead of attending to his official duties is being used by the officeholders ring to lecture the people about their public duties. The Lafayatte Dispatch says he is advertised to speak at all the cross-roads in Tippecanoe county, and in this way he is compensating for his office of $10,000 a year. This is getting down pretty low for an ex-Judge of the Supreme Court, who was supposed to entertain some rather elevated notions of his personal dignity—but Mr. Morton, Grant's hench-man, marks out his work, and like the sow wallowing in the mire, he lauds the ability and purity of this corrupt administration—the administration that has for its warm supporters those pure men and disinterested patriots—Morton, Cameron, Chandler, Nye, Casey, Tom Murphy and the special pets of Grant and Morton, the New York storekeepers, Leet and Stocking. Judge Frazer gets his ten thousand dollars a year and he is bound to do whatever dirty work Morton & Co., map out for him.—Sentinel.

An Eye to the Future.

Schofield, the Radical Congressman from Erie (Pa.) district, who addressed a Radical meeting in Circleville, durging the campaign of 1867, is somewhat noted for his 'soft scaping' qualities. He has an extraordinary faculty of rubbing his acquaintances down and making a palaver over them Some time ago after he had returned from a visit to the Congressional 'refreshment room' he met the well known Judge Black, of Pa., who besides being one of the greatest men is also one of the plainest speaking men in the country, when the following scene is reported to have occurred:

Schofield—Ah, Judge, glad to see you; how well you are looking, you look younger than you did fifteen years ago.

Judge Black—A fine day, Mr. Schofield.

Schofield—It's a pity Judge that a man of your splendid mind should not be in the public service; you are too great a man to remain in the minority.

The Judge responded with a shrug and grunt.

Judge, you had better come over to us; we would do handsomely by you, Judge.

I have thought sometimes about it, Mr. Schofield, but there is one obstacle in the way.

Schofield (eagerly). Ah, Judge, what can that be? Is it a seriousone? Can't something be done to remove it? You are too great—

Judge (impatiently). Yes sir a serious one—a very serious one—I believe in a hell!

The Chicago Tribune is authority for the statement that it is the intention of Grant's administration to use the funds in the Treasury in the hazard game of attempting to elect the Unpopular and Incapable party now luxurating at Long Branch. This item of profit and loss is not to be included in the regular monthly statement of the Treasury Department.

A rousing big ratificatiotn meeting had at Goshen, which was participated in by the Liberal Republicans as well as Democrats.

Even a Radical paper says: 'No wonder that Mosby goes for Grant. It's a habit he got into during the late war.

They call it by a new name. With Gen Tom Brown it is "eating meat," but Dich Oglesby calls it "direct rays of the sun.'

Among the Liberals in Connecticut are twenty-one leading Republicans of the highest standing. 'Men whom we are sorry to lose,' says the Hartford Post.

'I know what General Sherman thinks,' writes Joe Hooker, 'and I knew that he left for Europe solely because he wanted to take no part in the Grant campaign.'

Albert Scheffer, of St. Paul, brother of the State Treasurer of Minnesota, reports that at places in Wisconsin visited by him the Germans are generally for Greeley.

Thomas W. Hayden, of Boston, writes from there: 'The Liberal movement has steadily gained in strength since the nomination, and I think is rapidly gaining day by day.'

'It is amusing to see the organ of General Grant quoting the endorsement of him by the London press, That endorsement has cost the country too much. We doubt not, the British government would always like to have Grant so negotiate with.

C. H. Granger, of Rutland, Vermont, shows that the same state of things exists there, as follows:

'I think I am within bounds in stating our strength is from twenty to twenty-five per cent. of the Republicans, and all of the Democrats.'

Mark Twain says Franklin was always proud of telling how he entered Philadelphia for the first time, with nothing in the world but two shillings in his pocket and four rolls of bread under his arm.—But really it was nothing. Anybody could have done it.

LAND FOR SALE!
Or Lease.

I will sell low and on fair terms 100 acres of land in Wilmington-tp., of this county, or will lease with privilege of timber on advantageous terms. Land well timbered. Lies on two roads, a school house on one corner, and not far from a church and saw mill. About half way between Auburn and Butler, and two miles from the Air Line R. R.—Lies between Abraham Enkright and Wm. Funk's farms. Good soil. Inquire at the place of Mr Enkright or address,

The Auburn Courier

OFFICIAL PAPER of the COUNTY

Local and Miscellaneous.

Dog days, now.

New wheat coming in.

No empty dwelling houses in Auburn.

Don't fail to hear Hendricks' speech on August 1st.

THE new Baptist church is nearly ready for the roof.

Don't forget the balloon ascension on the 1st of August.

THE brick work on the new block commenced last Monday.

The Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5, Ft. Wayne is the place to buy cheap.

A SON of Dr. Littlefield, a sprightly young man, is visiting our place.

THE whereabouts of Montgomery, late of the Mishawaka Enterprise, has not yet been discovered.

Mrs. Kate Thompson, daughter of our postmaster, is spending a few days under the parental roof.

THE DeKalb Circuit Court will convene next Monday. There are but few new cases on this docket.

Spotted Tail, Colonel Mosby and the London Times have declared for Grant. Two of these have no vote.

OUR friend, John Hall, has just returned from a visit to Iowa, reporting crops and Greeleyites quite abundant.

THE Republicans talk of getting up a list of subscribers for the Chicago Times. Several Democrats will be embraced in the list.

Grady's circus passed through here last Tuesday morning en route for Spencerville, Auburn not being large enough for a first-class bore. Glad of it.

Senator Hendricks will speak here today, and we want to see all, liberal Republicans and Democrats, on hand to hear the great statesman. Come everybody.

Rev. Mr. Lamport, of Angola, preached at the M. E. Church last Sabbath evening and the attendance was so large that a large number were compelled to listen from the outside.

When you go to Fort Wayne to buy clothing ask for one of our price lists before you purchase your goods, and get posted on prices and not be cheated by outsiders.

S. Lauferty, our popular dry goods merchant, intends entering into the clothing trade exclusively, and is now effecting arrangements to bring on one of the largest stocks ever seen in the county.

THE show at Spencerville, last Tuesday, did not give general satisfaction. The balloon ascension was made better than at Waterloo, going about a quarter of a mile high.

JACK DEVOR, has sold the LaGrange Standard to John B. Rerick, former editor. We are sorry to loose Jack, but trust that his loss will be our gain, in the person of Mr. R. Success to both.

Gov. Oglesby, in his speech on Monday spoke in glowing terms of the beauty, of the "Land of Goshen."—Times.

Did he say anything about the "meat" of Indianapolis?

MCNIECE, of the Fort Wayne Gazette is to reply to Senator Hendricks' speech.—In order to offset this Sergeant, Ed. Kennedy, a lunatic is to reply to Senator Wilson's speech soon to be delivered.

THE Rads, of Fort Wayne, are in a bad way. Their best man for Sheriff has declined the nomination, because he can't stand the pressure of the balance of the ticket. He is for Greeley. Hurrah for Greeley!

Remember the grand bowar dance to be given on the first of August. It will, no doubt, be better than the one on the 4th of July. The propritors are working hard to improve the floor, etc., so as to please all.

THERE is talk of erecting a large tank on an elevation high enough so that when filled with water it can be used in cases of fire, sprinkling streets, etc. We believe it would be found advantageous, and hope it will meet with encouragement.

An old lady, who don't come to town very often, on entering one of our stores the other day said: "Why, do you keep this store yet? I thought you had gone out of business; I hain't seen your name in the paper for ever so long, and I s'p'ose you had sold out."

THE Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company have negotiated in England a loan of $10,000,000, with which they propose at once to build their extension from Pittsburg to Chicago.

If you want the worth of your money, be treated by gentlemanly clerks, and not be asked for goods three times more than they are worth, go to the Red Front clothing hall, No. 5. Keystone block, Fort Wayne.

We learn that a young lady living near Goshen recently had the misfortune to lose her bustle, which dropped to the ground as she was walking along the street. A file of the Goshen Times rolled therefrom as it "lit." "Anything to beat Greeley!"

THE Goshen Times excuses the small attendance at Oglesby's speech, because of the busy season. Played out. Come over to Auburn next Thursday, and we'll show you a crowd to hear an honest man, Gov. Hendricks, if it don't rain.

Everybody that goes to Fort Wayne, should not fail to call at the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone block, and see the largest stock of clothing in the city. It has all been bought for cash before the late advance of wool.

THE meanest woman in the State of Indiana lives near Ligonier. She charges preachers 40 cents for a bowl of bread and milk, and her sister is required to pay her board while there visiting. A religious revival might be made servicable in that locality.

THE funeral of Mr. Michael Hedekin, who died in Fort Wayne last week, took place on Wednesday. A large number of citizens followed his remains to the tomb. The services at the Cathedral were performed by Bishop Dwenger and Rev. W. Brammer, and were very impressive.

Lots of people that has never been in Fort Wayne and are not acquainted can find the Red Front clothing hall, No. 5, Keystone block. Any woman or child can find this place, and you will save from 20 to 25 cents on each dollar. Every article is marked in plain figures.

Another lot of Indians have gone to interview the President, with Spotted Tail, who killed Big Mouth, at the head of the party. It is not stated what they want this time, probably tomahawks and scalping knives, though. They passed through Fort Wayne on Saturday last.

To Judge from the length of the article in the last Commercial, Hendrick's speech at Columbia City, must have hurt the Radical heart somewhat. Doubtless old Moxa will be around to revive their drooping spirits, with his story of what I know about the war. O. P. is right on it.

WHEN our friends at Waterloo have another balloon ascension, they should put a guard over the alcohol, and not allow it to be drank up. No wonder the balloon colasped so soon, it did not have the ascending power by burning alcohol. It is a mistake to drink it, it should be burnt.

FRUITS of various kinds are plenty now, but, as yet the apples and peaches are rather puny, and look as though, notwithstanding their size, it would not take any more than five cents worth of them to create a $25 doctor's bill, or perhaps a funeral procession. The most of it should be eaten with great care

THE biggest fool of a paper is the Fort Wayne Free Press. It supports Hendricks and the State and county ticket on a liberal platform, and yet is opposed to Greeley. It goes for men, not principle.—Come, neighbor, there is a chance yet to climb up the wall and rub out those chalk marks. "A Nass."

THE neat dry goods and grocery establishment of Goe Barney & son, at Spencerville, is wide awake in all the enterprises, and is enjoying a fine trade. We were shown a fine grade of sugar at 12½ cents per pound and other articles equally as cheap. The proprietors understand their business.

Spencerville, though still without railroad communication, is nevertheless gradually improving. Several fine additions in the way of builaings having recently been made. Located in the beautiful fertile valley of the St. Joe, it is destined from its location alone to make an important point in business and trade at an early day.

CHANGE.—The running time of the Detroit, Hillsdale & Indiana, and Detroit, Eel River & Illinois Railroad, has been changed, as will be seen by referring to corrected time table on first page. The Fort Wayne Jackson & Saginaw Railroad table has also been corrected, a change in the running of trains having recently been made on that road.

THE editors of the Press have not stated yet which one of that talented duett, made the remark about Mr. Meese before his nomination. It must have been said, as two reliable citizens of Waterloo say so. Come, neighbor, don't try to evade answering by any soft solder about assertions. The people down this way want to know what you meant.

Gov. Oglesby, of Illinois, spoke to the largest crowd ever assembled in Indianapolis on Tuesday evening.—Ex.

He did not speak very long, for he had got hold of some of Tom Browne's "meat" and the governor was wound up for only fifteen minutes when he immediately ran down. Anything (hic) to beat Greeley, were the last words of Oglesby.

THE Pioneer House, of Spencerville kept by Squire Rhodes, a most agreeable and excellent host, enjoys quite an extended reputation as a first-class hotel. It is not so pretentious as some, but the food dished up by the aimable hostess, is clean and palatable, more we cannot say of the best. When you go to Spencerville be sure to stope with the Squire, and get a good square meal.

MARRIAGES.—The following marrirge licenses were issued from the Clerk's office during July:

W. W. Woods and Paulina Freeman.
Hugh Anthrupt and Elizabeth Mochamar.
Cyrus Meyers and Mary C. Fisher,
Edward John and Elizabeth Ober.
A. C. Keating and E. M. Bevitt.
O. Ernst and Eleanor Penny.
Wm. Younglove and S. A. Harris.
J. O. Frank and Hattie Sanford.

HENDRICKS!

Candidate for Governor.

Will positively be present and make one his able speeches in defence of Justice, Honesty and Economy.

and hear the FACTS.

A GRAND

Balloon Ascension!

IN THE AFTERNOON,
Under the Management of
Mr. J. M. KINNEY,
of Columbus, Ohio.

THE latest news we have of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad is that contracts have been let from Defiance east and that it is determined to have the road in running order by the first of January next.—A new survey has been made from this point east bearing south, but the company regard it as being too far south for their purpose. Spencerville made an effort to have it touch that place, and that was the answer given.

THIS is the way it is done in Grand Haven, according to the Herald: "The other night a young man propounded the usual question to the idol of his heart.—She laid her soft, snow-white hand in his puther head upon his manly shoulder, hore a sweet sight of resignation, and in dulcet accents that sounded like sweet music upon the water, whispered: "Yes, dear; anything to beat Grant." They were married.

Mr. C. P. Houser has been engaged to take charge of the Spencerville Seminary, the fall term opening Aug. 19th. A better selection of principal could not have been made as Mr. Houser not only possesses all the qualifications of a good teacher but has a large experience in the profession, and is well known in every district in the county. Miss Sylvia Orr, of Corunna, will assist him, and we have not the least doubt but that the coming term will be a very successful one. Terms $2, $3 and $5 according to department.

The democratic county treasurer of Ripley county, in this State, is a defaulter to the amount of five thousand dollars, and the democratic auditor of Seneca county Ohio, recently ran away to Canada with a large sum of the people's money. We mention these facts to show that democratic officials, in the few places they remain in power, are not allowing their old repution to suffer.—Waterloo Press.

And just to show that the Radical officials even where they are not in power will steal, we refer to the case of Durgin, of Fort Wayne, just to show that they will swindle whether they are in power or not.

THE NEW POSTAL CARDS.—The Post Office Department, in answer to many inquiries relating to the new postal card system provided for by Congress, states that a printed business card will be charged one cent for transmission provided it has only an address written on it; for more than that regular postage will be charged. A person cannot make postal cards for himself by attaching a one cent stamp on a blank card and then writing on it. No card will be recognised but the one issued by the department. The cards will be ready for sale and distribution by the Post-masters some time in September.

EDITOR COURIER:

I see a card in your paper, of July 25, denying the charge of Mr. Baxter substituting his son in office, if nominated and elected. I also understood, by report, that I should have manufactured said report. I also say that the charge, as made, is false. The report of that idea come to me from the North part of the county by two different sourses. I simply have to say that if Mr. Baxter was so informed, that the person so informing him was mistaken. I have lived in the county for 28 years and have never manufactured anything for the purpose of injuring any man's popularity and I do not intend to commence at this time.

Yours respectfully
DANL. Z. HOFFMAN.

SUCCESSFUL.

We are pleased to state that the balloon ascension made at Hicksville under the management of J. M. Kinney, Esq., last Saturday was one of the grandest ever made in this country. Several of our citizens were present, and they pronounce it a splendid affair. It was several times superior to that at Waterloo, because it went higher and only went up once. Prof Palmer made the ascenson and startled the people with his wonderful trapeze acts There was a large crowd present, and everybody went home well pleased, more than we can say of those at Waterloo or Auburn.

Everything promises well for a grand ascension here to-day (Aug. 1st) and as there are two balloons and two Aeronauts Profs. Rivers and Palmer, we think there will be a slim chance for a failure. Kinney will manage the inflation and that alone assures us. Come in, then, everybody, and weather permitting you will see something in the way of a grand balloon ascension.

THAT ASCENSION.

Having a special invitation from our neighbors of the Press to attend, to see "our balloon" at Waterloo last Saturday, we did not go over, only, however, for the want of time. "A large number of our citizens attended, and from their accounts, the scene must have been appalling. Think of a human being going up—actually right up in a balloon, at least two hundred feet, and then come right down again, and live. It was magnificently thrilling, and caused everybody to stare with wonder—at the stupid affair—There is only one question not settled yet, and we are at a loss to know which horn of the dilemma to take. Some of those in attendance asservate that the hightest altitude attained was two hundred feet, while those of a more romantic turn of mind, claim that the word "miles" ought to be substituted in place of feet. The great disparity as to this point is not astonishing, to be sure, and the slight shade of difference as to heighth, ought to be harmonised in the question, pertinately asked, How is that for high? Taking it for granted that the latter are correct just think of the sublime beauty of a balloon with or without a man, two hundred miles high! Then see the aeronaut wave something white, can't tell whether its a handkerchief, or something else, two hundred miles so directly above you, that you can't see it unless you lie—on your back. And then, if this is grand just think what two hundred feet would be, with the additional attraction of coming down against a warehouse, and then shooting off by itself so innocently miles away over the housetops to Uniontown. No wonder the people yelled and cried 'till they were hoarse—with chagrin at their disappointment, but of course it was the show's fault in not performing what they advertised. Doubtless the show folks done the best they could under the circumstances, as it is recognized all over the country as a one-horse affair.

The system of toning and stimulating the nerve structure through the agency of the curative properties of Smolander's Buchu, is fully approved of by family physicians, who have discovered that for kidney, bladder and glandular diseases, mental and physical debility, maladies of the urino-genital organs, gravel and diabetes, it is a safe and efficacious remedy, as well as for all uterine complaints.

BALLOONS.—Tommy Mays, went into the balloon business. It wasn't a success, and he is as inconsolable as a little boy who has lost his playthings. We always did sympathize with boys in this predicament, and to prove it we will give Tommy a free ticket to the show, if he will come up here and see our balloon on the 27th. There, now, Tommy, be a good boy, and quit crying about your balloon.—Press.

We could not come over, neighbor, and congratulate you on your signal triumph at Ballooning, but nevertheless our thanks are due, as we are assured that had you had control of the matter it would have been a good deal worse. But we're done crying, and our sorrow is turned to joy. We can assure you, we are laughing, and in first-rate humor on the balloon question. As you have been so kind allow us to reciprocate, by extending an invitation to be present August 1st, to an ascension what is an ascension, providing it don't bust, the weather is favorable, etc.

Says the Detroit Free Press: 'Having purchased the Confederate archives, won't the Government be good enough to inform the country just how many General Logan recruited in Illinois for the rebel army.'

A New Use for Rum.

The seizure of liquor by the State constables in Massachusetts furnishes many refreshing little incidents, which help to make life tolerable in a dry and thirsty land. At North Adams, the other day, a resolute officer seized a jar of something and took it before a magistrate, when the following interesting conversation took place:

The attorney for the prisoner asked the constable if he knew it was liquor. He replied:

Yes, it is rum; I drank some of it.

The prisoner, a woman, was then called.

Did you have any liquor in your house when the State constable called there?

Yes, I had some in a jar.

How long have you had it?

About six months.

Did you have it for sale?

No, I don't sell liquor.

What did you keep this rum for?

I keep it to wash the baby.

Had you ever washed the baby in this rum?

Oh, yes, often; I used to turn the rum out in a dish, wash the baby in it, and then turn it back into the jar.

There was laughter in the court, and the State constable declared that he would never seize no more liquor kept in a jar.

The Jewels—A Rabbinical Tradition.

The celebrated teacher, Rabbi Meir, sat during the whole of one Sabbath day in the public school, instructing the people. During his absence from the house his two sons died, both of them of uncommon beauty, and enlightened in the law. His wife bore them to her bed-chamber, laid them upon the marraige-bed and spread a white covering over their bodies. In the evening, the Rabbi Meir came home.

Where are my two sons, he asked, that I may give them my blessing? I repeatedly walked round the school, and did not see them there.

She reached him a goblet. He praised the Lord at the going out of the Sabbath drank, and again asked:

Where are my sons, that they too, may drink of the cup of blessing?

They will not be far off, she said, and placed food before him that he might eat.

He was in a gladsome and genial mood; and when he said grace after the meal, she thus addressed him:

Rabbi, with thy permission I would fain propose to thee one question.

Ask it, then, my love he replied.

A few days ago a person intrusted some jewels to my custody, and now he demands them again; should I give them back?

This is a question, said Rabbi, which my wife should not have thought it necessary to ask. What! wouldst thou hesitate, or be reluctant to restore to every one of his own?

No, she replied, but yet I thought it best not to restore them without acquainting you therewith:

She then led him to the chamber, and, stepping to the bed, took the white covering from the dead bodies.

Ah, my sons, my sons! thus loudly lamented the father; my sons! the light of my eyes, and the light of my understanding. I was your father, but ye were my teachers in the law.

The mother turned away, and wept bitterly. At length she took her husband by the hand and said:

Rabbi, didst thou not teach me that we must not be reluctant to restore that which was intrusted to our keeping? To us the Lord gave, the Lord hath taken away, and blessed be the name of the Lord.

Blessed be the name of the Lord! echoed Rabbi; and blessed be His name for thy sake, too, for well it is written, Whoso hath found a virtuous wife, hath a greater treasure than costly pearls; she openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness.

Grover & Baker's

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and sti, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

VOLLMER'S Elixir of PYROPHOSPHATE OF IRON AND PERUVIAN BARK.

In this preparation are combined the valuable properties and virtues of Peruvian Bark, with Phosphorous and Iron, in the shape of Pyrophosphate of Iron. This Elixir will be found of great advantage in Dyspepsia, Indigestion, weak and delicate Stomachs, and generally in weak and delicate states of the system.

The ingredients in this Elixir are skillfully blended into a delightful Cordial, making it the most agreeable and palatable combination to the taste, in use.
ar. 30, '70.

FOUTZ'S CELEBRATED Horse and Cattle Powders.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which everyone should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey and a little care taken in examination of routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R." running from Chicago, through Galesburg to Burlington, and the "I., B. & W. Route," running from Indianapolis, through Bloomington to Burlington, have achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading passenger routes to the west. At Burlington they connect with the B. & M. R. R. and from the great Burlington route, which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories and passenger starting from DeKalb county, on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the Burlington route.

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B & M. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

W. W. WORTHINGTON, Supt.

Germany's War Speculation.

The war expenses of the German Empire, in its recent 'raid' into France, were $277,000,000, or, including tax-paying value of Alsace and Lorane, to $1,440,000,000. This leaves a net cash profit to Germany on the war of $1,162,000,000, or nearly five millions of dollars a day for every day of the war. The utmost that had ever before been done was to make a war pay its expenses out of enemy. But since the incursions of the hardy and vigorous Goths and Vandals into decrepit and demoralized Rome, there has been no such magnificent return even from wars of conquest. The France German war being a self-defense on the part of Germany, and of aggresion on that of France, the net result is all the more astounding.

How a Printer got his Pay.

A circus company in Iowa owed an editor a bill for advertising and refused to pay it. Thereupon the editor called on the sheriff, who attached the Bengal tigar and him around to the newspaper office in his cage. He was placed in the composing room, and during the first two days he not only consumed fifteen dollars worth of beef, but he scratched six dollars worth of trowsers from the leg of a local reporter who endeavored to stir him up with a broom-handle to make him roar. On the third day the tigar broke loose, and the entire force of compositors descended the staircase with judicious suddenness. The editor was alarmed to find his exit through the composing room cut off, and that the latch upon the sanctum door was broken. So he climbed out of the window and sought safety upon the roof. The paper was not issued for a week, and even after the tiger was shot the editor had to slide down the water spout because he was afraid to descend by the rout by which he came.

Senator Bayard, of Delaware, who labored earnestly for a straight Democratic nomination at Baltimore, has gracefully yielded to the inevitable, and written a letter in favor of Greeley and Brown. If the issues of the campaign, says Mr. Bayard 'were those only of revenue reform, or of civil service reform, I might be willing to take no part in the presidential contest but allow the demoralizing course pursued by Grant and his administration to be continued four years longer; but the destruction of the limitations upon power which our written constitution of government was designed to create, and which General Grant and those who assist him in administering the government, seem to totally disregard, or take scornful pleasure in trampling under foot, are wrongs which cannot be endured and must be reformed. He will support Mr. Greeley as the most likely or practical means of restoring a better condititition of feeling in the North toward the South and security and justice to that oppressed region.

An old farmer was out one fine day looking over his broad acres, with an ax on his shoulder, and a small dog at his heels They espied a wood chuck. The dog gave chase and drove him into a stone wall, when action immediately commenced.—The dog would draw the woodchuck partly out from the wall, and the woodchuck would take the dog back. The old gentleman's sympathy getting high on the side of the dog, he thought he would help him. So putting himself in position with the ax above the dog, he waiting for the extrication of the woodchuch, when he would cut him down. Soon an opportunity offered, and the old man struck, but the woodchuck gathered up at the same time took the dog in a far enough to receive the blow, and the dog was killed on the spot. For year's after the old gentleman, relating the story, would add: 'And that don't know to this day but what the wood chuch killed him.'

A New Theory.

Prof. Gunning, of New York, has recently put forth an interesting theory in regard to the drainage of lakes in United States, which he believes was originally through the Mississippi into the Gulf of Mexico. The Niagara river, according to his statement, has an existence of not more than 200,000 years. Before that period a barrier more than thirty feet high across the Ningra plateau threw the waters of Lake Erie back upon Michigan, and father west to the Mississippi western geologists have found an old river channel from the lakes to the Illinois river, and a great barrieronce stretched across the plateau. The old river bed in Illinois and the broken bridge across the Niagara plateau account for the comparatively recent creation of the falls. Such is the theory of Prof. Gunning. It is in some respects plausible enough, but we expect to see a grand descent of the geologists upon it, and a thorough refutation of premises and deduction. Until then it is as good any other.

Two urchins, Tom and Jack, went to school for the first time. The teacher asked Tom what his name was:

'Taum,' was the reply.

'No, my boy, you should not say Tom, but Thomas."

"Taumas," repeated the boy.

'That's better.'

Now, my lad,' said he, turning to the other, whose face suddenly brightened up with a new conceived idea, 'What's your name?'

'Jackas!' replied the hopeful urchin promptly.

My notion of a wife at forty is, said Jerrold, that a man should be able to change her like a bank-note—for two twenties.

Railroad Adventures in Ohio.

'John' in the New York Sun.

I was riding in the cars some days ago, and I sat alongside a fellow who was weather beaten as if he had been sitting six weeks astradle of a watermellon trying to put out the sun by spitting at it.—We conversed. I said to him what's your name?

Said he, Adolphus.

Your Mother's name?

Mary.

I looked amased, and says I, Mary! Mary! can it be possible that you are the lamb?

The what, says he.

Yes, the lamb that Mary had. He reveal-ed the fact that he was not the lamb, and he further observed, 't is all-fired hot to-day.

Did you ever visit a tropical clime, says I".

A what?

A hot clime.

Jimming crix stranger I've plowed up a side hill Fourth of July when the sun set my straw hat on fire, and if that ain't a hot climb why I hain't been to one as yet

Before I had to reply, the conductor shouted tickets.

Greeny—I've got none.

Conductor—Money then.

I hain't got any.

Got a pass.

No, I hain't got no pass.

Thunder and spikes; you don't expect to travel on the cars for nothing, do you, sir?

You advertise to take a fellow for nothing anyhow.

How so?

Why, down there in your office in Cincinnati, you've got a great big sign stuck up in store writing, it says, Through to New York without change.

The conductor dropped his anchor and put that felow ashore by a white post with some black litters on it which read C 30 miles.

Something Tifferent—A Large Beer Story.

I pese glad to see you, like ash never vas Mister Cris; when did Zinzinnaty goome away from you?

Such was the warm salutation of a Teutonic friend whom we met the other day in a distant city, where he had recently gone to reside. The reader might guess in a long time what business our friend from Cincinnati was engaged in, so we will tell you; he kept a lager-beer saloon.

How do you like your new location? we inquired after his raptures at meeting a Cincinnatian had somewhat abated.

Nice poys in this town; nish poys. The first night vot I opens me saloon, they goomes in and galls for lager peer, doo eight, seex, half a tozzen of 'em; unt ven I says, 'Who makes pay for this too zoon already? by dam, dey say, put it on te schlate. I dole tem, I don't geep no schlate, Den dey says, you better as send out unt puy a schlate. Vel, I vants to aggommodate—there's no principal in dose tings—so, I pought a schlate. The peer gopt calling for more poys, unt I gept putting the schlate onto dem. Pooty quick already I dells tem the schlate it pese full on poth sides, unt dem dey dells me if the schlate pese full I petter ash fill my dam Tuch head mit 'em! Vell, dat ish all right—there's no brincipal in dose tings—dey are nish poys.

Pooty bime by after leedle, dey makes smash mime par, preaks mine pottles, unt knocks hail tamanation out of mine looking glass mit mine head. Mine Cott! I vash mad, I radder you kive me ten dollar so much ash I vash mad. But dat pese all right—ther's no principal in doze—that makes nix tifference. Nice poys, dem.

Then they galls me a tam Tuch son 'f kun, unt I dells 'em they petter as go to the tuyful, their own tam American sconagun! Vash I right? Vell, that makes nottings tifferent

They knocks the staircase town mine frow, unt throws the widow out of the papy. That's all right—makes nottin tifference—there's no brincipal in that—nice poys—but (growing very much excited, and emphailing each word on the bar with his fist) they puts water in mine class of peer—there's some brincipal in dose tings—that makes sometings tifferent!

In New York there is a mill which makes from paper such articles as milk pans, cups, bread pans, wash bowls, etc., which are said to superior to wood or metal. The paper being ruled, is pressed to shape, dried, enameled, and subjected to a heat would destroy some utensils of the kind. The material is light and easily handled, and does not rust, shrink, leak or easily break.

The Teutonic tailor of a Pennsylvania village having married a second wife indecently soon after the funeral of the first, the young men of the place notified their disapproval by the tin-horn serenade during the progress of the wedding feast—The vulgar fraction of a man expostulated in the following style:

'I say poys you ought to be ashamed to be making all dis noise ven dare vas a funeral here so soon.'

What a picture of anxious love defending its objects against a siege of importunities is brought before the mind by the following advertisement taken from a western paper:

Enlarged—Miss Anna Gould to John Candall, City Marshal, of Leavenworth, Kansas. From this time henceforth and forever—until Miss Anna Gould becomes a widow—all young men are requested to withdraw their particular attentions.

Willing and Fathful.

A few years ago a large drug firm in a provincial city advertised for a boy. Next day the place was thronged with applicants, and among them was a queer-looking little fellow, accompanied by a women who proved to be his aunt, in lieu of faithless parents by whom he had been abandoned. Looking at the little waif, the merchant promptly said:

Can't take him—places all full; besides he is too small.

I know he is small, said the woman but he is willing and faithful.

There was a twinkle in the boy's eyes that made the merchant think again. A partner in the firm volunteered the remark that he did not see what they wanted of such a boy; he wasn't big enough. But after a consultation the boy was set to work.

A few days latter a call was made on the boys in the warehouse for some one to stay all night. The prompt response of the little fellow contrasted well with the reluctance of the others. In the middle of the night the merchant looked in to see if all was right at the warehouse, and presently discovered his youthful protege busily cutting out labels.

What are you doing? said he; I did not tell you to work during the night, my boy.

I know you did't tell me, but I thought I might as well be doing something.

In the morning the cashier received orders to double that boy's wages, for he is willing.

Only a few weeks elapsed before a show of wild beasts passed through the streets, and, very naturally, all hands in the ware house rushed to see the spectacle. A theif saw his opportunity, and entered at the back door to seize something, but in a twinkling found himself clutched by the diminutive clerk, and after a severe struggle was captured. Not only was a robbery prevented, but valuable articles taken from other shops were recovered. When asked why he watched when all the others quitted their work, he said:

You told me never to leave the warehouse when others were absent, and so I staid.

Orders were immediately given once more.

Double that boy's wages; he is willing and faithful.

To-day that boy is getting a large salary.

Senator Trumbull

AND THE

Cincinnati Platform

What is this Liberal movement? I have its Platform with me. In some respect it does not differ from the Philadelphia platform, which for short I will call 'the regular' The liberal platform is for equality of civil rights, emancipation, freedom, maintaining the plighted faith of the government, paying its honest debts; and in these respects the two platforms do not essentially differ. But there are material difference between them when you come to compare them carefully and the great differnce perhaps is this.—The liberal platform is an appeal to the people, and the whole people of the country. The regular platform is narrow and contracted, an appeal from beginning to end. (applause.)

Let me point out this direction in one or two, or perhaps half a dozen, of these resolutions. The liberals, in their first resolution, say that it is the duty of government, in its dealings with the people to meet out equal and exact justice to all, of whatever nativity, color, or persuasion, religious or political." That is as broad as the country, and embraces all its people. It is the duty of the government, not of a party, to do this. Let us compare this resolution with the first resolution of the regulars. It is this: First during 11 years of supremacy, it (the republican party) has accepted with grand courage the solemn duties of the times, therefore you must vote for Gen. Grant. I suppose this might properly be styled the self-glorification resolution. (laughter.)

The Liberals declare in their platform that they demand immediate and absolute removal of all disabilities imposed on account of the rebellion." The Illiberals or regulars declared on this subject: We heartily approve the action of congress in extending amnesty to those lately in rebellion." Congress has only partially done it. Those iliberal are eternally prating about something that is past and gone. We want to know what your present policy is, and what your future policy is to be? What matters it to you fellow-citizens or is any reason why you should vote for either Grant or Greeley whether Ceasar or Pompey were victorious in a certain battle. In regard to amnesty the regulars heartily approve the passage of a bill by congress. Well it is only a partial amnesty. It does not fully relieve political disabilities, for various classes are excepted.

Another resolution of the liberals declares 'We demand for the individual the largest liberty consistent with public order; for the state self-government, and for a nation, a return to the methods of peace, and to constitutional limits of power." Every body can understand that. It demands for the individual the largest liberty consistant with public order! Governments are only established for the purpose of protecting the weak against the strong, and preserving public order and when government goes beyond this, and undertakes to interfere with the natural rights of the citizens, and to control his profession, creed or persuit, it departs from the object for which governments was created. (Applause)

We are a liberal party, and we are opposed to restrictive, unjust, and discriminate laws, which are not required for preserving the public and protecting each one in his own individual rights. What does the regular platform say upon this subject? It says! "It disapproves of a resort to unconstitutional laws for the purpose of removing evils by interference with rights not surrendered by the people to either the state or national government. There is a certain kind of unconstitutional laws that these regulars are opposed to. What kind of unconstitutional laws? Why such as interfere with the rights not surrendered to the state or nation? But the regulars have no sort of opposition to unconstitutional laws interfering with the rights granted to the state or to the nation—the exception of one thing you all know is always the conclusion of another. If you say that child is not of age to transact bus for himself until he arrives at 21, it is as much as saying that after he is 21 he may transact business for himself. If you say that you are opposed unconstitutional interferance with rights not surrendered by the state or the nation, and stop there, why you mean thereby that you are willing for unconstitutional interference with the rights of the states and the rights surrendered to the nation.

Again the liberal platform says the civil service of the government has become the instrument of partisan tyranny and personal ambition, and an object of selfishness and greed. We therefore regard such thorough reform of the civil service as one of the most pressing necesities of the hour; that honesty, capacity, and fidelity constitute the only valid claim to public employment. This is clear and spacific. What says the regulars on this subject. They say "any system of civil service under which the subordinate positions of the government are considered reward for mere party zeal is fatally demoralizing." Now notice that 'any system under which the subordinate positions in the government are considered as mere rewards for partisan zeal is demoralizing." This is to say that any system under which position not subordinate are made the mere rewards of partisan zeal, does not demoralize. It is very demoralizing to appoint a village postmaster as a reward for partisan zeal, but it is perfectly moral and right to appoint a postmaster general who is not a subordinate officer, as a reward for his partisan zeal.

Another resolution adopted by the Liberals was this:

"A speedy return to specie payments is demanded alike by the highest considerations of commercial morality and honest government." Now see what the regulars say on that subject: "We confidently expect that our excellent national currency will be perfected by the speedy resumption of specie payments." They confidently expect that, and yet the truth is, that we are further from specie payments to-day, this 27th day of June, 1872, than we were two years ago, at this time. Gold to-day commands a higher premium than it did then, and yet the regulars confidently expect a speedy return to specie payments, under their excellent management. This reminds me of the boy who, when reproved for being late at school, excused himself upon the ground that every time he took one step forward, he slipped back two, the snow was so smooth, and when asked by the teacher how he got to school at all, replied: "Don't you suppose I could turn round and go t'other way?" (Laughter.) Now, if these gentlemen are confidently expecting a return to specie payments, they must turn round and go t'other way, that they can accomplish it.

Another resolution adopted by the Liberals was this: "That it is the duty of government in its intercourse with foreign nations to secure the friendship and peace of all by treating with all on fair and equal terms, regarding it alike dishonorable either to demand what is not right or to submit to what is wrong." That is what the liberals say—demand nothing that is not right, and submit to nothing that is wrong from a foreign nation.—What say the Illiberals? Their print like these principle, is in such fine type that I can hardly read it. They are almost boasting of the Republican party; now what is it they say it has done? Menacing foreign difficulties have been peacefully and honerably compromised, and the honor and power of the nation kept in high respect throughout the world. How? By trying to buy San Domingo, a worthless island down here? Is that it?—By undertaking to settle with Great Britain, and making a treaty with her and then presenting claims for consequential damages to the arbitrators; and when Great Britain objected to them, the administration went to the Senate and asked it to agree to some proposition, to allow them to back out of the consequential claims. (Laughter.) These consequential claims were either right or wrong. If they were right, they should have been presented and insisted upon; if wrong, the honor of this nation would be promoted throughout the world by presenting false claims. How unlike is such conduct to that of Old Hickory when he was President, forty years ago, and when France refused to pay some just claims. He announced that his administration would demand of France nothing but what was right and would submit to nothing wrong. And the French claims were settled years ago.

in this platform adopted at Philadelphia to which it would be interesting to call your attention. but it is very inconvenient to read from this fine print, and I hope that if we have to discuss this platform much, that the liberals will loan these Illiberals some good sized type at least, to publish their narrow and contracted views upon these points.

Now, the issue is between these two sets of principles, so far as they differ; one, broad, liberal comprehensive; the other narrow, selfish, contracted, and partizan; and if you desire to continue the policy of the present administration, if you desire to have your foreign relations in such a muddle as we now have them in; if you desire to prevent honest investigation, if you desire to endorse corruption and plunder, if you desire to leave the Presidency of the United States to take care of itself while its great head is somewhere else; and if you desire your civil service reform to go for naught, if you desire it to be a mere pretence, an examining board created as if the whole object were to examine a set of schoolmasters, instead of having a substantial and thorough reform then vote for Gen. Grant, and continue in power the Senatorial ring that runs your government.

But if you desire honesty reform in the civil service, if you desire to correct abuses, if you desire to reduce the expenditures of your government, if you desire to stop plunder; if you desire, in a word, purity in your government and honesty in all its transactions you will then vote for Horace Greeley, an honest, pure, incorruptible man.—(Applause.)

There is the issue. I say little about candidates. I am not going attack Grant personally. I speak of the acts of his administration, and I have endeavored to-night fairly and candidly to lay before you some of the transactions of the government for the last few years, and to show you the efforts that have been made to correct abuses, and how ineffectual they have been. I have told you but a few. I wish I had time to tell you of the interference of this administration with the politics of the various states; its interference in Missouri to remove men from office, because they were for the liberal policy and restoring peace and good will and social and friendly intercourse between the people of that State, the results of which you now witness in its advancing prosperity. I would like to refer you to the condition of things in New Orleans where the administration through its custom-house, presided over by Mr. Casey, has been guilty of interfering with the local politics of that State. I would like to refer you to the encroachments upon the constitution of your country, of the attempts to destroy the privilege of the great writ of habeas corpus, the only protection that the citizen has, that great privilege coming from the crown centures ago, for the protection of the individual, and which furnishes to every man, woman and child in this broad land the means by which, when seized by arbitray power and confined in prison, they may appeal to the judicial tribunals of the country and know the cause of imprisonment, and be discharged; if it is unjust. It is the only protection the citizen has. Destroy the privileges of that writ, and arbitrary power and military force may seize any one of you, and put you into prison, and hold you there, and even, by your child or your wife, you shall never know the cause of your arrest or imprisonment.

And so highly did our fathers value the privilege of this great writ, that they put it into the constitution which they formed for the government of themselves and their posterity, that never should the privileges of that writ be denied to any citizen in all the land, except it be in time of rebellion or of invasion—and not then unless the public safety required. Do you see any such indications in this country within the last year? Has there been any rebellion in this country within the last year? And the soldiers here to-night, who marched in triumph from the Ohio to the Gulf and subdued the late rebels in arms, since they put them down. There have been disturbances and violations of law. There is more or less of that all over the country, but is that rebellion? You call it rebellion for the purpose of usurping the power to arrest the citizen without cause, and hold him indefinitely at the will of arbitrary power; and yet at the very session of Congress that has just closed under the auspices of this Senatorial ring, a bill passed to authorize the President at his will to suspend the writ of habeas corpus, when he thought there were violations of law in the country, either of the laws of the State or of the United States, and they were not put down by the State authority—giving him in his discretion, virtually the right to suspend the privileges of this writ.

There were other bills passed which if my strength permitted, I should like to refer to to-night, particularly to one by which the elections of this country were to be controlled by, and to be virtually under the direction of, the President of the United States. When the people of this country shall become so far indifferent to their rights as to confer upon the President of the United States the power to control and supervise your elections, and then to suspend the privilege of the habes corpus, your liberties are gone, and you have only to wait until a man sufficiently ambitious reaches the presidency for him to grasp and maintain absolute power.

I would like to refer you to violations of law on the part of this admin-

I have referred to the Secor case, as plain a violation of the law as could be conceived of, but there is another. In 1870, Congress passed a law prohibiting any officer on the active list in the army of the United States from performing the functions of a civil officer, and there is the statute, and yet in defiance of that plain statute the White House at Washington is filled with Porters and Dents and others, officers upon the active list of the army of the United States, performing the duties of civilians. What is the excuse for that? Why my good friend, Mr. Carpenter, of Wisconsin, said in a speech in the Senate that Andrew Johnson had the White House full of officers and soldiers, and that was his excuse. I do not know that it would help it any; if Andrew Johnson did violate the law, that is no reason why Grant should. But the difficulty about Mr. Carpenter is that there was no law against it when Johnson was President (Laughter.) We did not pass it until 1820. But my strength and voice will not allow me to continue these remarks, and I bring them to a close.

I have only to say to you, in conclusion, that Mr. Greeley is a man of the highest character and intelligence. No man in this land is better acquainted with the public men of the country than he, a man of purity of character, of strict honesty, and who would not look upon corruption and dishonesty with the least degree of allowance.—You may rely upon that, and upon his bringing about him the ablest men of the land to form a strong and able administration, because he knows who the able men of the land are, and no one better. As I said before I am not in the habit of talking about individuals, but I think I may say to you that he will not usurp unconstitutional authority, and that is what the people of this country want. You may trust him above almost all other men in this land, for bringing about that State of good feeling between the North and the South, so essential to the peace and prosperity of the country. You may trust him as a man who will administer the government of the country for the country, and not in the interest of a party merely, and that is a great deal. If elected, he is to be elected by the honest, intelligent upright citizens of the country, who have the boldness to break loose from party shackles, and vote for him in order to bring about purity and reform in the administration of the Government. (Applause.)

I believe the people to be honest, and to desire an honest administration purity, and a higher standard of morality throughout the country in official positions. I think I see the signs of it all the way from Washington to Illinois; I have seen here to-day the signs of the coming revolution which shall sweep plunderers from power, and substitute honest men in their places. (Great Applause.)

The Earth Opens and Swallows up a Team of Horses.

The community in the neighborhood of Joseph Boor's in Snake Spring Valley, Bedford County Pa., was thrown into a fever of excitement on Friday by a report that the earth had suddenly opened and swallowed two horses belonging to Mr. Boor. Several of the neighbors repaired to the spot, only to find the story to true. It seems that two sons of Mr. Boor were engaged in hauling rails from a piece of woodland, and as they were driving along at a certain spot, without any warning, the ground suddenly gave away under one of the horses and he disappeared dragging the other animal after him.

The boys were terribly frightened and gave the alarm. Ropes were provided and several gentlemen decended into the cavern. One of the horses was found lodged about twenty feet from the surface where the cavity changed direction, and the other about thirty feet under ground. The extent of the opening has not been ascertained, but from the indications it seems almost bottomless.

An editor says he once partook of a beverage so very strong that he could not tell whether it was brandy or a torchlight procession that was going down his throat.

An afflicted husband was returning from the funeral of his wife, when a friend asked how he was.

Well, said he, pathetically, I think I feel the better for that little walk.

What do you ask for that article? inquired an old gentleman of a pretty shop girl.

Two dollars.

Ain't you a little dear?

Why, she replied, blushing, all the young men tell me so.

John Bunyan was once asked a question about heaven which he could not answer, because the matter was not revealed in the Scriptures, and he therefor advised the inquirer to live a holy life and go and see.

Emma, my love! said a much enamored, newly-weded husband, you have such pretty feet, that I wonder you do not wear shorter dresses.

I declare, George, she replied, you're a greater noodle than I ever thought you were.

Don't you see, if I wear long dresses, I can have an excuse to lift my skirts much higher than I dare have them if made short. Exit wife for a walk. Husband sits down to reflect upon the subtleties of feminine strategy.

NORTH CAROLINA ELECTION.

The latest dispatches we have of the election in North Carolina, are Aug. 6, which indicate that Merriman is elected by a small majority. A majority of the Congressmen are Democratic, and they have a majority of 18 in the legislature, which makes it a signal Democratic victory, and repudiates Grant.

County Convention.

The Democracy met in Convention, last Thursday, and organized by appointing Hon. L. D. Britton, of Richland township, Chairman, J. A. Barns Esq., of Union tp., Vice President and C. A. O. McClellen and T. C. Mays, Secretaries.

Mr. Conrad, of Richland, moved that a committee of three be appointed on Resolutions. Amended by the appointment of one from each township.

On motion it was decided to refer all resolutions to the Committee on resolutions. The names of candidates for various offices were then announced.

On motion the Convention proceeded to vote for candidates.

B. F. Blair, Esq., of Newville tp., called for the reading of resolutions, which the chair decided out of order, and that township refused to vote for candidates.

L. D. Britton, of Richland, and S. S. Shutt, of Concord, were put in nomination for Representative. Before the vote was annouced, Mr. Britton withdrew and Mr. Shutt was unanimously nominated.

The names of G. W. Maxwell, of Wilmington, John C. Sommers, of Jackson and John Treesh, of Fairfield, were put in nomination for Sheriff.

Congressional Convention.

The Democratic and Liberal Republican Convention was held at Columbia City, last Tuesday, for the Tenth district and resulted in the nomination of E. Van Long, of Warsaw, for Congress, Milo S. Hascall, of Goshen, for Presidential Elector, L. H. Goodwin, of Kendallville, for Common Pleas Judge and D. Y. Husselman, of Waterloo, for Prosecutor. Full proceedings next week.

General Banks for Greeley.

In yesterday's issue we briefly called attention to the fact that General Banks had given in his adhesion to the Liberal cause and cut loose from Grantism. His letter which was witton to Jas. S. Lewis, of Lynn, giving reasons why he could not advocate the re-election of President Grant, deserves mere than a passing notice. It will exert great influence in the coming Presidential campaign, and will have the effect of inducing many honest Republicans who are now hesitating between supposed duty to party and their honest conviction to espouse the liberal cause, and enter with zeal into the work of reform and reconciliation.

General Banks, in his letter, takes high grounds. He casts his lot with the Liberal movement from reasons of no ordinary moment. No charges of sore-headism or of ungratified ambition—empty and unmeaning as they are—can be made against him. As his letter indicates he is compelled to take action against his personal wishes because he believes that 'the perpetuation of the present policy of the government is not for the advantage of the country and that it will not tend to establish its former good and prosperity, nor to promote the interest of any class of citizens. The voice of General Bank is not of war. He recognizes that the policy pursued by Grant has been one of vindictivness— of hate and proscription—and he knows full well that where those have not been its ruling features corruption and incompetency stood out in bold relief.

That portion of Senator Schurz's speech, recently delivered at St Louis, respecting the offer of patronage in consideration of the Senator's support of the Santo Domingo scheme, is amply substantiated by a letter from Gen Pleasanton, who acted as mediator on the occasion referred to. General Pleasanton says: "Your statement is correct, that the President wanted your support for his Santo Domingo scheme, and that you could have had the patronage of the Goverment for giving it. That was the distinct impression made upon my mind, and I communicated it to you at the time. If the President positively denies having had such conversation, I regret it. I may console myself with reflection that this is the first time that any statement of mine has been questioned, while the President has had occasion before this to distrust the accuracy of his recollections, Days are shortening some.

Speech of Hon. D. W. Voorhees.

In accepting the Democratic nomination for congress, at the Convention at Spencer, Mr. Voorhees made a long and elaborated prepared speech, in which he said the convention, in nominating him had done him the greatest honor he had ever received. They had refused to listen to what had been said against him, and had demanded that he remain in their service.—They had bestowed on him already ten years of official life, and if, after so much experience of each other, they had found him worthy of such confidence as is here manifested, he might indeed feel that he had not lived altogether in vain. He called on them to witness that he had not sought this nomination, but urged that it might be given to some one else. Mr. Voorhees spoke of his declaring two years ago that he was making his last race for Congress, and of his repeating his desire to retire to private life one year ago, so that with reluctance he manifestly regarded the present contest could not be of recent date. Continuing he said a close observation of the lawless and outrageous conduct of the present Administration, and the great and increasing disgust in the public minds long ago convinced me that any easy opportunity would be presented this year for the Democratic party by presenting one of its ablest and purest men for the Presidency, to regain the control of the Government, and to re-establish civil liberty and equality. In the brudens as well as in the blessings of the republic, I gave honest Republicans the same credit which they now give us, in believing that they would sufficiently arise above the party, to vote against a corrupt administration without regard to the company in which they preformed so gallant an act. I still believe they would have done so, and that any one of four or five statesmen who might be named eminent for ability and purity of character could have been elected to the Presidency, over the present very unpopular incumbent. Entertaining this opinion with the force of an absolute conviction, I made an earnest effort to have it prevail in the minds of others in view of an approaching National Convention. I exercised my right as a member of this Democratic party which right I am beholden to no one. I hold that all men have a duty to preform in assisting to create a perfect public opinion by expressing their own on all proper occasions. In opposing the nomination of Mr. Greeley I acted on this principle, and no one will expect me now or hereafter to retract a word that I have spoken or written on that subject. The influence of my words if they had any, was direct to the Baltimore Convention and not beyond that body. They must stand as my sincere utterance in behalf of an object over which that body had legitimate authority and ultimate authority. But I will doubtless be reminded that my views were not adopted at that time, and my opinions disregarded.—All is true. I do not pretend to disguise my deep regret.

I would gladly have it other wise, and have given this subject as careful and concientious an examination in order to ascertain the truth of duty as it has been in my power to make. We must look the present and future cooly and resolutely in the face, and in the light of the recent result at Baltimore.—Whenever and wherever men have associated themselves together for common objects, the power of a final decision over matters in controvercies amongst themselves have been specially lodged somewhere. Without this authority no bond would be strong enough to produce united action. Let me say to those who have so warmly coincided in opinion with me on the prospreity of Mr. Greeley's nomination and their name is legion, that the Democratic party is infinitely purer and ahead in my judgement with Horace Greeley as its candidate, of that portion of the Republican party, which acknowledges the leadership of Grant and the profligate managers which he is leading to his own and his country's ruin.

Bowen Hardly for Grant.

The Auburn (N. Y.) Democrat publishes the following letter. The writer is no less a personage than ex-Mayor and late Postmaster of the Capital of the United States, Sayles J. Bowen. It will explain itself as well as one of the dishonest acts of him whom the Republican party have elected to the Presidency, and whom a portion of the same men are trying to elect again.

Washington, July 18, 1872.

G. L. Watkins—My Dear Sir: I was much pleased to receive from your kind and encouraging letter of the 15t inst. You were right in stating that I know something of General Grant's business qualifications as well as his character for honor, honesty, and truth. I had a business transaction with him, in which he cheated me out of $25,000 with a coolness and delierbation that would do credit to any black leg. In the mail that carries this letter I send a copy of the Transcript a paper published in this city containing an article relating to the transaction alluded to, every word of which is true, as I stand ready to prove by Gran's letter and the original contract in my possesion. Indeed the Transcript has dared the Grant papers here and elswhere to deny a single allegation in the article, which they have not had the temerity to do, as every body in Washington knows it is true in every letter. I intend to prosecute Grant before our Courts, and have made arrangements to commence suit against him at the next term, when the whole matter will be shown up to the world in evedence that cannot be disputed. This affair is only an index to Grant's private character. He is a miserly sordid man and will resort to any thing; evasion or invasion of law and justice, or any thing else that an honerable person would despise, to put money in his pocket. By his speculations in Seneca stone rings and other scandalous jobs, through the military coterie about the White House his presents, and farming out of official position he will leave the Presidency on the 4th of March next as rich as a Jew and as infamous as he who betrayed his Lord and Master for thirty pieces of silver. His habits are of the worst possible kind, and his associates of the lowest order. Indeed his instincts are low and vulgar, and he is never so well satisfied as when in company with horse jockeys, smoking cigars drinking whisky, and "talking horse." Demoralization and corruption are the order of the day in all sections of the country, and these have their origin in the White House and at Long Branch. Examples set there are followed by their parasites until their influence has ramified every town and county in the nation. Greeley will end this in a trice.

Your friend and etc.

Another General for Greeley.

Boston, July 31. 1872.

My Dear Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge by this note, in addition to our conversation to-day the receipt of invitation to address the citizens of Lynn on Thursday evening, in support of the re-election of General Grant and the policy of his administration. No invitation could have greater weight with me from any part of the country nor from any portion of my fellow citizens, and it gives me great pleasure to assure you that nothing could be added to your suggestions as representative of the citizens of Lynn to acceed to the request. Their kindness to me many years since is a continuing life remembrance, and nothing could give me greater satisfaction than to renew my assosiations with them, but I regret to say that I am not in accord with them in regard to the Presidential canvass.

Against my wishes and my personal interests, I am compelled to say that the perpetuation of the present policy of the Government is not for the advantage of the country and that it will not tend to establish its former good and prosperity nor to promote the interests of any class of citizens. No personal feeling of any form or character enters into this judgment. It is in view of general principles and public interest alone that I am led to this conclusion. The uniting of the masses of people of all parties, sections and races in support of the grand result of the war is indispensible to the permanent establishment and general recognition of those results. It can be secured by no other means and we shall all be forced to this conclusion sooner or later. This united action upon this basis has been the hope of my life. I frequently desired it during the war and in the reconstruction of States before the war. I believe it is now tendered in good faith in the nomination of Mr. Greeley and for one I can not reject him. It was what I desired and its consummation, although sudden and startling it does not alarm me. My duty to myself and my country requires me to give him my support and I cannot advocate before your friends a different cause which neither my judgement nor my heart can permit.

It grieves me most deeply to separate myself in thought or act from any of those with whom I have been so long associated and to whom I am so greatly indebted but I believe that the result, will justify my action and give to the country that peace and prosperity which is the object of all our labor and secure to every citizen the civil and political equality and freedom which was won by the sacrifice of so many valued lives.

Accept the assurances of my lasting friendship and esteem and believe me,
Yours, etc.,
(Signed) N. P. Banks
To James S. Lewis, Esq.,

The Huntington Democrat says, "Henry Wilson, the Grant candidate for Vice-President, was a fierce and revengeful Know-Nothing and elected to the United States Senate in 1855, by a Legislature composed of 412 Know-Notnings and 4 others. Moreover, as late as 1861, he indulged in a gratuitous fling at the race which Grant tried to proscribe. In the Globe of Feb. 21, 1861, is a speech by Wilson, in which he denounces J. P. Benjamin for his treason to "a country which gives equality of rights even to that race that stoned the prophets and crucified the Redeemer of the world." This utterly uncalled-for attack is now circulating in the Jewish press. It will not increase the popularity of the Philadelphia ticket.

The war between the houses of Forney and Cameron, in Pennsylvania, is assuming a bitter and violent personal form. The son of Col Forney writes a letter in which he charges Simon Cameron, the bosom friend of General Grant, with "immense frauds and with systematically debauching public morals." He says that the associates of Cameron are of "the lowest and worst political characters—of the old Fagan school of Bill Sykeses and Artful Dodgers." These are facts well-known throughout the country, and yet Cameron is a confidential adviser of our President.

A monster meeting, ratifying the nomination of Greeley and Brown, was held in Chicago last week. The Tribune estimates the crowd at twelve thousand, while the Times puts it at seven thousand, and adds that it was the largest and most enthusiastic political meeting ever held in that city. Speeches were made by Senator Trumbull, Governor Koerner, Hon. Austin Blair, Hon. W. F. Colbaugh, and others.

In his letter, published last week in this paper, Judge Biddle says Grant is a Republican by accident. That is very true. Without the war Grant never would have been President, or General, but would have been left to guzzle and doze with his "damned old bar room cronies," as Ben Wade called his associates, at St. Louis. Indeed Judge Biddle happily expresses it, when he says Grant is an accident so far as his Republicanism is concerned, and he might have added, so far as all other things are concerned.—Pharos

Meeting at Mishawaka.

Last Saturday evening the Democrats Liberals held a meeting in Mishawaka, which was well attended. It was one of the most interesting political meetings held this campaign in this part of the country.

J. B. Stoll, candidate for State Auditor, and Dr. Henricks, liberal candidate for Congress for the 9th district addressed the audience, and all passed og pleasantly and enthusiastically. The large German vote of Mishawaka, which has always been nearly equally divided, is now almost unanimously for Greeley and Brown.—Ligonier Banner.

The anti-Packard Republicans of the Ninth District met in convention at Laporte, on the 17th inst., and nominated Dr. J. A. Henricks for Gongress. He will be supported by the Democsats, and will in all probability be elected. The Porter county Vidette a Grant paper, supports Mr. Henricks in preference to Packard.

One of the miserable Lowry gang, of Robeson county, North Carolina, got his dues the other day, and the "devil got his own," by a brother of one of the victims of this hellish gang killing him. It is a pity that every one of the whole villainous pack had not been sent to their long home before this.

One by one the prominent men who think that Greeley's election will kill the financial prosperity of the country are being heard of. The last one was Mr Collins, pension agent at Washington. His defalcation is nearly 100,000.

The Monroe Michigan Monitor, speaking of the political revolution now going on in the country, says that there will be at least three hundred Republicans in Monroe county, who voted for Grant four years ago who are now for Greeley.

Dr. H. C. Fessenden, brother of the late Senator Fessenden, and a prominent Republican, pronounces for Greeley and Brown, and was one of the officers at a ratification meeting at Eastport, Maine, on Saturday.

The only Grant paper in Fort Scott Kansas, has come out for Greeley and Brown, and out of two hundred German voters not more than three will vote for Grant

A. T. Stewart, who gave twenty thousand dollars to aid in Gen Grant's election three years ago now gives thirty thousand dollars as a campaign fund to aid in Mr. Greeley's election.

The borough election in Stonington, Connecticut, resulted in a significant Liberal victory, the vote standing 139 for the Greeley ticket and 49 for the Administration.

The Decor (Iowa) Press, heretofore a strong Grant paper, lowers his name and goes for Greeley.

Allentown, Pennsylvania, has a Greeley Club which numbers 368 Liberals and every Democrat in the place.

In every Northern State where the Radicals can point to one Democrat that will not support Greeley, one can off him with five Liberals.

It is the Bennington, Vermont, Free Press and not the Burlington Free Press that has repudiated Grant and declared its allegiance to Greeley.

The staats Zeitung, of New York City, the most influential German paper in the east has come out squarely for Greeley and Brown.

Among prominent army officers who support Greeley are Generals Shields, McClernand, Hooker, Custar, Torbett, McMillan, Davis, Kilpatrick, McClellan and many others.

A Liberal canvass of Monroe county, Florida, shows 1,050 votes for Greeley against 150 for Grant. It is a curious fact that the Cuban refugees at Key West are all zealous Greeley men.

There is one family in Detroit which polled seven votes for Grant in 1868. The seven will all be cast for Greeley this fall, as will the Republican votes of several relatives by marriage.

The defeat of John A. Bingham for renomination for Congress was a cruel blow especially after he had, in his Elyria speech, defended the nepotism of the President, and nailed it with Scripture.

Mike Long, Jr., came so near being son stroke,—it was a girl—last week, that there's no fun in it. Hurrah for Greeley.

Alex. Hall lost a valuable horse a few days ago, by bleeding to death. No one could conjecture what caused the hemorrhage.

John Tigar, Esq, the veteran editor of For Wayne, gave us a call last Saturday, in company with the agreeable Fowles of the firm of W. B. Young & Co.

Our popular drayman, Isaac Roth, seems to take the lead in this business. Mr. R. is an honest, clever, fellow and worthy of the public patronage. Give him a call.

If you want a piano, organ, accordeon, violin or any musical instruments, go to Abright & Shepherd's. They have instruction books for each of these instruments

Don't forget that ice-cream is nightly served up by Smith & Hare, in quantities to suit the purchaser. Go to their fine saloon over their store with your ladies and enjoy a dish.

Saturday Night, a new paper started at Cincinnati, by the Fat Contributor, is on our table. Everybody knows Griswold by the above cognomen and that alone will insure success. Take a copy, laugh and grow fat.

The Angola Band accompanied the delegation from Steuben and this county to the Congressional Convention, and discoursed most excellent music. It is a first-class institution, and won many golden opinions from those who heard it.

Billy Williams, who voted for $5000 a year to Congressmen, and all the land grants ever passed was selected over a man who was at that time fighting in the army. And the Radicals talk about their love for the soldier!

The Standard is the name of a new Democratic paper at Hobart Lake county, this State, E. Zimmerman proprietor. That's right, send out the facts and there is no fear but that the people will correct the abuses of the present administration.

When the Scotch minister told his neighbor that he spoke two hours and a half the day previous, the neighbor said:

Why, minister, were you not tired to death?

Ah, no, I was fresh as a rose; but it would have done your heart good to see how tired the congregation was.

A Western editor report money 'close, but not close enough to be reached.

Prof. Rivers did not make the ascension the other day, from the fact that he had but little practice on the trapese. Mr. Palmer was selected only because of this feature in his ascensions.

Major Sailor, the Republican candidate for Congress, gave us a call last week. The Major is working hard, but he'll find it still harder when he meets Van Long the peop'e's candidate.

The Livery and Sale Stable of F. D. Ryan, Esq., is doing a rushing business. Mr. R. being an agreeable, socialable, fellow, together with his good and substantial rigs, promises him in the future the largest trade, in this line, in Northern Indiana.

Root & Company, the extensive dry goods merchants of Fort Wayne are offering great inducements, as will be seen by advertisement in another column.—They are reliable merchants and can be depended upon.

The annual meeting of the Disciples of DeKalb county, will be held in Platter's grove, at Newville. the 4th Thursday of August. Elder Carpenter, of Wabash, will be present.

T. P. Sutton, Pastor.

The fall meeting of the Columbia City Driving Park Association, will be held August 28, 29 and 30. There will be $2,500 in premiums, and a grand time is expected for all lovers of such sport. One hundred fast horses are expected to be present. Everybody is invited to attend.

"Well, that beats me," said an old toper, whose face was fairly astream with perspiration. I don't remember to have drank any water in six weeks, and just see how it streams out of every pore in my body. "Now, what I would like to know, is, where all that water comes from?"

Morton spoke at Kendallville last Wednesday night, in order to get the crowd away from Hendricks who spoke in the afternoon. A meeting was gotten up, however, to offset Morton, and though Morton had the most women and children to hear him, Hendricks was far ahead on voters, as he will be in the election.

The Courier man seems worried because Grady did not take up a two shilling collection here, to see the balloon "go up," and then have it fall over on a stake and collapse.—Press.

There may have been no collection but there was plenty of "collapse."

The St. John Reform Church, of this place, has "wheeled into line" and now fronts south, resting on a stone, and not sandy, foundation. The floods may come but it will stand, as has been promised. It is being renovated and overhauled on the inside, and will recieve a white coat on the outside in a few days.

Big Johnny Baker, of the Columbia City Commercial, is offended because we said Billy Williams was nominated for Congress over a soldier. Can't help it Johnny Billy has been to Congress two terms, and yet Johnny don't see anything wrong about putting him ahead of a soldier. Oh, where is your love for the soldier that you so much talk about.

Morton recited his old war speech at Angola and Kendallville, last week. We heard him a few minutes at the latter place, and he was then laboring to show that Jeff Davis was responsible for the war. He did not state who was responsible for the present corruption and profligacy in governmental affairs. Oh, no, that would never do.

Reub. Williams, of the Warsaw Indianian, the indomitable General, has been sequelched for once, by a Liberal Republican of that place, by the name of Hays. Reuben has been going for this Hays because of his liberal proclivities, and finally Hays responded in a communication that so thoroughly used Reub. up, that he has been compelled to seek redress through the baby act. Aint that a little thin, General?

NOTICE.

The members of the Democratic County Committee, of DeKalb County, will meet at the Recorders office in said county on,

THURSDAY AUG. 15, 1872.

at two o'clock p. m. Also all the candidates on the Democratic County ticket together with all persons who are interested in the present political campaign are invited to attend.

Danl. Z. Hoffman, Chairman.

"Willard," a traveling correspondent of the Indianapolis Sentinel, met Major Saylor, at Goshen last week. He was "pleased to find him an accomplished and genial fellow, but possessed of that nervous anxiety and restlessness which shows that fate has marked him for a crushing defeat." "Willard" reads the signs aright for if there is anything the people of this district have determined upon doing, it is to send a representative to Congress of whom they will have no occasion to be ashamed.

The above is from the Huntington Democrat, published at the home of Mr. Saylor.

The unterrified Democracy of DeKalb county hold their County Convention on Thursday, the 1st of August. In order to get together a crowd of people to add to the outward show, they advertise a grand balloon ascension at Auburn on that day. The idea is laughable; but the DeKalb county Democracy are bound to "keep up appearances."—Bastard sheet at Angola.

Another Radical lie nailed. The day of the Convention was selected weeks before there was anything known of a balloon ascension. The citizens of Auburn, and not the Democracy, selected the same day for the ascension. The above fraud on a newspaper don't know any better, and we forgive him

The health-restoring properties of Smolander's Buchu strengthen and invigorate the entire system, and remove or counteract kidney, bladder and glandular diseases, mental and physical debility, diabetes, gravel, general prostration of the nerve structure, and all maladies of the urinogenital organs in either sex. GRAND RALLY!

OF THE Anti GRANT MEN.

A Splendid Ovation to the next Governor.

The ratification meeting at this place, last Thursday, was a complete success.—Between three and four thousand persons listened attentively to a splendid effort by Mr. Hendricks in the cause of liberty and reform. For nearly two hours he held the vast audience as if spell bound by his matchless eloquence and by the fair, candid and honest statement of facts, showing up the corruptions of the present administration. We never saw a crowd more attentive under the circumstances. There were many things to attract their attention, yet they remained quietly and heard him through. It was in striking contrast to the handful of men that greeted Tom Browne at Waterloo. The people know Mr. Hendricks—he has a national reputation and in his honesty of purpose and purity of character, they have the utmost confidence. He compared the Cincinnati with the Philadelphia platform, taking each plank in detail, and met the issues of the day in a fair and manly argument. Unlike Morton he does not go back to the issues of ten years ago, but spoke of the present and hopeful future.

At the conclusion three cheers were given Thomas A. Hendricks, the next Governor of Indiana.

OUR COUNTY CONVENTION!

The Utmost Harmony Prevails!

AN EXCELLENT TICKET NOMINATED!

NO BARTER & SALE.

Our County Convention did its work most completely last Thursday, presenting for the suffrages of the people a ticket in striking contrast to the one nominated by the Radicals a few weeks ago. The utmost harmony prevailed, a great disappointment to a number of spectators, who were in attendance to see a "red hot" time as the Press terms it. It was quite a disappointment to them and instead of the members of the Convention wearing long faces, it was our enemies, those in favor of Grant, those in favor of a President taking presents, and of appointing relations to office. We can congratulate ourselves on the excellent ticket nominated—one that will sweep the county with a largely increased majority. They stand upon the principles of honesty and reform, and will prove themselves worthy the confidence of the people.

Our candidate for Representative, Mr. Shutt of Spencerville, is a representative man, and we propose that he shall attend to that business for DeKalb County during the next two years. He is a farmer born and raised in the county, and identified with the interests of the masses. He knows what their interests are, and no man in the county is better qualified to represent them than he. His private, character is unimpeachable, and morally he has no superior. Not a single objection can be advanced against his election and we feel that he will be elected by a large majority.

Mr. Maxwell, our candidate for Sheriff, is well known throughout the county. He has practically filled the position for several years, and in point of qualification no questions will be asked. He has labored hard in the past and we trust tha all will assist in giving him a victory this time, that shall reward him for all former efforts.

Mr. Kelly, our next Treasurer, is also known by every voter in the county. He is a gentleman of experience and ability and uncompromisingly honest in all his dealings. He is also a farmer, and has the good sense to know what will serve that class of people the best. Those who want an honest man to handle their money will vote for Kelly.

Mr. Hoffman, our present Recorder, is to be re-elected. He is also well known, but if you have any doubt of his capability just step into the Recorder's office and find there a set of books that will challenge competition in the State. He is always at his post, and has ever found it pleasant to wait upon the people in an obliging and gentlemanly way. All know that he is a good officer, and for this reason he will be returned for two years longer.

The gentlemen nominated for Commissioners, Messrs. Griffith and Richmond, are recognized as eminently fit for the position. Mr. Richmond is perhaps the most enterprising farmer in DeKalb county. He has done more for the county, as a farmer, than any other single individual in it. As fast as he made a dollar, it was not laid up like the accumulations of many, but immediately put to use, in the development of lands, until now he stands pre-eminent as a farmer, and, through experience and hard work, possessing those requisites inseperable from a position of this kind.—His excellent judgement, broad views, and early identification with the interests of the county, appeal to the good sence of every voter, and if they consult their own interests the appeal will not be in vain.—Mr. Griffith is an old settler also, and well qualified for the position.

Our candidate for Surveyor, Mr. Clark, is a young man of fine education, and one that will prove zealous and accommodating in the discharge of his duties. With a little practical experience, he will be able to attend to the duties of that office as well as any other in the county.

Mr. Latson, for Coroner, is a good selection and he will be found on hand at all places requiring his official [illegible].

For Land Appraiser, Mr. Learn[illegible], one of the best men in the county has been selected, and no one acquainted [illegible] will say that he is not fitted for the position.

And we have thus named the men that comprise one of the best tickets ever presented to the county by any party. It was a sorry day for the Grantites [illegible] nominated for we feel it in our bones that it will be triumphant—victorious to a greater extent than ever was known before.—Let us have peace, not Grant's kind, but such as we have had under a Democratic administration.

THE BALLOON ASCENSION.

Those who were so sadly disappoint on the Fourth, through the accident in inflating the balloon were amply repaid for their trouble in attending to witness the ascension last Thursday. The affair was not very extensively advertised, for fear of another disappointment, but the presence of Mr. Kinney, the Manager, seemed to restore confidence, and none anticipated a failure under his superintendence.—The crowd was immense, nearly if not equally as large as that on the Fourth.—Though a brisk breeze was blowing, yet the inflation proceeded, a difficult job, and in due time the crowd were gratified with as fine an ascension is as usually seen.

Prof. Palmer made the ascension on the trapeze, and as the monster balloon lifted from the earth, and darted upward like a mighty bird, he could be seen going through his daring acts with an intrepidity almost appalling.

The balloon ascended to the heigth of a mile, the brisk wind bearing it eastward, and in a short time was out of sight. It finally touched ground over two miles from the starting point, balloon and aeronaut coming down without injury.

Everybody was satisfied. There were numerous evidences of this, and it was gratifying to our citizens to know that they had accomplished what had been promised, and all were happy. Some felt like charging the failure on the Fourth to our citizens, and this ascension was arranged at considerable expense to satisfy what seemed to be a public demand. Their efforts were crowned with success, and creditable alike to their enterprise and liberality.

Major Saylor addressed the Republicans of Smithfield township at Summit, on Monday evening. The house was filled to overflowing, many being unable to gain admittance. The people were much pleased with the appearance of their new Congressman, and unless we are greatly in error, a good account will be given, by the Republicans of that township in October, notwithstanding the disgraceful dickering of the would be democratic treasurer who lives in their midst.—Press.

Well, neighbor you greatly err. The house was not filled to overflowing with Republicans, as we have it from an honest man. Nearly half were Anti-Grant men, Liberal Republicans and Democrats. The house is 22x28 and any one can easily imagine the extent of the meeting as far as numbers were concerned. There was no enthusaism at the meeting except at the close, a few boys, on the outside gave three cheers for honest Old Horace and that ended it. The fact is the Major is developing considerable weakness under the pressing influence of the times, too much anti-Grant feeling for any man to stand, and we don't wonder at the Major fainting in the heat of the day. Senator Wilson said last week, in North Carolina, that if that State went Democratic it would place a burden upon the shoulders of the Grant party that would make them stagger. The Major is now staggering, in compliance with orders from headquarters.

But what does the Press mean by the very definite phrase, "disgraceful dickering" of Mr. Kelley. If it means that Mr. K. has been guilty of encouraging the liberal Republican sentiment in that township, he says he wants some more disgrace in his, and hopes to get quite a lot by the time of election.

Now, always give the Democrats and Liberal Republicans credit when they come out to hear your speaker, and don't call them all Republicans, which now means for Grant, a President that takes presents and rewards in official patronage, and appoints his own relations to office.

Louisville Industrial Exposition.

We have received an invitation to attend the Grand National Industrial Exposition, which opens in Louisville, Ky., Sept. 3d, and continues until October 8th, 1872. This Exposition will attract to Louisville thousands of people from every section of the West and South-west, and an opportunity will be enjoyed of examining the evidences of the great progress made in this country in the arts, inventions and manufactures. Nearly every State in the Union will exhibit its work, and consumer and manufacturer will be enabled to judge of the wants and resources of the country. Reduced fares on railroads and steamboats have been arranged, and ample hotel accommodations secured for all who attend. The Louisville Exposition Building covers nearly an entire square in the heart of the city, is built of brick, and will seat on the first floor nearly 20,000 people The natural beauty of Louisville at this season of the year, her perfected arrangements for entertaining her visitors economically and agreeably, and the opportunity of seeing the business men of the country—the men who are the basis of its unexampled progress—will attract all classes to the Exposition during the season.

If you want the worth of your money, be treated by gentlemanly clerks, and not be asked for goods three times more than they are worth, go to the Red Front clothing hall, No. 5, Keystone block, Fort Wayne.

When you go to Fort Wayne to buy clothing ask for one of our price lists before you purchase your goods, and get posted on prisces and not be cheated by outsiders.

MARRIAGES.

The following are the expressed opinions of our leading statesmen and journalists, concerning Mr. Useless Grant:

"He is a man without sufficient knowledge to preside over caucus."

"He is not fit to govern this country," were Stanton's dying words.

"He has no more soul than a dog," said Ben Butler, less than a year ago.

"No man can hold offices under Grant and maintain his self-respect," said Forney, a year ago.

"Grant has no more capability than a horse," said Fighting Joe Hooker, a month since.

"He is not controlled by constitutional laws but by political rings," remarked Trumbull.

"His San Domingo business stamps him as a first-class conspirator," said Gov. Palmer.

"There are sixteen weighty reasons why Grant should not be President," wrote Colfax, in 1868.

"Grant was so blind drunk that he could'nt lie down decently at the battle of Pittsburg," said Gen. John A. Logan.

"He is making money out of his position, and that's all he cares about," said Senator Carpenter to a Herald correspondent.

Appearance Deceptive.

Speaking of temperance reformers, some one tells a good story at the expense of one of the most ardent of them—a person whose whole heart was working in the work to such an extent that he hadn't time to mend his fences or take care of his farm.

A distinguished temperance lecturer was to address the citizens in the town where the reformer lived, and the latter took it upon himself to meet at the station and take him home with him to entertain him. The lecturer was talkative, and full of 'the cause.'

There, now, said he, as they drove by a handsome farmhouse anybody can see at once that a temperance man lives there. Everything indicates it; there's thrift, and industry and contentment, and no doubt a happy home there. Is that not so.

Yes, was the reply; Squire — is a temperance man, and has a very pleasant home and family.

I was certain of it, said the lecturer.—But here is a place, he continued, as they came to an old house with a dilapidated fence and a neglected appearance, that you'd pick out anywhere as the house of a drunkard—see the old hats in the windows and the neglected appearance every thing has—you can't make any mistake about such a place—it sticks out all over that it's the home of a sot.

He was about to appeal to his entertainer for the truth of his surmises when that gentleman pulled rein, and turned the team up to the neglected fence remarked, with something of a sigh, I live in this place.

Grover & Baker's

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and sti, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

IT

Puffs, Ruffles, Plaits, Braids, Tucks, Fells, Hems, Frills, Quilts, Cords, Gathers,

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which everyone should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey and a little care taken in examination of routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R." running from Chicago, through Galesburg to Burlington, and the "I., B. & W. Route," running from Indianapolis, through Bloomington to Burlington, have achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading passenger routes to the west. At Burlington they connect with the B. & M. R. R. and from the great Burlington route, which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories and passenger starting from DeKalb county, on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the Burlington route.

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B & M. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

W. W. WORTHINGTON, Supt.

Mr. Greeley in the Street.

From a New York Letter.

The masses of the people in New York, young and old, men and women, boys and girls, everybody, recognizes him as he trundles along about his business, never loitering, but going ahead in true Yankee style, as if he knew what he was about, and was intent upon accomplishing it—these throngs on our thoroughfares turn as he passes, and stand gazing at the philosopher and coming President with silent satisfaction till he is hidden among the crowd or turns a corner. I have seen a good many public men walk along the streets of cities, but I never before saw such a curious sight as when Greeley goes about New York. As I said, the whole mass of pedestrains stop and turn, and contemplate the form and face of the Sage of Chappaqua as he passes along. So the spectacle is presented of a thronged sidewalk becoming a kind of whirlwind of humanity, a multiplied series of eddies, turning, turning, as far as the eye can see, and as far as Greeley goes. Thousands of men touch the hat and bow; thousands of women recognize him by a graceful courtesy.

The Texas Cattle Herder.

The herder is a character. He is begotten of necessity, as was the army bummer. He is sent to fulfill a mission, and that mission is 'herdin' steers,' no one who has ever seen him can not for a moment doubt.

His penigree is as much a matter of doubt as that of his steers. His relationship to the 'gentle cow-herd' of the story books and the pastoral poets is certainly very remote. The cow-herd of the books is depicted as a mild-mannered young man with melancholy air, lolling about in the shade, reading his testament, or the Sorrows of Werter, lying on his back on the velvet turf, or walking hand in hand with his dove-eyed Phyllis, yourning sentimental nonse into her listening ears.

The Texas herder, provided that he can read at all, takes along a stray copy o the 'Police Gazette, or Beedle's No. 753, with which to fill up the intervals between poker and three-card monte.

We know nothing of his antecedents—As to when or where he was born, or whether, like Topsy, he 'jest growed,' are unsolved problems. He may have had a babyhood and a boyhood, but we have no proof of those facts. Our first acquaintance with him is in the prime of manhood.

In morals the herder is not a model among man for the sunday school books. He posesses all the vices that his limited education permits, and if he omits any it is not his fault. As a profane swearer he has few equals; as a gambler he is not surpased.

Prodigal of his money, heedless for the future, he lives for the day only; and his brief life is usually brought up with a sharp turn by a pistol shot in a drunken brawl.

His vices are counterbalanced by some virtues. Generous and open hearted, he will spend his last dollar for a friend, or risk his life for a comrade in danger.—Living his whole life without the pale of civilized society, associated with vile men and viler women, it is only a wonder that not worse than he is.

A Funny Honneymoon.

A recent number of the Memphis 'Avalanche' announces the marrage of Mr. Geo. Christy and Miss Fanny Duane, both of whom are said to be bright and shining lights on the variety stage. The paper says:

The nuptials were of a decided 'tonnish nature' as will be remembered, and when over, they made a bridal tour to a hotel.

Returning from there to the room of Madam Fanny, the happy couple separated with mutual vows of love and affection.

That night, about the witching hour of twelve, the happy bridegroom returned, only to find the door of his wife's room securely locked. A few gentle raps with an ale bottle which he was carrying to his home, and the door opened.

Who are you? inquired the bride, in a loud tone.

It's me, my own ducky dear. I have come, answered Mr. Christy, walking into the room and setting the ale bottle down while he lighted his pipe, a rusty, stumpy clay.

You git out of here, you nasty thing, roared the gentle madam, in a voice of thunder, as she pulled from a bureau a six-shooter.

Mr. Christy, the banjoist 'got.' Before he got down stairs, however, his loving wife of eight short hours shot three times at him. A nervousness on the part of the female shootist, and the agility of the bridegroom, alone prevented the necessity of the intervention of the coroner.

Notwithstanding his rather warm reception, Mr. Christy again visited his charming bride yesterday morning. She saw him coming up the stairs and sent down her card in the shape of a skillet to let him know she was not in.

Last evening Mr. Christy was inconsolable—also drunk. Mrs. Christy is resolute and anxious for a fight.

At a late hour he embarked on a southward bound boat, being satisfied that distance—and a good deal of it—lends enchantment to the view, so far as his bride is concerned.

A Fort Wayne man who has invented a new receipe for cleaning clothes, pargdes it on his advertisements under the standing head of "Every Man His Owh Washerwoman!"

$250,000.

We believe that is the amount of the people's money expended for court expenses in North Carolina so far, in this year 1872. When one learns that $5,000 has been enough for all such purposes in any previous year, it is easy guessing where the odd $245,000 of Uncle Sam's money goes in this Presidential election year

Besides this enormous steal from the public money, the Secretary of the Treasury has gone there, and two more Cabinet officers are about two start along with Jeremiah Wilson or Henry Colbaith—or whatever is the name of Grant's candidate for Vice President.

Taking all things into the count, and adding thereto the fact that Grant has the Army and that new process of law—The Sword, his defeat on the 1st of August will be the precusor of his utter route in November.—Pittsburg Post.

The French Method.

A Paris correspondent decribes as follows the present mode of inflicting punishment upon offending editors in that city. The judicial bestowal upon the convict of a sort of claim to a period of imprisonment, of which he may at his convenience avail himself, is a novelty which only the French could have invented.

About a fortnight ago, Mr. Edward Portallis, of the Verite, was condemned to a months imprisonment for having published the letter in which Mr. Lalvye brought an infamous charge against Mr. Jules Fovre. I thought I would go and visit Portallis in prison. As the prison is at some distant, I went first of all to his office, to ascertain how and when I could most easily see him.

I am sorry you cannot see him, said the gentleman I addressed; he is not here just now.

Of course he is not here—he is in prison; it is in the prison that I want to see him, I replied.

My interlocutor replied, with a smile, Well, he may be in prison, but I did not know it. He was here last evening and we expect him here to-night.

Why, said I, he was condemned a months imprisonment.

Exactly so.

And the sentence has not been executed?

No.'

Has it been remitted?

Not at all.

And what then? What does it all mean?

He will have to go to prison all the same; But for offences such as his the authorities are not very exacting; they allow a man to choose, within certain limits his own time.

It is like a debt that will have to be paid—they do not press for instant payment. Mr. Portallis will go and deliver himself up one of these days when he has a little leisure; it may be a month hence, it may be two months hence—I do not know.

One of the members of the Republican State Central Committee of New York, in a letter to the Chairman withdrawing his name as a member, thus defines his position:

'A large proportion of the Republicans, and a great majority of the electors of this District, have resolved to vote for Mr Greeley at the approaching Presidential election. Not wishing to occupy a position antagonistic to that of a majority of my Republican friends in the District, and being earnestly in favor of the election of Greeley for President, I have to request that you will accept my resignation as a member of the Republican State and Executive Committee.

Sharp Financiering—How the" Great War Governor' Fed His Hearse And Cow at the Expense of the State—

The friends of Governor Morton claim great creditfor him as an able financier, thoroughly acquainted with the money question of the day, and many of them regard his appointment as Secretary of the Treasury in case of Grant's re-election and the retirement of Boutwell as a fixed fact. The Governor has indeed shown some little diplomacy in money matters as the vouchers on file in the State Auditor's office amply demonstrate; whether it is of such a character as to warrent the claim of his peculiar admirers and commend him to public favor we will leave the people to judge. We give one case in point to-day.

In our investigation we were prepared to find Governor Morton supplying himself with newspapers ice, coal wood etc., for his residence, out of the State Treasury, but when it came to keeping a couple of horses and a cow at the expenses of the people of Indiana we confess we were somewhat surprised. That was a piece of financiering that we did not look for. It was an innovation upon all usage. It was inflagrant violation of the law. And yet the evidence of our 'great war Governor" having done this thing is of reccord and is clear and convulsive.

The following bill rendered by Mr. Charles Glazier, will speak for itself.

INDIANAPOLIS, January 27th, 1865.
Mr. O. Morton bought of Charles Glazier, Commission Merchant, etc 1864.

June 4	To ten bushels cron	$2,50
20	To ten bushels corn	11'60
20	To ten bushels oats	9,00
20	To ten bushels bran	2,50
July 5	To ten bushels bran	2,50
21	To ten bushels corn	11,50
21	To ten bushels oats	9,50
21	To ten bushels bran	2,50
Aug 29	To five bushels corn	7,50
30	To eighty pounds shorts	1,20
Sept. 7	To 133 pounds bran	2,00
14	To ten bushels oats	10,00
14	To five bushels corn	7,00
14	200 pounds bran & shorts	3,00
Oct. 4	To 200 pounds shorts	3,50
10	To ten bushels oats	9,00
10	To six bushels corn	8,40
17	200 pounds shorts & bran	3,00
Nov. 4	200 pounds shorts & bran	2,50
5	To five bushels corn	6,50
19	To 200 pounds shorts	3,00
22	To ten bushels oats	9,00
23	To six bushels corn	7,80
Dec. 6	To 200 pounds shorts	3,00
22	To 200 pounds shorts	3,00
1865.
Jan. 3	To six bushels corn	7,00
3	To six bushels oats	5,40
3	To 200 pounds shorts	2,00
10	To five bushels corn	5,00
		$161,30
Jan. 28	To ten bushels oats	9,00
8	To five bushels corn	6,00
Feb. 1	To 240 pounds hay	3,60
Total		$180 00

The footing up of different items shows 63 bushels of corn and 66 bushels of oats a total of 129 bushels of oats and corn for the horses; and 40 bushels and 133 pounds of bran, 1,070 pounds of shorts, and 600 pounds of bran and shorts for the cow, all furnished within a period of less than eight months. The amount of corn and oats, we are informed by those conversant with the keeping of horses, was sufficient to feed four horses for seven months but as the Governor we understand, had but two horses the feed furnished was sufficient to keep them for fourteen months.

It will be observed that Mr. Glazier considers this a personal account against 'Mr. O. P. Morton." He did not bring it in against the State of Indiana for he knew that the State of Indiana had nothing ro do with it, and we presume that he was as much surprised as the good people of this State will be surprised, when they learn that Governor Morton, after keeping the account for nearly a month issued the following order for its payment.

STATE OF INDIANA, EXECUTIVE DEPATMENT.

Indianapolis, February 18, 64.
Auditor of State—Draw a warrent on the Treasury of State in favor of Chas Glazier for one hundred and eighty dollars and ten cents on general funds, for hay and feed for Governor's house, as per annexed acct.
$180, 10. O. T. MORTON,
Governor of Indiana.

There is a master-strokes of genius for you! This single maneuver is enough of a certainty to establish the claim of O. P. M. as no common debt in the mysteries of financial diplomacy.—Who but our 'noble Governor would have concived the noble idea of making the State pay for the feed of his horses and cow? And who but him would have done the unblushing effrontery to execute the idea? His salary had a few years before been doubled and the Legislature then in session had voted him $5,000 a year extra in lieu of a residence. But this only served to whet the appetite of the 'great war governor.' Like the daughter of the hoise leech his, cry was still Give! Give!"

Paddy O'Flanagan has been immortalized in doggerel as a gentleman for having 'kept a pig, and fed it on his neighbors. What will be said of Governor Morton who kept two horses and a cow on the State? What poet will write his name on the highest nich in temple of fame by immortalizing in 'thoughts that breathe and words that burn," this great financial exploit of Indiana's noble Governor.—Ind Sentinel.

Grant's Long Branch Cottage.

Mr. Thomas Murphy, the president's boon companion, stated over his own signature, a few days ago, that Gen. Grant himself paid for the cottage he occupies at Long Branch, and that he, Murphy, did not contribute a cent towards that gift enterprise. Mr. Alex. T. Steward, who had Grant's confidence at one time sufficiently for the latter to nominate the former for Secretary of the treasury, and whose statement upon questions of fact will not be questioned, seems to have a different impression, or, in fact, knowledge, of the President's real estate operations at Long branch. No, doubt, as he states, Stewart was very much surprised to read Mr. Murphy's letter, published last week, denying that he had anything to do with the Long Branch cottage gift to Mr. Grant. And why these denials, this effort to deceive the people in regard to the Long Branch property, if there was not something exceedingly indelicate or improper connected with the transaction? Mr. Stewart said he had read Murphy's letter this week, denying he had anything to do with the Long Branch gift to Grant. Stewart states that a subscription paper for a fund to buy a Long Branah cottage to be given to President Grant was presented to him for a subscription of $5,000 to complete the full amount. On this paper were the names of Murphy, Grant's Collector at New York, John Hoey, Childs, Borie, and those of four or five more for $5,000 each. Stewart says he declined to sign.

In this statement Stewart contradicts Murphy flatly. He says that Mr Murphy not only took $5,000 stock in the President's cottage by the sea, but that property was a gift to Grant. As Thomas Murphy alleges, Grant may have been his check for the cost of the property, but the money to make the purchase was given him, and we give the names of some of the donors. If Stewart tells the truth, and noone will question his veracity, then Mr. Murphy deliberately and wilfully lied to shield the President, and the President by consenting to the misrepresentation if he did not suggest it, becomes responsible for the acts or expressions of his friend Murphy, upon the principle that the receiver of stolen goods is as criminal as the theif.

People accustom themselves to almost everything in the world. It is related of Martin Luther that he constantly heard the devil making a noise in the monastery of Wittenberg, and that at last he became so accustomed to the fact that on one occasion, having been awakened by the sound, he perceived that it was "only the devil," and went quietly to sleep again. So now, when the people hear any blatant ravings in politics, they discover that it's only Morton or Wilson, and proceed quietly on their way again.

The Reason Why.

The Mormons tell a good story of Brigham Young. Among the applicants for the special privilege of taking second wife, there came one day a brother, of very doubtful character, when something like the following dialogue ensued:

'So you want another wife do you?

'Yes if you please, Brother Brigham."

"Well, the shor tof the matter is you can't have one.'

'Why can't I have one as well as the other saints.'

'So you want to know the whole story, do you.'

'Yes; I should like to know why I can't have more than one wife as well as the rest of them?'

Well you shall know then, in short order, I want your race to die out."

The most touching eulogyh and the most comprehensive probably, was uttered at the grave of Daniel Webster at the close of the funeral rites. A plain man, probably one of the neighbors of the diseased came forward and said with quivering lips.

"Daniel Webster the world will be lonesome without you."

The vuality which won for Daniel Webster this touching eulogy was not his great and brililiant intellect, but his neighborly kindness.

A Powder Mill.

Says a visitor to one of these dangerous places, a powder mill is not a place you wish to go through twice. But though you realy feel like holding your breath while looking at it, it is realy an interesting process to see

The powder is made, perhaps you know of charcoal saltpeter and brimstone. Each of these articles are prepared in a house by itself, but the house where they are mixed is the first terrible one. In this building there is an immense millstone rolling round in an iron bed and under the stone are put the three fearful ingredients of gunpowder. These are thoroughly mixed and ground together. This is a very dangerous opperation for if the stone came in contact with the iron bed it is very apt to strike fire, and the merest suspicion of a spark would set the whole. The materials are spread three or four inches thick in the bed. The wheel which goes by water power is started and every man leaves the place. The door is shut and the machinery is left to its terrible work alone. When it has run long enough the mill is stopped and the men come back.

Strange and Fatal Hallucination.

A resident of York county, Pa, who was the posessor of a competency sufficient to support himself and family during their natural lives, became possessed of the idea that they were all coming to want and would die of starvation. This hallusination took such firm hold upon his mind that no persuasions on the part of his friends was sufficient to divest him of it.—Day after day it grew stronger for years. His greatest anxiety seemed to be for his family, and he determined in order to save them he would be compelled to starve himself. This he carried into execution and recently became a victim of this all absorbing and fatal illusion of his life, and death occurred of actual starvation volunterily and persistently imposed upon himself. For several days he refused all sustenance, and although efforts were made to force food into his mouth, his strength commenced to decline and soon after he died in a starving condition. His dying words a few moments before his death were: 'I knew that I would starve!"

A Political Photograph.

We held a brief but interesting conversation the other day with a Grant man—one of the "unswerving.' We came upon him unawares and discovered that he was not only blue but wroth over the aspect of things. Said we, by way of opening conversation.

"Have you read Sumner's letter?

'No I havn't, I never thought much of Sumner.'

'Well, there is Shurz. You remember Shurz. Presume you have read his St. Louis speech, especially that part refering to—'

"No, I dont feel much interested in Shurs he's dishonest"

"But Trumbull you heard him speak here on—"

"No, I didn't. I dislike Trumpull. I don't believe any thing he says.

"H'm. How about the Governor; you are thoroughly posted on him certainly.'

'I never set any store by the Governor.'

'Well, there is Banks of Massachesetts. He is out in a—'

'Banks! Banks! Well the fact is—d——n Banks." And our Grant friend turned off down street evidently in high dudgeon, because we had cited a few influential authorities on, 'Thou shalt not covet,' nor steal, nor be in collusion with thieves.

The Grant pill is rolling very slowly over the country.

Grant is to be kept out of the way till elected President. Good buy, Gen. we ne'er shall see you more.

In Salt Lake when a reporter for the City Council does not report the truth they shut him out. Good.

The state elections that are to take place in September are Maine, Vermont and California.

—Judge Hancock, Chairman of the Grant Committee at Memphis Tennessee has resigned and will support Horace Greeley.

General Banks has offered his service as speaker for the campaign to the National Liberal Republican Committee.

Five sevenths of the business men of Madison, Wisconsin, are members of the Greeley club. More than 200 Republicans have joined.

Colonel Jesse F. Warner of Nebraska, who gave an Electorial vote for Grant in 1868, will now give his individual vote for Greeley.

We cannot fail—but if we do, is the way Senator Wilson speaks. First positive and then conditional. He saw his mistake and hastened to correct it.

Mr. Greeley is one of the bondsmen of General Jones the Grant postmaster of New York. Cannot some Radical smell out a little disloyalty in this circumstance.

Grant is now disposed to clasp hands over the bloody chasm with every ex Rebel who will vote for him. But he is disgusted at the thought of Greeley doing such a thing.

Morton made an accidental admiss in his Rushville speech. He said, speaking of the freedom of the negroes that 'it was the war that made them free' and not the Republican party.

The assistant Postmaster at Indianapolis has defaulted to the amount of $4,600. He was one of Morton's pets. Another man paying the deficency does not lessen the crime.

A Greeley club was organized at Sherman city, Cansas, on the 27th ultimo, with sixty-one members. Within one week the membership increased to one hundred and twenty-three, many of whom voted for Grant in 1868.

Thomas Settle, one of the orignal secessionists of North Carolina has been taken in by the Grant party, and consequently the people have turned him out of office. He was defeated the late election, and its now settled that he will remain at home unless he makes Grant a present.

The Murfreesboro, Tennessee Monitor of the 11th instant says. "We run up the names of Greeley and Brown this week to our masthead.—Now boys off with your coats and at the Radical plunderers." That is worth a column of twaddle. Work is now in order.

It is claimed by the Radical press that Greeley has said all manner of hard things about the Democratic party. Perhaps he did, but it was said at a time when such men as Logan, Butler, Morton, Cameron and a few more corrupt men disgraced it by being members thereof.

The following are the electors at Large, as selected by the Liberal and Democratic Central Committee at their late meeting:

Electors—Hon. George W. Julian, of Wayne county; Cyrus M. Allen, of Knox county; John R. Coffroth, of Tippecanoe county; James Gavin, of Decatur county.

Contingents—John B. Niles, of Laport county; Eliha E. Rose, of Green county; John Lee, of Montgomery county; Alexander D. Lemon, of Lawrence county.

Before General Banks announced himself for Greeley, he was spoken of as "the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts." Since that he is called the cotton thief of the Red River Expedition. Which goes to show that a man may be dishonest and remain in the Republican party. We know that Banks was a brave soldier, and we would prefer trusting him to a dozen of Grant birelings that now infest government offices.

Senator Wilson, the Know Nothing candidate for Vice President—if we can go back to the war, we can go a little further and bring in this question—said at Kendallvalle, that he loved the Republican party because it was baptized in fire and blood!

Well, he is the only man that we ever heard exult over the graves of thousands of soldiers, who according to his opinion, died for the Republican party. And he wants to be Vice President!

The largest political meeting held in Michigan thus far, was held at the opera house at Detroit, on the 22d inst to ratify the Cincinnati-Baltimore nominations. The opera house was crowded and the meeting was presided over by Hon. Robert McClelland, and addressed by him Congressman Blair and Duncan Stewart, Liberal of Detroit. About 4,000 people were in attendance and every thing passed off harmoniously and great enthusiasm was a noticeable feature of the meeting.

Wilson at Kendallville said that Grant possesses more knowledge of the affairs of State than any other man in the country. Yes, such as they are at the present Doubtless Grant knows a good deal about the presents of bull pups, horses, bonds and houses, and his "what I know about official patronage" must be extensive. This is the sense in which Wilson meant it to be taken. He did not mean Grant's Statesmanship, because it would be putting four years of Grant against thirty years of himself, which Wilson would acknowledge under no consideration.

Nearly every Radical paper in Indiana has published the statement that Thomas A. Hendricks voted against furnishing supplies to the Union army during the rebellion. It is scarcely necessary to refute the statement of these carbuncles on the literary world but fearing that they may deceiv the ignorant, we will say that there is not one word of truth in the statement. Mr. Hendricks voted on all occasions, for supplies for the army, as the records will show, and these who report to the contrary state that which the most of them knew to be false.

Pendleton for Greeley.

The St. Louis Republican says a correspondent writing from Hamburg, Germany, informs it that in a conversation on the 22d of July last with Hon George H. Pendleton he was gratified to hear that Mr. P. speak favorably and encouragingly of Mr. Greeley's election. The correspondent adds that Mr. Pendleton will return home from Germany in time to take part in the presidential canvass. The prevailing opinions among Americans in Europe is that a change of Administration is needed for the correction of great abuses.

If North Carolina has elected Caldwell the Radical candidate fr governor, even by a fair vote it only continues in office a Republican Governor.—It is no change; it is no gain for the Republicans; it only keeps the state Government in the Republican hands, just where it has been since the war—The so-called Republican victory affords very little aid or comfort to the Grantites. The Governor is almost powerless unless he has a Legislature of like faith with himself, to co operate with him. The Legislature is Democratic or Anti-Grant, and that secures the election of a United States Senator opposed to the administration ring.—The Conservatives of North Carolina have achieved a substantial victory.

The Democracy of Louisville have been purifying themselves. At the local election yesterday, a Citizens' Ticket, composed of Democrats, was elected over the regular nominated ticket. The people this year seem inclined to elect good men to office regardless of party managers and rings —Enquirer.

Still Another.

A telegraph dispatch says that Hon. John A Farnsworth, at present a member of congress from Illinois, and one of the ablest Republicans in that body, declared for Greeley and Brown on last Saturday. Every day we have such intelligence. Where will it stop? Grant ought to declare the Radical party in a state of insurrection, suspend the writ of habeas corpus, and arrest every mutineer. He should insist upon a discipline in the party ranks for without that, his calling and election is not sure.

It is reported that there is a perfect revolution in Illinois, and that the Radicals will hardly save a congressional district. The ablest and best Republicans in the state are declaring daily against the tan-vat ticket.

☞Hon. Martin M. Ray one of the purest and ablest men in the State, a lawyer by profession, died suddenly on Monday, at his home in Indianapolis. The death of Mr. Ray, caused a profound gloom over the city of his home, and his many friends throughout the State will deeply regret this sad occurrence. Only the other day we met Mr. Ray and had a long conversation with him in which he manifested the greatest interest in political affairs. He was a Democrat of the strictest sect, and had made his arrangements to stump the State during the campaign. In the Baltimore Convention, Mr. Ray, was the Chairman of the Indiana delegation, and during his long life has held several important political positions. As a lawyer he stood in the foremost rank, and as a man he enjoyed the confidence and esteem of all who knew him.

The able and exaustive letter of Senator Sumner, giving his reasons for prefering Mr. Greeley to Mr. Grant for President, and advising the collored people to stand by Mr. Greeley, has drawn from Mr. Blaine a letter in which he undertakes to revive in Mr. Sumner all his old animosities and prejudices against the prominent men of the South. To this letter of Blaine's, so unbecoming a gentleman who aspires to the honor and reputation of a statesman Mr. Sumner replies nobly and magnanimously, as follows. You are greatly concerned with the company I keep. To quiet your solicitude I beg to say that, in joining the Republicans who brought forward an original Abolitionist I find myself with so many others devoted to the cause I have served always, that I have not missed you until you hastened to report your absence; nor had I taken account of the Southern Secessionists, who as you aver are now co-operating with me in support of this original Abolitionist, except to rejoice that, if among my former associates some like yourself hesitate, their places are supplied from an unexpected quarter. You entirely misunderstand me when you introduce an incident of the past and build on it an argument why I should not support Horace Greeley. What has Preston Brooks to do with the Presidential election? Never, while a sufferer did anybody hear me speak of him in unkindness; and now after the lapse of more than half a generation, I will not unite with you in dragging him from the grave where he sleeps to aggravate the passions of political conflict and arrest the longing for concord.—And here is the essential difference between you and me at this juncture; I seize the opportunity to make the equal rights of all secure through peace and reconciliation. But this infinite boon you would postpone. Seven years have passed since we laid aside out arms, but unhapily during all this period there has been a hostile spirit towards each other while the rights of collored fellow-citizens have been in perpetual question. Seven years mark a natural period of human life. Should not the spirit be changed with the body? Can not we, after seven years, commence a new life, especially when those once our foes repeat the saying: 'Thy people shall be my people and thy God my God.' I declare my preference for an original Abolitionist as President, and you seek to create diversion by crying out that Democrats will support him; to which I reply, So much the better. Their support is assurance that the cause which he has so constantly guarded, whether of equal rights or reconciliation, is accepted by Democrats, and this is a pledge of true union beyond any thing in our history. It is a victory of ideas without which all other victories must fail to intenisfy your allegation.

Senator Sumner of Mass. is for Greeley.

Senator Schurz of Mo. is for Greeley.

Senator Trumbull of Ill., is for Greeley.

Senator Tipton of Iowa is for Greeley.

Senator Fenton of N. Y. is for Greeley.

General Banks of Mass. is for Greeley.

Hon. W. Winans of Xenia. Hon. P. Powel of Delaware. Gen. R. Brinkerhoff of Mansfield, Hon. J. T. Brooks, of Salem. Judge Towner, of Cleveland, Judge Paine of Celveland, Hon. J. Buckingham, of Cleveland, Hon. S. H. Dickson of Lorain and more than a hundred other Republican leaders in Ohio are for Greeley.

The Fitting of the Grant Collar At Waterloo, Saturday Aug. 8, 1872.

Mr. Editor.—Lest this memorable enterprise, devised for the purpose of holding on to those Republican voters who are yet regarded faithful; and if possible to reclaim the many who are looking wistfully to the swelling ranks of the liberal Democracy—with Greeley as their candidate—should be lost to history, we propose to save it from oblivion by giving an elaborate account of that "meeting," had in pursuance of a hand bill "call," signed "200 voters."

Scarcely had the sun disappeared below the western horizon, e'er the quiet of the streets was broken by the sound of marshal music, directly in front of the head quarters of the U. S. Collector of Internal Revenue. A crowd soon gathered. There was the Pension agent, Postmaster, Government Doctor, quondum government Revenue Assessor, Administrator Printer, Gen. Ex-Treasurer, Substitute Brokers, with plenty of boys anxious to know what was up.

Darkness came; the crowd repaired to the school house, preceded by the band, and as our day's work was ended, curiosity led us thitherward.

Promptly the meeting was organized,—for the importance of adjusting the collar, was an operation which permitted of no delay.

The important ceremony was prefaced by a speech, somewhat after this sort:

"Fellow citizens; you have assembled here for the purpose of doing the behests of the first Captain of the age. (applause.) You have often heard the reviers of our candidate, in attempting to belittle him, refer to his frequent visits to the sea side, and other fashionable resorts, where such innocent sports, as horse-racing, and gambling, are indulged in to a moderate extent; forgetting how necessary such recreation is to one, whose herculean labors in reducing the public debt; (?) in prosecuting Brigham Young; (?) exterminating the blood thirsty Pegan Indian Squaws and Pappooses; in avenging the wrongs of American citizens, outraged by the monarchical goverments of the old world; (?) who is now fast covering this nation with a mantel of eternal glory, in the settlement of the Alabama question; (?) who forgets not his or his wife's relations, when he knows,—much better than anybody else—that their services are wanted by the government; (?) who has ever maintained the consistency of the Republican party, by the aid and sympathy which he has extended to strugling freedom in Cuba, (?) who,—to whom ingratitude is a stranger has ever remembered those noble patriots, who bro't him gifts; and officially compensated them at the country's expense.

"My fellow citizens: The time is too short to relate but a little of the great exploits of our Statesman President during his official term. Has he not made the nation famous—in the eyes of the aristocracy of the old world—by sending his son and daughter—convoyed by Gen. Sherman with a half dozen Iron Clads, to the courts of European Monarchies?—Have they not been presented to victor Emanuel, to the Pope, to Queen Victoria, to Alexander of Russia, and to the new made Emperor of Germany—wickedly called by some Greeley men "Old Dutch Bill." And has he not so managed his administration, that worthless members of the once glorious party have been allowed to slough off, and has he not retained those of whose integrity and standing—of all parties and sections—there was not the least shadow of doubt? Has he not retained Morton and Chandler, is he not on the most amicable relation with John Morrissy and Tom Murphy? Did he not—that we might have peace—extend courtecies to Gen. Lee, and call another secesh Gen. to his cabinet? And is not Gov. Wise of Virginia, and Gov. Orr of South Carolina, among his most warmest supporters?

"Fellow Citizens: With all this array of great exploits staring you in the face, are you not most anxious to "put on the collar?" I tell you the honor far exceeds the honor of the the Knights of the Golden Circle? or the Sons of Malta!"

Whereupon, some twenty-five stepped forward, bowed the neck, and received the precious jewels.

It was also thought advisable in order that no stone should be left unturned,—to organize a 'Tanners' Club' to be ready to make a demonstration when the Know Nothing Senator Wilson should speak at Kendallville.—Whereupon it was agreed that, in the fitness of things, it would be best, that inasmuch as the regalia suitable to represent a "tanner" viz: A bask stained shirt and trowsers an odorous sheepskin apron, knives & scrapers; would not become a gentleman who, sought to live by his wits; they very generously invited, among others, some poor laborers to become members thereof while all the expenses for regalia and travel, should be borne by those who might very properly be denominated leaders.

One after another of these latter volunteered to furnish 1, 2, and some as high as 5 regalia suits. Some 25 were caughtby this senseless bait.

But by far the best of the performance, was the raking which the Right Hon. gave to the silver band, something after this sort: He wished to know why we are not to have the services of the silver band for this cam- we advance the money to buy the 'horns?' and have we not $150 in the company concern at present? I guess we will have the music; if by no other means, then we will try the law.

This campaign is to be run with music, with demonstrations, with mammouth processions. Why, when we were up in this country in '56 the Democrats said we could get up no demonstration—did'nt we just saw out at our mill some plank 56 feet long, and make a wagon, and did'nt we get the longest tamarack poles we could find, and did'nt we get a flag 300x150 feet and hitch 32 yoke of oxen to it, and get a democrat to drive? We did those things then, we can do them again—But we must have some music, we must have the band, if we have to get up a company. These fellows can go to the towns around, attend dances, get drunk, injure the 'horns' and when we want some music we cant have it. We will have it and that is the end of it.

After this highfalutin, the meeting adjorned to meet at the office of one of the leaders to perfect the organization of a Tanners Club.

SQUIB.

His Acceptance of gifts and birds.

General Grant was a notorious, and President Grant has never been known to refuse a present. It has been denied that he ever accepted a gift after he was eleced President, but here is one among many proofs to the contrary. Four months after his election to the Presidency, $105,000 were transmitted to him in the following cash and securities.

Mortgage and interest	$40,437,50
Fifty thousand 7 30 United States bonds, first series	45,725,00
Cash	19,837,50
Total	$105,000,00

The receipt was duly acknowledged in the following letter.

WASHINGTON, D. C, Feb. 17, 1869
Dear General—Your letter of the 15th incloring me the handsome testimonial of the citizens of New York with the names of all the too generous contributors to it is received. * * *

Through you I wish to thank the gentlemen whose names you have enclosed to me individually and collectively. I have the honor to be your obedient servant.

U. S. Grant.

For the purchase of the President's cottage at Long Branch presented to him after he became President, there were eight subscribers. This is the direct personal statement of Alexander T. Stewart who said significantly that he knew of one gentleman who was invited to become a contributor to that fund.

There were three members of Grant's Cabinet as first appointed who had made him presents. Stewart Borie and Hoar. Stewarts givings are well known. Borie had contributed to the Philadelphia house and Hoar to the library presented the President by citizens of Massachusetts. and Daniel Butterfield who was appointed sub-Treasury in New York and was driven from office by the Black Friday exposure was the man who got up the New York subscription of 105,000 for Grant while Grinnell appointed Collector was one of the subscribers.

Two individuals who have hitherto called themselves Democrats and acted with the Democratic party, have declared for Grant and Wilson. These fellows are known to the world as 'Boss' Tweed of New York and Jason B. Brown of this State, or 'Bazoo' Brown as our neighbor used to call him. No two men in the country have done more to bring disgrace upon the Democratic name than these two, and the Democracy is to be congratulated upon getting rid of them. They have now found their proper company.—Pharos.

☞A South Bend newspaper reports that "Mr. Coalfax's health will prevent him from taking a very active part in urging publicly the election of the Republican ticket during the Presidential campaign." From Illinois we learn that Senator John A. Logan has gone to Utah to spend some time for his health, though there have been frequent and urging calls for him in North Carolina, Indiana and Pennsyl- It bad health is contagious among the respectable leaders of the present campaign? What of such men as Blaine Garfield and Dawes? Are they sick too? It seems very much as though the brains of the Republican party, who have not already joined the Liberal movement, at least propose to do nothing to secure the re-election of Grant. —*Ft. OFFICIAL PAPER of the COUNTY

Local and Miscellaneous.

Fine rain on last Monday.

See advertisement of farm for sale.

The Eagle Flouring Mill is running day and night.

Mr. Wilson slid into the Senate on the Know Nothing hobby.

You ought to see the sick rooster in the Whitley Commercial.

Large quantities of wheat are daily received and shipped at this place.

An extensive fire at Plymouth distroyed $32,000 worth of property.

The yield of wheat is reported quite good in this county.

Read the communication from Waterloo in another column.

Our county is to suffer another terrible infliction. Major Sailor is to make six more speeches next month.

Senator Wilson dilivered his eulogy on Grant at Kendallville last Friday. It was no great shakes either.

Miss Annie Rainier, has returned from Mt Union, Ohio, where she has been attending college for several months past.

Hendricks' speech at Kendallville hurt the Rads pretty bad. The Standard goes two columns so as to ease down the effect.

The best way to kill fleas and bed bugs is to set the bed on fire and when the "varmits" run out kill them with a tomihatchet or a pitch-fork.

Hank Ford is around on a crutch and a smashed foot. If the foot had been heavier than the saw log the saw log would have been smashed. But it wasn't.

From what we have heard of the dedication of the Wigwam, at Warsaw, it was a failure. Because Morton was there no doubt. Reub will make a big thing out of it, however.

An excursion will take place from Fort Wayne to Pleasant Lake, on the 22nd of this month, and those wishing to join it from this place can do so. Half fare rates will be charged.

When you go to Fort Wayne to buy clothing ask for one of our price lists before you purchase your goods, and get posted on prisces and not be cheated by outsiders.

Several of our town "roosters" enjoyed the entertainments given at Corunna, the other day. There was no balloon ascension, however, this time, as pea-nuts failed to inflate.

The New York Day Book, a leading paper that has been holding out against Mr. Greeley has this week put the name of Horace Greeley at its head, and is now going in to win.

Col. Poe, of Plymouth, a descendant of the man of the same name that pulverized Big Foot, came very near being gobbled in by the fire in that place last week. We are glad to see, from the Democrat, that he still lives.

We are in receipt of a copy of Lights and Shadows of New York Life, giving the sights and sensations of the great city. It is the most interesting book yet out, and an agent is wanted in every county. Address National Publishing Co. Chicago, Ills.

Sewing Machines.—The Sewing Machine agency of the Grover and Baker is now represented by Mr. C. Klotz, and the place of business changed from the jewelry store to Mr. K's. establishment. He will keep up a similar stock as heretofore, and and needles, oils and findings for all machines will be found always on hand.

Why did not the Whitley Commercial say something about the excellent nomination made by the Convention last week, for Congress, instead of spending all its force to prove that it was a less noisy and therefore more respectable an affair than the Kendallville soiree. It knows full well that Mr. Long is a much superior man in every way to their nominee.

A correspondent of the Press last week, from this place who names himself P. and we think well named, has [illegible] a cock and bull story about a ring which he says met at Waterloo. The editor of the Press didn't know anything about it until the writer [illegible] the [illegible] news, and now he is doubtless ready to swear to it with the same ease and grace that [illegible]

The most talented and experienced journalist perhaps, in the west is T. J. Foster of the Fort Wayne Free Press. He was schooled at Monroeville, Ind., and has been promoted to Fort Wayne. Nuff ced

It has been decided that Durgin—Geo. W. Durgin, the great Radical leader, of Allen county, shall go to Michigan city for the next two years, to serve the State in a more useful capacity than swindling the poor out of their hard earned money.

A Democratic paper was started in Ft. Wayne last spring, and a great many Democrats lent their assistance to its support. After the Baltimore Convention the editor was bought up, and it now goes contrary to the wishes of a majority who support it. The editor haint got long ears or brains either.

Frames.—We have had several large pictures handsomely framed lately at Mr. Gordon's picture gallery, and for beauty and style, we pronounce them first-class Mr. G. always keeps a good assortment of all kinds of frames, and if you have pictures to frame you will get good satisfaction by leaving them with him.

The boys that attended the Sunday school concert at Corunna, last Sunday eve., extend thanks to Mr. Adams, Esq., the popular hardware merchant of that place, for favors received. Mr. A. is a clever genial fellow, and without further remarks we will just say he stands on his tip toes for Horace Greeley, and that's enough.

The infant son of F. E. Davenport, our popular druggist, was badly scalded one day, last week, though not of such an extent that fears are entertained for its recovery. Mrs. D. had placed a tin-cup full of hot milk on the table, and had stepped in an adjoining room. Soon she heard the child scream, and running to the rescue found that it had upturned the cup, empting the contents upon its face and breast.

The Whitley Commercial says, because we did not have a rabble at our District Convention, like that at Kendallville, therefore it was a failure. Every county was represented, all with good delegations except LaGrange, most all of whom missed the train at the crossing, and what more is needed. DeKalb had twenty there, a man for every vote. Because we did not disgrace ourselves with a pandemonium similar to that at Kendallville, it is called a failure. We would like to see the Radical press make a fair statement once. But they are in their last throes, and will resort to anything to gain their ends. Lying is the most natural.

Quite a number of our young folks attended the Sunday school concert given at Corunna last Sabbath evening. The entertainment proved to be a grand success, with the exception of too lengthy a programme. The audience became very restless at 10 o'clock and many retired to their homes before the exercises were finished. The singing and music was the prominent features of the occasion. Miss Cissle, the organist, handled the instrument "as if she'd been their before" and Miss Molly Orr, assisted by two other ladies and two gentlemen performed their part equally as well.

Union Sunday Shcool Pic-nic.

The Sunday schools of Wilmington and adjoining townships will meet at the Birch Church, in Butler, on Saturday Aug 31st 1872, at 10 o'clock a. m., and preceded by the Butler silver band march to the grove east of town where ample preparations have been made for the occasion. The exercises at the grove will consist of music, singing and speeches, as follows

1st. Singing by the congregation.
2nd. Prayer.
3. Singing.
4th. Oration by Rev. Levi White, of Butler.
5th Music by the band.
Recess of one hour for refreshments.
8th. Music by the band followed by short speeches. Music and singing by the different schools represented.

By order of Lewis Plansin
Vice President of Wilmington-tp.

A gay young gentleman of this place was recently walking out with a couple of young ladies at the quiet hour of "early candle lighting," when one of the damsels discovered that she had lost her false curls. The gallant at once began a search for the lost treasures, and looking along the sidewalk he thought he discovered them. Pleased with the idea of his success and delighted with the bright prospect of receiving the smiling plaudits of the lady, he pounced down on the supposed curls and triumphantly turned to deliver them to the owner. A gentle breath of air wafted an exceedingly unpleasant odor to the olfactories of all the party, and the young man suddenly discovered that he had not found the curls, but had been decieved by being in a locality where the cows frequented the sidewalks

A very fair and gentlemanly (?) correspondent under the signature of "P." wrote what he doubless regarded as a very funy article to the Press last week. He proposes to go down into personalities. We had thought that a more honorable warfare would made—that personal abuse would for once be set aside, and more fair and generous discussion take its place. It is pretty hard for us to stoop low enough to answer this blackguardism, but propose to keep up our side and pay back in the same coin. Talking about Mormons, people living in glass houses should not throw stones. For further particulars see the Mormon of Butler township and when you sift it down, be sure and notice the consanquinity in the case. One bad act does not justify another, but one good turn deserves another. If such arguments are insisted upon, we are ready with abundant material.

The Republicans Hold Service!

Godlove S. Orth Officiates!

A MOURNFUL SPECTACLE.

Religious services were held at the Court House last Tuesday, presided over by G. S. Orth said to be a candidate for Congress. Ninety-seven immortal souls, Democrats included, were present at one time, not counting Gen. Blair, who did the applause. Godlove swayed over the benches, and did the business in true Methodist style. If Bro. Sandoe will forgive us we will say that we would be much more agreeably entertained, in point of logic, by a sermon from his pulpit than we were at the above meeting. G. S. commenced by putting Jeff Davis and Julian in the cabinet, a very probable event, seeing that J. Davis cannot hold office. But we mention this just to show the argument of the learned politician and divine.

He said the Administration and Republican party had paid so much on the national debt, and that no one else should have credit for it. He said there was nothing affirmed in the Cincinnati platform that was not affirmed in the Philadelphia platform, but he branched off here without making a showing of the two We noticed one man thoroughly converted to this reasoning. He was sound asleep. It was all in all one of the most conclusive fizzles we have seen or heard of.

ANGOLA.

We paid a short visit to Angola last week, and found it well worthy the excellent reputation it has abroad for its neatness and beauty, while the substantial brick buildings and its public improvements, in general, speak for the liberality and enterprise of its citizens. We called at the law offices of Messrs. Woodhull & Croxton, superbly furnished with every convenience and containing two as worthy gentlemen as one desires to meet.

We visited the jewelry and music establishment of Mr. Jones, across the way, and were pleased to learn of his great prosperity. In the evening our agreeable friend, W. B. McConnell, Esq., a rising young attorney of that place took us through the suburbs, to see the many attractive features of the place, in the way of fine residences, in which it abounds.

We also made a short call on our friend Weamer, of the Times. Altogether, we left with a good impression of our sister county seat.

We were also pleased to meet Messrs. Brown and McCartney, Clerk and Treasurer of the county, Mr. Kinney of the bank, and Mr. Dawson a dry goods merchant—for Greeley.

The Battle of Waterloo.

Mr. Editor:—A red-hot skirmish took place here last Wednesday, between the Chairman of the Republican Central Committee and our poplar candidate for Treasurer. Mr Baxter, the editor of the Press, called Mr. Kelly a liar, which Mr. Kelly treated with contempt, and only when the epithet was applied the second time prefixed with the words G—d d—m. Mr. Kelly resent the insult by knocking him down. Its an allegation that few men of honor will stand and though we do not commend this method of retaliation, Mr. Kelly stands fully vindicated. We learn that the fracas has been amicably adjusted, by each going the other's bail for their appearance at the next term of court.

STILL ANOTHER.

We also learn that another soiree occurred on Friday, in which our friend R. Wes. McBride became unmanageable.—Whom the gods wish to destroy they first make mad. Mac struck for Horace Greeley with his little cane, and the response was manly and generous, because no blow was given in return. The wicked flee when no man pursueth, is the lesson taught in this instance.

Nero.

Teachers and Students.

The next term of the Butler Union School will open Monday Aug. 19th. There will be a normal class organized for the instruction and drill of the teachers of the common schools. The instruction in this class will not be confined simply "to preparation for examination" but will extend beyond this to the vastly more important subject of preparation for teaching. The instruction will be thorough systematic and practical. In addition to the regular work of the school room there will be evening lectures upon various topics for the instruction of those in attendance. There will also be regular classes in the higher mathematics and in Greek and Latin, for those who are preparing for college, or are desirous of more thoroughly fitting themselves for their duties as teachers. The school is well furnished with apparatus, and, having employed an able assistant, we will spare neither time nor labor, not only in maintaining the reputation which it has already won, but if possible, in excelling it. We invite the attention of all those who think of attending a school of this class this fall. The tuition for a term of twelve weeks will be five dollars, with an extra fee for the higher mathematics and languages. Catalogues will be furnished free on application.

If our citizens desire to read a truthful paper they should obtain just one copy of the Kendallville Standard—that would satisfy them. In fact a look at Meyers, the talented editor, at this truthful sheet would impress any one that nothing but pure, double distilled truth would ever find access to his sheet. In fact he has got to be so truthful that we find on examination, that the Standard is now the only sheet in the United States that publishes anything of the kind. To give an inkling of its beauty in this direction we give the following taken from the last issue:

"At Auburn, DeKalb county, the Democrats advertised a balloon ascension, in order to get a crowd out to hear Tom Hendricks.

We give this to show our citizens here—our Grant friends, how fair a Grant paper can be.

Truthful Meyers says:

"Hendricks said it was not honest, for one man to make a present to another; said he: 'If you give me a horse, people will think there is something dirty between you and me.'" Well, they might; that's so. But where the gifts are made by loyal men, to a loyal General of the army, who has stood between us and the enemies of our country and saved it from destruction, it is quite another matter.—There is nothing 'dirty' between such men."

That's similar to Mark Twain's drink, "slum gullion." Its good for Republicans to take presents and reward them in patronage, but its "dirty" for Democrats to do so. Forcible logic, but its from truthful Meyers and must be believed. We trust he will keep this line of argument up as we know the people will draw the correct inference, and vote for Hendricks.

The Liberal movement in Fort Wayne is rapidly gaining strength. The Gazette, of that city, is forced to acknowledge the loss of the very best men from the Republican ranks. Hon. L. M Ninde, the very ablest lawyer in the place, and a life-long Republican is now making speeches in favor of Greeley.

Hon. Sol D. Bayless, one of the old stand bys of that party is also a liberal, and is bound to make his influence felt.

D. B. Strope, a prominent railroad man is also out for Greeley and means business.

Col. Zollinger, for the past two years, the Republican Sheriff of that county, elected through his great personal popularity, hangs his banner on the outer wall for Greeley. The Republicans put him on their ticket again this season, but he declined. The Colonel told us several things of Morton during the war, which we would like to make public, but we hold private conversation as sacred.

Charles H. McCulloch, Esq., son of our Ex-Secretary McCulloch under Lincoln and a member of Allen Hamilton & Co's bank, of that city, is for Greeley and Brown and will do good work in the cause.

W. H. Miller, Esq, of the law firm of Coombs & Miller, a brilliant lawyer and eloquent speaker, stands from under the corruption and imbecility of the Grant administration and is striking out from the shoulder for Greeley. And many others perhaps not so prominent but equally zealous, are united with the Democracy for the farmer of Chappaqua and the banner county will roll up a larger majority than ever. The Democrats are united notwithstanding the efforts of a weak sheet published in the interest of a half dozen politicans of the Peter Kiser stripe.

Editor Courier:—As some of your readers may be somewhat interested in the subject matter of the following communication, I wish you would do me the favor to publish it:

Messrs. Baxter & Kennedy,
Editors of the Waterloo Press.

I notice, in your paper of August 8, '72, a communication from Auburn, signed 'P' in which my name is used pretty freeley, in describing a terrible "mare's nest," and in which the author pretends to have discovered that certain persons have formed a ring to parcel out the offices of this Co. for 1872 and 1874, and I see that you say editorially, that 'The whole story comes from the best Democratic sources.'

Now, as the 'whole story' is a base fabrication, in so far as I am concerned, I demand the name of the author of said communication, as well as your authority for your assertion above quoted.

Fairness, it would seem to me, would require a compliance on your part, with the above demand.

Please answer this as soon as convenient, either through the Postoffice or otherwise as best suits you.

Respectfully,
Miles Waterman.

And to those who have read the communication, and editorial, refered to in the foregoing letter, I wish to make a short statement: My name was announced for Representation, by, and at the request of an old, and much esteemed friend residing in Jackson township. I gave my consent without due consideration, and for fear the announcement of my name might be considered as damaging the candidates already named, residing in the north part of the county, on the morning of the 27th I went to Mr. Baxter whose [illegible]

I consulted no one as to the propriety of my withdral, except Mr. Baxter. Nor did I see, or hear, from Messrs. Kelly, Shutt and Maxwell, from the time my name was announced until it was withdrawn. Nor did Messrs. Kelly, Shutt and Maxwell on the 27th of July 1872, or at any other time, say one word to me about who should be placed on the ticket in 1874. Nor did I see Mr. Shutt on that day, or in any way communicate with him on any subject. Nor did I consent that my name be withdrawn in consideration that it might be placed on the ticket of 1874, nor for any other consideration, other than above stated in connection with the Northern candidates.

I stated to the Press men, when I last paid up for the paper, that I would continue to take it, so as to know when it lied about me, as it never had said anything about me without lying. I suppose my year is about up, hence etc.

P. S. Is the author of the communication in the Press, the same that has heretofore taken occasion to "P" in that paper? The puddle looks like he is only more so.

PRAYERS I DO NOT LIKE.

I do not like to hear him pray
Who loans at twenty-five per cent,
For that I think should be applied
To pay the load and rent
For in that book we all should heed
Which says, The person shall be blest,
Who loans to buy the hungry bread
But does not say "take interest".

I do not like to hear him pray
On bended knees about an hour,
For grace to spend aright the day
When he knows his neighbors has no flour
But rather see him go to mill
And buy the luckless brother bread,
And see his children eat their fill
And laugh beneath their humble shed.

I do not like to hear him pray
Let blessings on the poor widow be
Who never seeks her home to say
If want overtakes you "Come to me."
I do not like to hear her pray
With jeweled ear and silky dress
Whose washerwoman toils hard all day
At night is asked to work for less.

Such pious shaver's I despise—
With folded hands and upturned face,
They lift to heaven their thin-angle eyes
Then steal the earnings of the poor
Such souless prayers I do not like,
If wrong—I pray to be forgiven,
No angle wings will upward fear,
Your lost a million miles from heaven.

We had the pleasure of taking dinner at the Main Street Exchange yesterday. It is undoubtedly one of the best hotels in Northern Indiana.—The prices are low, and the tables are loaded down with the delicacies of the season, the servants are attentive, and everything combines to make it a very attractive stopping place.—Fort Wayne Sentinel.

Everybody that goes to Fort Wayne should not fail to call at the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone block, and see the largest stock of clothing in the city. It has all been bought for cash before the late advance of wool.

Agricultural Items.

"Every cow should fatten one pig." is an old rule and a good one; that is the daily produce of a good cow should be in buttermilk and whey enough to feed the pig, after the cream and cheese are extracted.

The cash value of farms in New York has doubled during the last ten years, while the value of the implements have increased from twenty-five to forty-five millions of dollars in value.

Years ago we had Spitzenburgh and Baldwin apples for fifty cents per bushel, peaches by the wagon loads and plums without end. People were not educastd then in the great art of horti culture. Now we have abundance of science and no fruit; a great amount of knoledge, and no apples; long catalogues with hard names, but no plums. A change in the programme is loudly called for, and scientific horticulturists should inform us how to overcome disease, insects, and climate influences.

'Know all men by these present."—Gen. Grant.

Advices from Texas claim that State for Greeley by 50,000 majority.

The Washington "patriot" makes out a list of 2,104 papers which support Greeley to 1,497 which support Grant.

Eighty-nine Republicans of Binghamton, N. Y., signed a call for a Greeley and Brown meeting.

Senator Thurman predicts that Greeley will secure two hundred electoral votes without counting Ohio.

Eighty Republicans of Honesdale, Pa. have signed a call for a meeting for the purpose of forming a Greeley and Brown club.

It is reported that not a Republican vote will be cast for Grant in Bethany, Pa:, which has heretofore given decided Republican majorities.

Captain John H. Reece withdraws from the Executive Committee of the Grant party in Georgia, in order to support Greeley.

The Providence 'Press,' Republican goes for Horace Greeley and Brown. It is the largest and most influential newspaper in Rhode Island.

Of the German papers of the United States, eighty-three are for Greeley' thirty for Grant, and one—the Cincinnati 'Volksblatt—is non-committal.

Attaches of the New York Custom House have been notified that they are expected to 'come down' for campaign purposes, the assessments levied being from $5 to $15.

One hundred and twelve Republicans of Franklin County, Vt, who favor the election of Greeley and Brown, signed the call for a mass meeting, to be held at Sheldon on the 7th of August.

The Board of Public Works in Washington have discharged workmen who favor Greeley's election, and notified all concerned that none but Grant man will be employed.

The Boston 'Globe,' defend the administration, admits that 'there have been many irregularities in financial matters.' The people are going to look over the books.

Chief Justice Chaze has written a letter to D. F. Worcester, of Rochester, N. Y., in which he says: 'If I live and am able to go to Cincinnati in November, I shall vote for Greeley.

In 1868, the last year of Mr. Johnson's Administration, the Indian Service cost $3,988,354. In 1871, the third year of General Grant's Administration, this same service cost $7,426,879.

Alembert Pond, one of the Republican members of the New York State Constitutional Convention in 1867, and subsequently a member of the Legislature, headed the call for a Liberal Republican County Convention in Saratogo County.

'I would as soon steal the money outright as to take it in that way,' was the prompt reply of an honest North Carolina lawyer when offered a $1,000 sinecure by one of Grant's agents for his influence a the State election.

Gen. Conrad Krez, one of the alternate delegates to the Philadelphia Convention, has resigned his position on the staff of Governor Washburn, of Wisconsin, and and declared himself for Greeley. He says he does not know a single German Republican in Wisconsin will vote for Gen. Grant.

A Cool Relation.

How touching was the grief displed in B——at a funeral a little out of town! The undertaker, who was directing matters in a very professional and proper way, noticed a man giving orders, and, as he thought, rather encroaching upon the duties and privileges of his own office!

And who are you, my friend, that are so busy about here?

Oh! you don't know me?

No, I don't.

Well, I'm the corpse's brother.

Three of the dirtiest most ragged little ragamuffins in town entered one of the magnificient drug stores. Marching up to the counter one said; I want a cent,s worth of rock candy." Get out you ragamuffins; we don't sell a cent's worth of rock candy." Slowly and sadly they filed out of the store. On the outside consultation took place.—They re-entered the door. 'Mister do you sell three cents worth of rock candy? "Yes," Well we ain't got him," and the procession mooved again.

We happened in a store, not a thousand miles from here a few days ago, when a little boy came in with a basket on his arm and asked the merchant if he bought butter, and what price he paid. The merchant looked at the fellow a minute and then asked:

Is your butter good?

Well, Johnny answered, it ought to be for before churning, mother and sister spent four hours picking the hairs out of the cream.

The New Brunswick [N. J.] 'Times says that Govener Olden has decided to declare for Greeley and Brown.

Judge E. D. Culver, formerly of Brooklyn, now residing in Waukesha, Wis., has taken the stump for Greeley.

A report comes from Des Moines that Samuel Merrill, ex-Governor of Iowa, will supports Greeley.

The call for the liberal republican meeting in Columbus, O., had 150 Republican names.

The Brooklyn 'Times,' heretofor Radical, has come out in favar of Greeley and Brown.

The last Congress appropriated $50,000 for the express of the White House, thus making Grant's salary for this year $75,000.

Peter Cantin, the surrogate of Ulster Co elected by the Republicans last fall, earnestly supports Greeley.

The Princess Imperial of Germany, the oldest daughter of Queen Victoria, has seven children, of whom three are sons.

One of the Greeley electors in Arkansas is Colonel Sidney M. Barnes, who was once the Republican candidate for Governor of Kentucy.

The rebel General Mosby says that he will support Grant; but he also says that Greeley and Brown will carry the South almost unamimously.

Some of our Radical are very anxious to have the integrity of the Democratic party maintained and it grieves them to see Democrats support Greeley. Poor souls!

Another German daily has placed the names of Greeley and Brown at the head of its columns. This time it is the Wisconsin 'Telegraph,' at Oshkosh. The editor says: Grant's corrupt Administration has been long enough.'

It is well enough for Greeley men to rejoice over the numerous and valeable accessions which daily come to their ranks but the Bible tells us of a better rejoicing than this when it says:

'Let every man prove his own work and then he shall have rejoicing in himself alone, and not in another.

A rustic youth visiting Nashville for the first time, the other day, mistook the elevator in a hotel for a bed room and got half undressed before the machine started. He ascended in terror, and roared out as the second story was reach, 'Earthquake! O Lord have mercy upon me!" A bottle of apple-jack comforted him.

A California lady, whom the earthquakes have inspired, writes that "he torogenos parallaxes prismrtically converging are not due to the silicious introductions of phospherical asteriods, but rather to a parabolic seratification of the igneour zygema." Why they have earthquakes there is no longer a mystery.

In the Alps glaciers flow down into the valley where they melt and become rivers; whereas in Greenland although pressod forward to the water's edge they cannot melt, but break off in large bodies and become iceburgs. The glacier is like a river because the central part moves faster than the outsides; because its top moves faster than its bottom; and because the point of swiftest motion follow the sinuosities of its sides.

Sewing

Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and sti, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which everyone should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey and a little care taken in examination of routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R." running from Chicago, through Galesburg to Burlington, and the "I., B. & W. Route," running from Indianapolis, through Bloomington to Burlington, have achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading passenger routes to the west. At Burlington they connect with the B. & M. R. R. and from the great Burlington route, which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories and passenger starting from DeKalb county, on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the Burlington route.

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B & M. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

Eating Crow.

An Amusing Account of the Origin of the Term.

CHAPTER I.

Near the camp of the old Pennsylvania Bucktail regiment, in Virginia, early in the war, lived an old, aristocratic, exclusive and pompous Virginian, in true baronial style. His Mansion, of very old age was made of imported brick, his chimneys were tall and massive, and the rooms were large and pleasant. The chief attractions of the old place, however, were the grounds that surrounded the mansion. Large trees gave luxuriant shade, and the underbrush in portions of the ground afforded shelter for rabbits and other small game. There were walks, and orchards, and arbors, and the whole bore such a scene of general peacefulness and repose that it was no wonder the wild Bucktails were charmed with the wild prospect, and anxious to penetrate into a spot which gave such enjoyment.

The Bucktails were not the most tractable soldiers They came from the stepping off place—the Wilderness of Pennsylvania—McKean, Potter, Forest and Tioga counties—and they obtained their name, which clung to them during the entire war, through a fancy of Col. Kane, brother of the Arctic explorer, who became their commander. He recuited the regiment in the early part of 1861 (beginning on the day of the arrival of the news of the fall of Fort Sumpter) from the back woodsmen who were famous marksmen.—They were all deer hunters, and as a designation each man was furnished with the tail of a buck by Colonel Kane, and when they marched from Camp Curtin with bucktails in their caps it was a novel sight.

Col. Charles J. Bibble, of Philadelphia, was made the Colonel, and Col. Kane the Lieutenant-colonel of the regiment.—both men noted for their short, attenuated forms. Neither was scarcely more than five feet high, and their combined weight was less than two hundred and twenty pounds.

It may be readily guessed that these soldiers had little respect for Virginia aristocracy, and the tent pols had hardly got settled in the ground before a noted rider named—well, Smith—shouldered his deer killer and started out on a little expedition. He was a sergeant, and of immense size, and went by the name of 'The Big Sergeant.' He made a straight march for the old Virginian's manor. Now, the old gentleman had many pets about the ground and among them a tame crow which he valued very highly. He also had tame rabbits doves, etc. The sergeant climbed the stone wall, and dropped himself and his gun on the inside of the grounds. The first thing his eye struck was the tame crow, who unconcernedly flew near him, and alighted on a limb and began caw at him. The sergeant put his rifle to his shoulder and banged away, and Mr. Crow came fluttering to the ground. The soldier loaded his gun, leaned it against the wall, and went to get his game.

Instantly there came running from the house, in a high state of excitement, the old Virginian, and when he saw that his pet crow had been killed his rage had no bounds. He rushed for the sergeant's gun and, swearing that he would'nt have given the crow for the whole Yankee army, vowed that he would blow the soldier's brains out. With this he brought the the piece to a cock and glanced along the barrel. The sergeant begged for his life, and the Virginian swore that he would take it.

The Virginian finally thought of a compromise, and with a half look between amazement and rage, told the sergeant that he must eat the crow. In vain the other protested; the Virginian insited on the price of his adversary's life. So the sergeant pulled off feathers and began to gag and eat.

How do you like crow? hissed the Virginian through his teeth.

The only answer the other gave was to beg to be let off. He was sorry he had shot the crow; did'nt know it was a tame one, and he would'nt do such a thing again Finally the old man took the gun from its aim and told the sergeant he need't eat any more. His heart full of joy, the soldier threw the bird upon the ground and said:

Well, I kin eat crow, but I don't like it.

The story might stop here if it was only to show the origin of the phrase, but the rest of it is the best.

CHAPTER II.

The old Virginian, after surveying his dead pet for an instant in a sorrowful manner, returned the gun and started for his manshion. The other quickly brought his piece to his shoulder and called out:

Hold on there, Mister.

What do you want? asked the other, as he turned and beheld a 'bead' drawn on him.

I'd like to have you eat the rest of this crow.

The old man fumed and swore, and tore about in a frantic manner, saying he be would, d——d if he would, and that he did'nt want any of the young man's jokes. The cocking of the gun and the assurance on the part of the soldier that he would certainly put a ball through the old man's shoulder unless he complied, with the demand, induced the Virginian to retrace his steps. Now, said the sergeant, I want you to eat the rest of that crow, and no nonsense.

A punch of the rifle on the shoulder of the old man [illegible] him to a quick sense of his position, and picking [illegible] he undeavored to bite [illegible]. He grew pale, the prespiration stood upon his face, he trembled like a [illegible], his mouth watered, his eyes filled, he gagged, and it seemed a physical impossibility for him to touch the crow. The sergeant compelled him to take a bite and it was the only one he did take, for his breakfast came up so rapidly to protest [illegible] that the soldier relented and told him he [illegible] trouble a Bucktail again.

Here would seem to be another proper place to end this story, but there is still another chapter.

CHAPTER III.

The next day, the old Virginian, smarting under the indignities he had suffered in not only having his pet crow killed, but being compelled to eat a portion of it, went to the head quarters of the Bucktails and made complaint to the Colonel against the big sergeant. The Colonel at once sent an orderly for sergeant Smith, rightly supposing he must be the person referred to. He obeyed the summons at once. He pushed the door of the tent aside and entered the presence. Snapping his heels together and standing erect in the position of 'attention,' he brought his right hand quickly to the visor of his military cap, and gave the customary salute to his Colonel.

Sergeant, said his commander very gravely, 'do you known that gentleman, pointing to the old Virginian.

Yes, sir, promptly answered the other.

How did you become acquainted with him, sergeant?

We dined together yesterday, sir, answered the culprit.

The roar of laughter which followed this reply need not be described, nor the manner in which even the old Virginian joined. The sergeant was sent back to his quarters, and the interview between the old aristocrat and the Colonel was ended by an invitation to the latter to dine next day at the old mansion.

A wit once asked a peasant what part he performed in the great drama of life. I mind my own business, was the reply.

Mamma, said a wee pet, they sung 'I want to be an angel' in Sunday-school this morning, and I sung with them.

Why, Nelly, exclaimed mamy, could you keep time with the rest?

I guess I could, proudly answered little Nelly; I kept ahead of 'em most all the way through.

Sharp Shooting.

The following dialogue on sharp shooting took place between a Virginian and a Yankee picket:

I say can you fellows shoot?

Well I reckond we can some. Down in Mississippi we knock a bumble-bees eye out at three hundred yards:

Oh, that ain't nothing to the way we shoot up in Vermont. I belong to a military company up there of a hundred men, and we went out for practice every week. The cap'n draws us up in single file, and sets a cider barrel rolling down hill, and each man takes a shot at the bung hole as it turns up. It is afterwards examined and if there is a shot that did'nt go in the bung hole, the member who missed it is expelled. I belonged to the company ten years, and there ain't been nobody expelled yet.

Richness of the Soil in Michigan.

A man in Michigan gave me some idea of the richness of that soil. He said there was no place on earth where things grow as they do there. He said his wife never made bread. She always made little biscuit the size of an egg, and she would leave them an hour to swell by themselves and they would grow into twelve-pound loaves. I thought to myself, You are a loafer. He continued his growing tale, and said:

Once there was a man. He went into the woods and chopped down four trees.—He used the four stumps for corner posts and he buit him a nice log house on those stumps. Then he and his family went to bed in the house. The next morning he found himself and family up sixty feet in the air, with a lot of Indians down cellar waiting to cut their hair off, and the Indians did scalp the whole of 'em.

Stranger, said I, you don't mean to tell me that those trees grew sixty feet in one night.

Sir, I do, says he, and not only that, they hoisted the house up with 'em.

Are you sure it wasn't sixty-one feet? I asked.

Sir, said he, I never prevaricate, especially on one foot.

So they took and scalped 'em, all did they?

They did sir.

How, in the name of Mary who had the little lamb, did they get up to 'em? I asked.

Says he:

Respected sir, these Indians each one sawed off a tree; then each Indian sat on a stump, and these drew the Indians up to the house, and they scalped the family.

It certainly was the greatest case of up a tree I ever heard of.

Stranger, that story is pretty tough, but I believe it, because I know something about growing trees, and I know they grow darned fast, sometimes. My father had some good soil on his place; good soil for trees. He could'nt afford to keep a dog because there were so many young 'uns. He had to boil what bones was left to make soup for us. He had some trees, and in the place of a dog he kept some of the bark of those trees in the house to scare away robbers, because that bark would last all night. One day I used some of the wood to make some toothpicks, and as sure as sour allspice, those toothpicks grew so that next day I sold 'em for telegraph poles, and they had to be sawed in two before they could be used.

The stranger got up. Says I,

Where are you going?

Says he:

Good-day, sir.

Says I:

A correspondent gives a touching instance of insect: I found a cockroach wiggling in a bowl of water. I took a half peanut shell for a boat. He had a hair on the other toothpick, and there that cockroach sat a-fishing. The cockroach, exhausted, had gone to sleep. The sight melted me to tears.

Congressional Convention.

Pursuent to the call issued by the Chairman of the District Committee Hon. H. D. Wilson the Democracy and Liberal Republicans, of the 10th Congressional District of Indiana, met in Convention, at Columbia City on the 6th day of August 1872.

The Chairman of the District Committee being absent the Convention was called to order by Col. I. B. McDonald of Whitley County, in a few pertinent remarks. On motion J. A. S. Mitchell, Esq., of Goshen was chosen Chairman.

Upon taking the chair Mr. Mictholl addressed the Convention in an able and telling speech. He said that he saw before him men of both political parties, and that he recognized them as now joining hands and working together for one common end. The establishment of Reform Reconciliation and a pure and honest government; which glorious result could and would be brought about by the combined efforts of the honest men of the country.

On motiom J. A. Campbell, Esq., of Columbia City, was chosen Reading and Recording Secretary, and all the Democratic editors of the District Secretaries.

Upon motion the following gentlemen were selected as a Committee on Resolutions, one from each county.

DeKalb C. A. O. McClellan; Steuben, Geo. W. McConnel; Noble Dr. A. S. Parker; Lagrange, Dr. Griffith; Elkhart, W. W. McVitty; Kosciusko, W. S. Marshall; Whitley Eli W. Browh; Huntington, Gen. Jas. R. Slack.

Upon motion the several Counties, then selected the following Committee to select a Congressional Committee for the ensuing two years.

DeKalb, T. C. Mays.; Steuben, Wm. G. Croxston; Noble Henry C. Stanley; Lagrange, J. B. Wade; Elkhart W. C. Wilson; Koscinsko, Dr. F. M. Marshall; Whitley E. L. McLellan; Huntington Thos. Roach.

Upon motion it was then resolved that the names of candidates for Congress be announced, whereupon the names of Hon. E. V. Long of Kosciusko, and S. E Alvord of Noble were announced.

Convention then adjourned to 1 o clock, P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Convention assembled at 1 o'clock pursuant to adjournment. The Committee on Resolutions which were unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That we do hereby endorse and reaffirm the platform of principles adopted by the Cincinnati Liberal Convention of May 1st 1872, as explained in Greeley's letter of acceptance and also reindorsed by the National Democratic convention at Baltimore, and also the resolution of the late Convention at Indianapolis, adopted June 12th 1872; and that we hereby pledge our selves to carry out and make effective the same in their fullest and broadest application.

Resolved, That the Cincinnati Platform having submitted to the respective Congressional Districts the subject of the Tariff, we the Liberal Reform party of the Tenth Congressional District of Indiana, hereby declare that we are in favor of a Tariff for revenue only, and opposed to all discriminations whereby the necessaries of life are highly taxed for the benefit of a few monopolists at the expense of the tax payers and consumers of the country.

Resolved, That we hereby pledge our selves with unanimity to a cordial support of the National State and district nomination heretofore and to-day made by the Liberal Republicans and Democrats of the Union, State and District.

The Committee on selection of Congressional Committee reported the following names.

Kosciusko, W. S. Marshall; Steuben, Joseph Woodhull; Lagrange William Hill; Elkhart W. C. Wilson; Noble, O. D. Willett; Whitley, Theodore Reed; Huntington Wm. Hendricks; Dekalb, T. C. Mays.

Report accepted and approved.

Upon motion it was resolved that the first ballot on candidates for Congress be an informal one, which resulted as follows.

E. V Long..........82½
E. S. Alvord..........45½

Before announcing the informal vote Mr. Alvord withdrew. When upon motion Hon. E. V. Long, of Kosciusko county was declared the unanimous nominee of the Convention for Congress. Mr. Long was here called upon responded in a brief but happy effort accepting the nomination.

Upon motion it was then resolved that the Convention proceed to the nomination of an Elector for the 10th District. The following names were put in nomination. Gen. Milo S. Hascall and Dr. F. P. Griffith. The results of the Ballot for Elector stood as follows.

Gen. Milo S Hascall..........58
Dr. F. P Griffith..........60

Upon motion, the nomination of Mr. Hascall was made unanimous. And upon further motion Dr. F. P. Griffith was unanimously selected as Contingent Elector.

It was moved that the nomination of a Circuit Judge and a Circuit prosecutor for the 14th Judicial circuit be refered to the Congressional Committee this day selected, and to the Attorneys of the district. Caried.

Upon motion L. E. Goodwin, of No- [illegible]

19th Judicial district, and D. Y Husselman, of Dekalb county, District Prosecutor.

After passing Resolutions of thanks to the Chasrman for the able manner in which he presided; thanks to the citizens of Columbia City for their hospitality, and a request that the proceedings of the Convention be published in all the Liberal papers in the District and the Sentinel, Convetion then adjourned sine die.

Ten thousand loads of gravel have been deposited on a piece of road in Pittsfield, Mass., four rods in length, and as fast as it is put on, from some unexplained reason, it settles below the level of the road. The place was formerly a marsh, and the adjacent sides rise as the road settles.

The year seems to be a most unusually hot one everywhere. In India the heat has been intolerable, the themometer in stations like Secunderabad—a hot place always—making occasionally 107 deg., and 105 deg. for fifteen continuous days. In Paris old residents declare that they are grilling and can only live by bathing; from Brussels we hear of 95 deg. in the shade, and in London it has been 88 deg., while the water in the public baths, without any aid from furnaces, has been 76 deg.

'Isn't the butter good too?'

NOVEL SLINDLE—At a fair at Friburg a man tried on a pair of boots and put his old boots on one side. The right boot fitted excellently; the left however was a little to tight. The bargain lasted for sometime, when suddenly another man came up, and with the words, 'I have got you,' administered to the first comer a smart box on the ear, and forthwith darted off. To dash his foot into the boot and to pursue the purpetrator of this outrage, was for the new comer but the affair of a minute. To the bystanders and to the shomaker himself this behavior seemed the most natural thing in the world, and it was only when the shoemaker found that the man who wore the new boots did not return that he made the best of a bad bargain, and hung up the old pair of boots as a lasting warning for all future time.

Corn Biscuits.

One pint of corn flour; three pints of sweet milk, four eggs and a little salt. Bake in tin cups.

Cooking Beets.

Bake them; it requires about two hours to bake a medium sized beet.—Hardly any person will restore to the old method of boiling them after eating one meal of baked beets.

Boiling Meat.

All kinds of poultry and meat can be cooked quicker by adding to the quart of water in which they are boiled a little vinegar or a piece of lemon.—By the use of an acid there will be a considerable saving of fuel as well as shortening of time. Its action is beneficial on old tough meets, rendered them quite tender and easy to be digested.

Vegetables.

Potatoes are good with all meats.—With fowls they should be mashed.—Carrots parsnips, greens and cabbage, are eaten with boiled meats. Beets peas, and beans are appropriate with either boiled or roasted meats. Mashed turnips are good with roast pork.—Tomatoes are good with every kind of meat especially with roast. Apple sauce with roast pork. Cranberry or currens sauce with beef, fowls veal and ham. Currant jelly is used by many persons with roast mutton. Pickles are good with all kinds of roast meats and capers, or nasturtiums with boiled lamb or mutton. Horseradish and lemons are excellent with roast veal.

Sweet Milk.

A teaspoonful of fine salt or horse radish, in a pan of milk, will keep it sweet for several days. Milk can be kept a year or more as sweet as when taken from the cow by the following method. Procure bottles which must be perfectly sweet clean and dry, draw the milk from the cow into the bottles and as they are filled immeditaely cork them well, and fasten them with pack thread or wire. Then spread a little straw in the bottom of a boiler, on which place the bottles with straw between, until the boiler contains a sufficient quantity. Fill up with clean water, heat the water, and as soon as it begins to boil, draw the fire and let the whole gradually cool. When quite cool, take out the bottles and pack them in sawdust in hampers, and stow them away in the coolest part of the house.

Our Candidate for Congress.

The Democratic and Liberal Republican Candidate for Congress, Hon E. V. Long, is one of the very best selection that could have been made under the circumstances. He is a young man of acknowledged ability and as a public speaker has no superior in the district. He is an active worker. Believing in a civil service reform, we are proud to present him to the people as one capable and honest, knowing that he will discarge his duties accordly if elected. Those who stand on the principal of voting for the best man will vote for Long.

If any have been in doubt as to the real character of the "straight" movement in this county they must be satisfied by this time that, so far at least as its leaders are concerned, it is really a movement made in the interest of Gen Grant. Why is it that all the administration papers are publishing the call for the Convention at Louisville? They know that this convention, if they can make it a success, will materially assist them in electing Grant. Without this aid they are gone up. Will Democrats aid them in keeping in office one that is notoriously unfit for the position? We shall see.

Resolved, That while as law-abiding citizens we accept the amendments added to the Constitution by the party in power, we still condemn and hold as infamous the illegal manner by which their adoption was secured, and that we will not join hands to-day with the authors of that infamy in a paltry scramble for office.

The above is one of the resolutions adopted by the "straight" Democracy at Fort Wayne, last Saturday. It is very fine, so fine that it requires a pair of goggles to see the point. Its so generous and liberal too, that it will doubtless bring tears to the eyes of all who read it. It sounds as though Tom Morgan of Fort Wayne, wrote it. If so, the "Straights" should endorse it for Tom is a great man—in his own opinion.

If the Tribune philosopher had offered to take command of Sherman's army at Atlanta, Kilpatrick would have broken his sword in disgust; yet to-day he wants to put him in position as commander-in-chief of the American army to face even greater danger than ever threatened the nation before.

The above is from a Radical sheet published at Columbia City. It is the first paper to admit that it wants a military President to crush out all exhibitions of peace and friendship in the south, and tyranize over a handful of men who went with their State in the secession movement. But the beautiful allegory in the first is bent. Of course the general would have broken his sword because he would have known that the Philosopher was incapable. And now the General has broken his connection with the corruption party because he knows that Grant is incompetent. Grant, assuming a position he cannot fill no better than Greeley could that of General, has disgusted the people generally, and they are breaking their swords now, and intend going at him with their strong right arm, to hurl him from the high position he cannot fill.

Congressional Committee Meeting.

The Central Committee of this (tenth) Congressional district met at Goshen on Wednesday the 14th inst., W. S. Marshall, the Chairman of the Committee, presiding. On motion of W. C. Wilson, of Elkhard, J. R. Baker was chosen Secretary. Capt. Mitchel offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, The Democratic and Liberal Republican Convention, held at Columbia City on the 6th day of August, 1872, referred the subject of the nomination of a candidate for Judge of the 14th Judicial Circuit to the Central Committee, and

WHEREAS James I. Best is now a candidate for that position, and,

WHEREAS, It is belived by this Committee that the office of Judge should be kept from politics and political influences, and all candidates for Judicial positions should abstain from political and partisan controversies. Therefore,

Resolved, By this Committee, that no nomination be made for the offices of Circuit Judge.

On motion of W. C. Wilson, the selection of a candidate for Common Pleas Prosecutor was postponed till the next meeting. Several appointments were made for public speaking throughout the District, and the Committee adjourned to meet at Kendallville on the 27th of this month. It is desired that each member of the Committee and the members of the press of the district be present at all the conferences of the Committee.

The United States steamer Tallapoosa has just been employed by Robeson the jolly and dishonest Secretary of the Navy, to transport his horses and carriage to Portsmouth N. H., near which place he is reposing from his official labors in paying fraudulent claims.

The Tallapoosa is a public vessel belonging to the people and her expenses are paid by the Treasury of the United States; but Robeson uses her for his own private gratification and convenience.

The time required to make a voyage from Washington to Portsmouth is about 4 days. The Tallapoosa on this occasion stopped at New York in order that Secretary Robeson's horses might be taken on shore at the Navy Yard and driven around sufficiently to limber them after the confinement of the voyage from Washington. They were then taken on board again, and the vessel continued upon her mission.

The cost to the people of the United States of transporting Robeson's horses and carriage from Washington to his summer watering-place is about two thousand dollars.

If the people like this sort of thing, and wish to have it kept up, they will vote for U. S. Grant. If not they will not.

Still They Come.

Not one day has passed since the Cincinnati convention, says the Chicago Tribune, in which we have not had to announce the assession of new Republicans to Greeley. Yesterday we recorded the announcement of James Watson Webb, an old Seward journalist and politician, formerly editor of the Courier and Enquirer of New York and ex Minister to Brazil, under President Lincon; of Horatio King, of Maine ex-Postmaster. General under Buchanan, but a supporter of Grant in 1868; of ex-United States, Senator Stearns, of Minnesota; of Judge Viele, President of the first Republican State Convention of Iowa; of Hon. Samuel W. Moulton, ex-member of Congress, from Central Illinois, one of the Grant Elector in 1868, and one of the strongest public speakers in the State. He has been President of the State Board of Education since its organization, and also of the State Normal University, and has been identified with the Educational progressive interests of the State for thirty years.

Still Another.

Ex-Governor S. S. Harding, heretofore a stanch Republican, comes out in a long letter in favor of Greeley. We give the following extract from his letter:

I look on Mr. Greeley as being among the first of our great men. He has been compared to Franklin, the parallel will hold good with this exception, that Franklin was never President of the United states. What encouragement is found in the example of his life to the young men of America, especially the humblest class.—Trace his history from his boyhood to the present time, and we may discover the guerdon of his great success, in his habits of industry, his untiring pursuit after knowledge, temperance in all things, coupled with an unswerving honesty, that has stood proof against all temptation of evil. And yet this man who has laid the foundation of his popularity so deep in the confidence of his countrymen is made the butt of ridicule and cartoon by the supporters of President Grant. I saw in a late Harper's Weekley what was supposed perhaps, by the 'artist' a wonderful 'sharp thing,' with the story of Uncle Samuel. I thought what a pity it is that the great publishing house of the Harpers should be guilty of so flat and mean a thing.

And Still they Come.

Ex-United States Senator O. P. Stearns, formerly of Rochester, but now of Duluth, declares himself a Graaley man.

The venerable Judge Viele, who was President of the first Republican State Convention of Iowa, 16 years ago and who was an influential supporter of Grant in 1868, was last Wednesday night elected Chairman of the Greeley and Brown Club of this city, and accepted the position in an eloquent and energetic speech.

Greeley's Speech at Portland Me.

He had struggled throughout life for, first impartial and universal liberty second, for the unity and greatness of our common country; third, but by no means the least, when the former end was attained, for an early and harty reconciliation, peace and harmony among our countrymen. He recognized the propriety of a candidate for Presidency making no speeches, yet there is a truth to be uttered in behalf of those who placed me before the American people in my present attitude, which does them such honor, that I claim the privilege of stating it now. This truth is that no person has ever yet made the fact that he proposed to support or actually did support my nomination whether at Cincinnati or Baltimore or in action which resulted in sending delegates to either Convention the basis to claim for office. No one who was in favor of my nomination, before either Convention has sought office by my hand either for himself or someone else. Nor has ever anyone suggested to me that I might strengthen myself as a candidate by promising support to anyone to any important office whatever. In very few instances I am certain of the smaller fry of politicians have since my double nomination hinted to me, by letter that I may increase my chances by providing them a postoffice or some such place. To my voluntary correspondents respectively I have not usually responded, to these overtures but I now give general notice that should I be elected I will consider the claims of these untimely aspirants after those more modest and reticent shall have been fully satisfied. (Applause.) In two or three instances I have been asked to say whether I would or would not if elected confine my appointments to the Republicans. I answer those by pointing to that plank on the Cincinnati platform wherein all who concur in the principles therin set forth are cordially invited to participate for their establishment and vindication. I never yet heard of a man who invited his neighbors to raise a house preceeding to kick them out of it as soon as the roof was fairly over his head. For my own part I recognize every honest man who approves and adheres to the Cincinnati platform as my political brother, and as such fully entitled to my confidence and friendly regards.

One other point demands a word.—Those adverse to me ask what pledges I have given to those lately hostile to the Union to receive their favor and support. I answer that no man or woman in all the South has even asked of me whether, directly or through another, any other pledge than is given in all my acts and words. From the hour of Lee's surrender down to this moment no Southern man ever hinted to me an expectation, hope or wish that the rebel debt whether Confederate or State, should be assumed or paid by the Union. No Southern man who could be elected to the Legislature or made a colonel of a militia regiment ever suggested the pensioning of the rebel soldiers nor any of them even as a remote possibilty.—All who nominated me were perfectly aware that I had upheld and justified Federal legislation to repress the Ku-Klux conspiracy and outrages though I had long ago insisted as strenuously as I now do that complete amenest and genuine oblivion of the bloody and hateful past would do more for the suppression and utter exticision of such outrages that all forced bills of suspension of the habeas corpus ever devised by men. Wrong and crime must be suppressed and punished; but far wiser and nobler is a legislative policy by which they are prevented. From those who supported me in the South I have but one demand, justice; but one desire, reconciliation. They wish to be heartily united and at peace with the North on any terms which do not involve the surrender of their manhood. So long as they obey and uphold every law consistent with equality and right they desire a rule which alike for white and black, shall encourage industry and thrift, and in which I fully concur. Between the 5th of November and the 4th of March next quite a number of governors and other dignitaries, who, in the abused name of republicanism and loyalty, have for years been piling debts and taxes on their war-wasted States will follow the wholesome example of Bullock of Georgia and seek the shades of private life. The darker and darker those shades the better for themselves, and for mankind, and the hope that my election may hasten the much desired hygeria of thieving carpet-baggers has reconciled to the necessity of supporting me many who would otherwise have hesitated and probably refused.

Fellow-citizens, the deposed and partinily exiled Tammany ring has stolen about thirty millions from the city of New York. That was a most gigantic robbery, but it hurled its contrivers and abetters from power and splendor to infamy. But the thirsty carpet baggers have stolen at least three times that amount, stolen it from the already impoverished and needy. They still found their prosperous villainy in the highest place in the land, and are addressed as honorable and excellency.—(Applause.)

I think I hear a voice from the honest people of the States ordering that their iniquity shall be insolent no longer at the farthest till the 4th of March next. By that time those criminals will have heard of the national verdict pronounced that will cause them to fold their tents like Arabs, and as silently steal away. That I trust, will be the end of their stealing at the cost of the good of our country and the well being of our people.

January—"Boss' Tweed, the great Democratic Tammany thief.

June—"Boss" Tweed, the great Tammany leader."

This is the way our Radical friends spoke of Tweed; a few weeks ago.

This is the way they speak of him now.

August—"The Hon. William M. Tweed, of New York."

He has joined the Grant dynasty.—Anything to beat Grant.

Tom Murphy, of Grant-Cottage notoriety will be a candidate for Congress this fall in one of the New York city districts. Tom understands 'addition, division and silence.'

"The Great Conspiracy."

Under the above heading the radical papers and speakers are cackling over the discovery of a tremendous mares nest, and are trying to make the people believe that Horace Greeley is in league with Southern politicians to pay the rebel debt, and give pensions to the rebel soldiers. The trifling fact that the Constitution of the United States forbids these things is not taken into account by them, they are so in the habit of violating that instrument themselves that they do not appreciate its binding obligation upon others.

This whole 'mares nest' is a scare and a fiction, and rests for its only support upon the affidavit of one C. S. Carpenter of Oneonta, N. Y. to the effect that he had seen letters from Greeley to one Carmichael, stating that he (Greeley) would favor the payment of pensions to the rebel soldiers. This affidavit was obtained by fraud and misrepresentation, and a few days after it was made, Mr. Carpenter made and published the following statement concerning it:

MR. P. B. ROGERS—Dear Sir:—There appeared in the Binghamton Daily Republican of July 19th an affidavit made by Carpenter, stating, among other things, that I had seen a letter written by Horace Greeley, of N. Y., to Lewis Carmichael, of Unadilla, in which letter Mr. Greeley said he favored the pensioning of Southern disabled soldiers, &c. The last time I talked with Carmichael in relation to Greeley and political matters was no later than Nov. 15, 1871. Several gentlemen residing in Unadilla, of unquestioned integrity, who have seen all of Carmichael's letters from Greeley, inform me that no such letter was written by Mr. Greeley; therefore I conclude I may be mistaken, and that my impression of the purport of the letters was obtained from Carmichael personally, in stating what he had written to Mr. Greeley, or intended to write. At the time of Carmichael's visits to the Herald office, I did not regard the matter he was working up as possible, and gave but little attention. I make this statement thinking I may be mistaken and hope for a public production of the whole correspondence between Carmichael and Greeley, until which time I retract the statement made in my affidavit?

"C. S. CARPENTER.

"Binghamton, July 24, 1872.

We presume not one of the Radical sheets, many of which profess to guided by the principles of justice and religion, will publish this retraction, but will give the utmost publicity to the original statement of Carpenter. Mr. Greeley's reputation is too well established to be at all affected by any such humbug and political trickery. Not one of the radical editors who are giving publicity to these foolish charges believe a single word of it, and the slanders fall harmless to the ground.

Drunkenness in Politics.

The statement that Gov. Brown of Missouri, who is running for Vice-President along with Horace Greeley, was drunk when he was recently in New Haven, is efficiently refuted! Gov Brown himself repels the accusation.—Gov. English who was with him all the time that he was in New Haven emphatically confirms the denial. So does Capt. Richard Peck; and the clerk of the hotel where Gov. Brown lodged, also joins in the contradiction.

On the other hand nobody comes up to deny the assertion that since he had been President Gen. Grant has been repeatedly verry drunk both in public and in private. There is also authoritative statement that he has been disgustingly so during his recent excursion to the Thousand Islands and especially when he was at Ogdensburg. The fact is that Gen. Grant, though in the army he was habitually temperate cannot overcome his passions for liquor and every month or so he has to set the example of getting very drunk indeed. One gentleman who was present at the time of Presidnt Grants famous visit to Senator Cameron when they all went trout fishing, has stated that on that occasion they all got drunk as fools, the President being about the drunkest of the lot. In fact it is impossible for any friend of President Grant to dispute the fact that he was originally compelled to leave the army because he was a habitual drunkard or that afterward at St. Louis and Galena he indulged in the same habit. After he began his active campaigs in the field he endeavored to stop drinking; but though to a considerable extent he then experienced a reform, he has never been able so far to conquer his appetite as to getting drunk altogether and permanent.

The Laporte Herald, a Republican paper, speaking of Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks last week says:

In the downward tendancy of public morals, every good man ought to give his influence to truth and right, as against falsehood and wrong. Mr. Hendricks has the reputation of being a man of truth, and is, I believe, a member of one of the leading churches of the land. The Argus of Aug. 8th bears testimony to his good qualities in the following manner: "He is a ripe scholar, a profound thinker, and a sober stright-forward, upright gentleman * * There is not a stain to be found upon his public record * * If ever a party had reasons for feeling proud of its leader, certainly the Democrats and Liberals of Indiana to-day have a just reason to be prowd." People are likely to be pleased with that which strikes the cords of sympathy in their own being. The pure in mind love purity, while the vulgar and licentious love the opposite. (Morton for instance)

The Radicals of Fort Wayne indulged in a torch light procession and tried to "enthuse the crowd on Saturday evening, to celebrate the election in North Carolina. Since the Gazette is fond of asking questions,—though it has refrained for the last few days,—we should like to profound the following.

Did the local Radicals celebrate the North Carolina election because the Liberals admitted beforehand that it would go for Grant?

Or did they celebrate it because Grant carried it this time by about 12,000 or 15,000 less than he did in 1868.

Or did they celebrate it because the Democrats gained a United States Senator; in place of the disreputible Radical Poole?

Or did they celebrate it because one Rutherford an official in the treasury Department, went into North Carolina took charge of the polls in his voting precinct, and, consequently brought in some 1,000 or more votes than had ever been cast there before.

Or did they celebrate it because the Administration waited until it was discovered how many votes were needed and then brought them in?

Or did they celebrate because negro voters were brought there from South Carolina and Virginia to hep out?

—Ft. Wayne Sentinel.

Schuyler Colfax administered a severe but well-deserved rebuke to Senator Morton in his South Bend speech, when he declared that he never indulged in personal invective against his opponents, and that he never used the word 'copperhead' in the hundreds of speeches he made during the war.—This severe rebuke to Senator Morton who had just concluded a vituperative speech against the Democrats must have cut the War Governor to the quick.—Ex.

No it did'nt. He has'nt got any. You understand.

The recent defection of General Banks from the Grant cause is only an indication to many others, who will ere long declare on the same side. Senator Sumner says he has the namse of quite a number of prominent Repuplicans in Massachusetts, which at present he does not care about announcing. They will all be heard of in good time.

—The prediction that this little world upon the crust of which we are clingingwould be knocked into pi by the tail of Plantamour's comit has proved a failure. Many of our Republican friends no doubt feel disappointed as had the prediction been verified, it would have spared them the bitter humiliation of voting for the man who is sure to be defeated.

Grant carried North Carolina, in 1868 by a majority of 7262 and in 1872 the Democracy and Liberals have elected 5 out of 8 Congressmen a large majority on joint ballot in the Legislature and a United States Senator.—And yet the Grant Rebeblicans seem happy. But it is the happiness of the midnight walker through the graveyard.

* * *

The North Carolin election instead of being a magnificient victory for the Grant party has turned out a defeat.—The returns are not all in but enough is known to warrant the statement that the administration has sustained an inglorious defeat.

* * *

The Aurora Volksfreund, a Republican paper, and the only German paper in Fourth Illinois District, puts up the Greeley flag.

Senator Rice of Arkansas, says that more than 5,000 colored men in that State have joined Greeley clubs.

Grant had 46,000 majority in Iowa in 1868. No Iowa Republican dare wager that he will have above twenty thousand.

In Boston the Post, Herald, Times, Express Courier and Gazette are Liberal.

We give it up. Grant has forty-five relatives, but Greeley has millions. He is 'Uncle' Horace to four million voters.

Efforts are now being made to revive the Freedmen's beauro swindle and establish offices in every Southern State so as to help control Grant votes.—The people will be taxed millions to carry out this scheme.

Grant papers can't call Judge Black a sore-heap. On the cautrary the Buffalo Express admits.

'Judge Black of Pennsylvania, is a man of ability and has a national reputation."

VINEGAR BITTERS

PURELY VEGETABLE FREE FROM ALCOHOL
DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
VINEGAR BITTERS

Vinegar Bitters are not a vile Fancy Drink, made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced, and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the native roots and herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the Great Blood Purifier and a Life-giving Principle, a Perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition, enriching it, refreshing and invigorating both mind and body. They are easy of administration, prompt in their action, certain in their results, safe and reliable in all forms of disease.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist: There is scarcely an individual on the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics, will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS twice a week.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc., etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters act on all these cases in a similar manner. By purifying the Blood they remove the cause, and by resolving away the effects of the inflammation (the tubercular deposits) the affected parts receive health, and a permanent cure is effected.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

The Aperient and mild Laxative properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are the best safe-guard in cases of eruptions and malignant fevers, their balsamic, healing, and soothing properties protect the humors of the fauces. Their Sedative properties allay pain in the nervous system, stomach, and bowels, either from inflammation, wind, colic, cramps, etc.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Directions.—Take of the Bitters on going to bed at night from a half to one and one-half wine-glassfull. Eat good nourishing food, such as beef-steak, mutton chop, venison, roast beef, and vegetables, and take out-door exercise. They are composed of purely vegetable ingredients, and contain no spirit.

OFFICIAL PAPER of the COUNTY

Local and Miscellaneous.

MATCHES are plenty. So are billious attacks.

THE school here, at present, is doing splendid.

Look at the Fruit House advertisement this week.

Business, this week, has been extraordinary good.

Copious showers of rain have fallen within the last ten days.

THE "Gaunt Club" marched three squares last night and adjourned.

Go to Smith & Hare's for queensware.

THERE are evidences of thrift and prosperity in every part of our town.

WE notice Hank Long, of the Kendallvill Standard, in town this week.

C. P. Houser, Esq., takes charge of the Spencerville school in a few days.

A gentleman from this place is going to start the Corunna hotel again, in a week or two.

MR. PICKER has sent abroad for bricklayers, in order to supply the demands of buildings going up.

Most anything you wish, in the notion line, can be had at the store, in the Post-office building.

MRS. MATHEWS, mother of Vice-President Colfax died Sunday, Aug. 11th, at South Bend.

SMITH & HARE has the best and cheapest groceries in town.

PROF. L. L. HAMLIN has taken charge of the Butler Union School. The present term opened last Monday.

IRA CROW, slipped up quietly and caught a young crow, the other morning, while rosting on a fence by his residence.

HAS the Goshen Democrat an extra paper that they could possibly send to this office. We haven't seen a copy for a month.

THE public will, no doubt, be gratified to know that the great Barnum will pitch the tents of his monster exhibition at Ft. Wayne next month.

A notice of Letting will be found in another column for the construction of a stone gutter on Main street. Let it be done immediately.

TURN out to the grand party to be given at the Sedan Hotel on Friday this week — Preparations have been made to make it far superior to any dance ever given in the place.

THE best chewing tobacco in the place can be found at Smith & Hare's grocery.

The Democracy of DeKalb County held their convention last week, placing in nomination a most excellent county ticket The utmost harmony and good feeling prevailed.—Col. City Post.

THE demand for livery, on Sundays, is frightful. Two of our 'gay boys' went to Waterloo last Sunday and got a "one-horse rig." We wonder if they missed the train in the evening.

AUCTION.—S. Lauferty will offer his entire stock of dry goods at auction, during the present week. He intends to open an exclusive clothing trade, and now offers his present stock at auction.

When you go to Fort Wayne to buy clothing ask for one of our price list before you purchase your goods, and get posted on prices and not be cheated by outsiders. No. 5 Keystone block.

WE learn that the "Tobblers and Conders," of Waterloo, made a grand parade last Saturday night, there being all the way up as high as thirty, among whom were some ten voters. Balance, Children.

THE Odd Fellows Hall building has advanced to the second story, and at the present rate the brick work will soon be finished. The Messrs. Picker are doing a good job of work and the building when finished will be a model one.

Everybody that goes to Fort Wayne should not fail to call at the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone block, and see the largest stock of clothing in the city. It has all been bought for cash before the late advance of wool.

DON'T forget that Bill, over John Hebel's, can give you a splendid shave and do it up quick.

Laporte Heefner, County Clerk of Elkhart county, has purchased an interest in the Goshen Democrat, and will assist Billy Beal in conducting that paper. Mr. Heefner is a pleasant gentleman and a writer of ability, and we welcome him to the corps editorial.

Hon. Geo. W. Julian, the great Liberal Republican statesman of Indiana, will speak in Angola, Thursday, Aug. 29th at 1 o'clock p. m. He will be received by a large crowd. Half fare trains will be run Spread the news and get out your neighbors.

A TRAIN of seven cars, of excursionist went through on the Eel River road from Indianapolis, last Tuesday. Among the excursionist were the Board of Trade, of that city and Cincinnati. They go Niagra Falls and Buffalo.

THE Rads now admit that they have been slightly beaten in North Carolina.—From the report of frauds coming in, there is no doubt but that Merrimon will be declared the next Govenor. We also gained one Congressman and a largely increased majority in the Legislature.

Three dollars and thirty cents worth of new music can be had for thirty cents by sending for the August number of Peters' Musical Monthly. Five back numbers will be mailed post-paid on receipt of one dollar. Address J. L. Peters, 599 Broadway, N. Y.

Gen. M. S. Hascall

Candidate for Presidential Elector for the Tenth District, will address the people as follows:

Angola, Tuesday, Aug. 27.
Orland, Wednesday, Aug. 28.
Waterloo, Thursday, Aug. 29.

SOLDIER'S REUNION.—The 429th Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry will have their anual reunion at Kendallville. Ind., on the 29th day of August. A good time is anticipated, and members of all Indiana regiments and batteries are cordially invited to be present.

Col. C. C. CASE, President,
Capt. JAS. HARPER, Sec'y.

MR. GEO. ENSLY informs us that he has just laid out another addition to the town, south-west of his residence. The new addition contains about twenty five lots, all finely located on an elevation, making them quite desirable for building purposes. Those who want a cheap lot in a good locality should apply soon.

MUSICAL.—A musical society was organized at the Presbyterian church last Monday evening, in the name of the Auburn Chorel Union. The object is to advance the musical interest in our midst, by thorough practice. Those who sign the constitution and pay the usual fee, will become members. All lovers of music should attend.

MR. ADAMS, of Corunna, informs us that the political sky at that place is clear and promising, and all feel confident of good results. Let this be the case everywhere. Work and organize to overthrow this vast army of Radical office holders, who are now stealing you blind. Let their be a united effort all around and we shall be more than victorious.

THE Ensly block is progressing favorably. This consists of three business rooms 3 stories high, 80 feet in length, front south on Seventh-st., and adjoining the Odd Fellows' building on the west. No improvement that has yet been made will add so much to our place as this will be when completed. It will be by far the best and most expensive block of buildings in the county.

Hon. Wm. Williams, is winning golden opinions as a popular and effective speaker, in the southern part of the State, at each and all of his appointments. His nomination for Congressman-at-Large is conceded by all to have been just the right thing.—Ind anian.

Certainly. He was chosen over an old soldier. Such men are always acceptable to the Rads.

Reliable intelligence from Detrit indicates that the Democrats of Michigan will send a large delegation to the Louisville Convention.—Chicago Journal.

A mere substitution of the word 'Republicans' for 'Democrats' will give the item more truth. It is the Grant men who are engineering the Convention.—Free Press.

On the same principle, we suppose that Gen. Blair and Moon, and a few more Rads from this district will be in attendance.

THE RACES.—Don't forget that a grand time is to be had at Columbia City, next week. We are told that quite a number of fine horses will be in attendence—several that make their mile away down in the twenties. The Driving Park is the best in the country, with a very fine track The races will commence on Wednesday for premiums of $2,500. Half fare on the railroad.

NEW ARRIVAL.—C. S. Hare, our popular boot and shoe merchant, has just received about seventy-five cases of boots and shoes, from the east, and has this immense stock ready for the inspection of his numerous customers. Many of these have been manufactured to his order, and will meet with the wants of our people generally.—By all means go and see the new goods, in the brick block.

Messrs. Rickel & Moody have dissolved their law partnership, and each will now be found conducting the business seperately. We are glad to know that they prospered as a firm, and have individually bright prospects for the future, Knowing them to be possessed of the requisite ability, and learning to meet with success they have naught to do but wait patiently for the arrival of greatness and wealth and pray that it may be abundant.

OUR town has caught the infection.—Some of the small boys want to organize a Grant club. We heard a tramping in Case's hall the other night, that sounded like marching, perhaps they were only home guards. The fact is our friends are getting desperate and they are determined to make a show of some kind to keep the disaffection from spreading in their ranks. They are like the boy that had to whistle to keep his courage up. Mighty hard work, though.

HANK WOLF will conduct his barber shop alone, as Billy Latson has gone to shoemaking. Give Hank a call.

NUISANCES!

We would call the attention of the proper offices to this word, the things and persons termed nuisances.

Now, there are several kinds—some are persons, some are things—some are animate, some inanimate, some local, some transient, some mortal, some immortal.—Some can be abated, some cannot.

We have a few of them in our town that can be abated, if law and duty are carried out. We have a Court House built at the expense of the people of the county, a county public square for the benefit of the whole county, occupied by the public officers. The whole of that building, except the offices of the public officers are open day and night, and scandalously abused by ruffins and marandus loafers and gophers, and no one seemes to pay the least bit of attention to it. The fence is broken down, hogs and cattle roam at large in the public square, wood scattered and rotting, and all conceivable trash and filth lying around to annoy and infect the public. Why is it? It is a shame, a burning shame, to our town and people, to have our public buildings and grounds go to rack, and in such a miserable, filthy and loathsome condition.—Why, a farmer's barn yard, that did not cost one hundredth part, would be kept in better condition. Shame on the man who has control of these matters, and will not do his duty. We blame not the Commissioners, for we are informed that every bill for any such purposes has always been readily and freely paid.

ANOTHER NUISANCE.

This lies along the entire west side of the public square, and immediately in front of the two main business blocks in town. Waters by rain and the town pump flow each way from 8th street, which is a summit. The wallowing of hogs, the hitching of horses, have during this wet, warm weather produced a mud-hole along the entire side of the square, and whenever a hog or horse happens to stir it up, the stench is intollerable—in fact, were a yellow dog to live long enough near it, he could walk across on the green scum that collects on its surface. It has already cost the citizens more of suffering, sickness and expense, than it would to place a good substantial stone gutter along its entire length. Was such a nuisance to be erected by a private individual in the county every doctor and person would swear that it would infect the neighborhood for miles, and the man creating it would barely escape lynching. Now, who is to blame for this? Every part of our town has good drainage, and is improved. Hundreds of dollars are yearly expended to hunt up hogs, and other matters of small import, but here an eye sore to community, a disgrace to our town an element of disease and death, is permitted—which is seen, smelt and felt by all, and permitted by our town authorities to continue and increase, and nothing is being done. For shame on such official conduct. Why do you not do your duty, or resign and make way for some who will. Instead of being a disgrace to our town and yourselves resign or go to work.

ANOTHER.

Is not there one in the south part part of town that needs routing up? Should not the inmates all be sent to jail and every miserable wretch who frequents the place be compelled to testify as to what he knows, or leave the place. The citizens have withstood these outrages and nuisances long enough, and should there be an outbreak some night or day and serious results happen, no one will be to blame but the officials of our town, "who knew their duty but did it not."

Personally we have nothing against the officials spoken of, but we will condemn their official conduct whenever the public require, and they violate the law and their duty.

GONE EAST.—E. E. Williams, of the firm of Wood & Williams, the live, wide awake dry goods merchants, now occupying Case's old stand, has gone east to purchase a full fall and winter stock. To say that it will be large, varied and extensive is to assert that which will be found true on the arrival of the goods, which are expected in a few days. They have added a new feature to the dry goods trade by keeping a fine assortment of beautiful dress goods which cannot be found at any other place in town except at Ralston's. No shoddy or second handed goods at cheap prices, but good goods at a living price.

SINKING OF THE R. R. TRACK.—Last Saturday trains on the Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw Railroad were detained, owing to a bad sink of the track between Summit and Pleasant Lake. We learn that directly after the down express passed over the spot they discovered the track sinking, a space of several hundred feet in length going down some eight feet below the grade. Work was commenced to fill it up immediately but it sank again by Sunday morning about the same distance. Passengers and baggage were transferred across the brake and trains have been running to and from the break on each side. These sink holes have been rather expensive, and this seems to be an entirely new one. It is thought that an under current exists connecting with the lakes, and it is hard to find bottom to any of them.

Lippincot's Magazine, for September, is at hand. It contains many interesting articles. It also has a good deal to say about the political campaign. The political writer seems to be well versed in words, perhaps much more so than he is in regard to facts.

A PARTY of "roosters" started last Sunday for camp meeting, well supplied with "hymns," and other necessaries that are required for such occasions. On arriving at the camp ground they found, to their sorrow, that the meeting had been abjourned three or four days previous. The boys then arranged a little camp of their own, as follows: Bill camped on the Corunna bridge, with a death grasp to the banister; Dave camped under the Post-office awning, and for two hours did'nt care "whether school kept or not;" Tom. camped in a place unknown, and the driver of the conveyance spent all of his time gathering together his dear brothers. They reached home in the evening about 8 o'clock, showing every evidence that sorrow had crossed their brow.

THE Baptist church is just about completed, and gives a finer appearance than any other structure, of this kind, in the place.

THE postoffice at Glasgow, Missouri, has been locked up. The Grant postmaster got the Greeley fever, and as his resignation was not accepted, he concluded to "let the old thing run herself."

If postmasters and other office holders generally could be assured of Greeley's election there would be quite a number of resignations. Many are undecided now and may fire the sinking ship in time to save themselves.

Indications of Liberalism are rapidly increasing and among other things the circulation of Liberal papers form a pretty good index of the drift of popular feeling. Last week, without an effort, one hundred and twenty copies of the Chicago Tribune were subscribed for by the employees of the Singer Manufacturing Company. It may be safely relied on that the vote of the mechanics of this city will not be 'solid for the Gift Taker' this year.—South Bend Union.

Baxter, of the Waterloo Press, and Freeman Kelly, a candidate on the Democratic county ticket, had a little "discussion with fist," at Waterloo, a few days ago.—Bystanders interfered, or 'one Democrat would have got 'cleaned out,' before election.—Standard.

From truthful Meyers. We will be perfectly satisfied if Kelly has as easy a job at election as he had in his hands the other day. But its wonderful to see how bold these Rads are when they are a good peace off.

THE Eagle Flouring mill is doing a good business under the efficient management of the new firm, Thomas & Elson. Since they have taken charge over five hundred barrels of flour have been shipped east, besides the large home patronage which has been supplied, and their large list of grist customers. We like to hear of our manufactories being prosperous. Their prosperity contributes largely to the prosperity of the town. Let a few more be established and our town will grow in size and importance.

There are no diseases of the urino-genital organs, be what they may, but what can be expelled from the system by Smolander's Buchu. Aggravated cases of kidney, bladder and glandular diseases, mental and physical debility, diabetes, gravel and femal irregularities readily succumb by an occasional dose of this extraordinary medicine. In a word, it restores health to the human frame.

THE Nebraska State Fair will be held this year at Lincoln, the capital of the State, situated on the Burlington & Missouri River Railroad, from September 3d to September 7th. Every arrangement has been effected, for making it a great success, and procuring a thorough exhibition of the products and resources of the State.

No better opportunity will ever be had for obtaining a correct idea of the country and its products, and for examining the lands of the B. & M. R. R., U. P. R. R., and the government lands still open to Homesteads and Pre-emptions.

Tickets will be sold by the Burlington route and connections, from Indianapolis, Chicago, Peoria and Burlington, to Lincoln and return, on September 3d and 4th at half rates, good to go and come for two weeks. People wishing further particulars can address, A. E. Touzlin, General Pass Agent, B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

Morton spoke in Kendallville last Wednesday night, in order to get the crowd away from Hendricks who spoke in the afternoon. A meeting was gotten up, however, to offset Morton, and though Morton had the most women and children to hear him, Hendricks was far ahead on voters, as he will be in the election.—AUBURN COURIER.

That 'meeting gotten up to offset Morton," wasn't a success, as far as heard from. At least the Democrats here were "mighty cross," next morning, and the amount of cuss words used would have done honor to Horace Greeley, in his palm lest days.—Standard.

If there were any hard feelings next morning it was because of the discourtesy of the Rads in trying to reap the benefit of a crowd for Morton, after it had been gathered for Hendricks. In other words Hendricks drew the crowd, and Morton tried to monopolize it. He had the most of the crowd, but he did not have the most of the voters. At Indianapolis the Rads brought in a speaker to injure Carl Shurts, but they were properly punished by its being a failure. The discourtesy of the Rads in politics is becoming notorious They are resorting to any means as a last chance, and are becoming desperate.

Lots of people that have never been in Fort Wayne and are not acquainted can find the Red Front clothing hall, No. 5, Keystone block. Any woman or child can find this place, and you will save from 20 to 25 cents on each dollar.

If you want the worth of your money, be treated by gentlemanly clerks, and not be asked for goods three times more than they are worth, go to the Red Front clothing hall, No. 5. Keystone block, Fort Wayne.

Everybody that goes to Fort Wayne should not fail to call at the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone block, and see the largest stock of clothing in the city. It has all been bought for cash before the late advance of wool.

MR. DRY HOUGHTON, has made seme valuable improvements on his property. He intends to erect a fine residence next spring, which will add largely to that locality.

THE social, at the residence of Mr. Rush, was well attended and every one present enjoyed themselves hugely. The entertainment was opened with "snap-and-catch-'em."

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given to the owners or part owners of lots numbered 43, 44, 113, 114, 115, 116, 67 and 72 on Van Buren-st. and lots numbered 152 on 4th-st., be notified that unless they plank so much of the sidewalk as lies fronting their respective lots or part lots, within thirty days of such notice the marshal shall proceed to advertise and let the same to the lowest bidder, the expense of which shall be charged against the respective lots.

By order of board.

Parton's Life of Greeley.

This is one of the most notable books of the times, and decidedly one of the best written and remarkably interesting of American biographies. We do not propose to review it from a political standpoint, for it is not designed as a mere campaign book, but a work of standard value from the pen of a writer of established reputation, whose biographies of eminent Americans, are well known and highly valued. Mr. Parton's writings are all attractive on account of the care he exercises in collecting incidents, and the ingenuity with which he waves them into the story of a life, to relieve the tedium of dry facts and monotinous narration.

Such a work cannot be reviewed in the compass of an ordinary book notice, and it is therefore best to simply inform the reader, that it was commenced several years ago, before Mr. Greeley was thought of as a presidential candidate, and faithfully written as one volume in the series of Parton biographies, simply for its general interest and intimate connection with the history of the country, for near half a century. Commencing with his birth, and following him through all the vicissitudes of early years of trial and adversity, the school which developed the wonderful power that marks his riper years and carried him forward to the time when the people honored him with the nomination for the highest place in our land. Not written in the interest Party, it is a full and Impartial History, entirely free from partisan bias, and worthy a place in every library in the land. As a book of reference, a guide to young men and an incentive to renewed activity for every aspiring mind.

The volume is a large duodecimo, elegantly bound and appropalately illustrated, and is sold through the canvassing agents of Jones Brothers & Co., Chicago, at two dollars. All things considered, old all anpitical predilections aside, it appears to us one of the best, most generally desirable, and cheapest books of the year.

Our Tea Trade is continually on the increase. We now sell two or three chests a day. Our large purchases of two hundred chests at a time direct from the importers, is the reason we can undersell all others, as there is no intermediate profits of the jobber, speculater and wholesale house to eat it up. Our Teas go direct into the consumers' hands, at a small profit. No charge for trying any quality.

The Peace Reunion.

Arrangements for a national reunion at the falls of the Ohio river are at length set on foot; and organization has been effected; working committees have been appointed; the 11th and 12th of September have been chosen as the time, and there is no reason to doubt that the proposed peace-meeting will be [illegible]. Kentucky and Indiana, represented directly by Louisville, Jeffersonville and New Albany, will do their part. The season and the point are propitious. No stint of money in the equipment, and no lack of wormth in the welcome, will mark this honest effort to revive old-time memories, sentiments and associations.

Carl Schurz and John Quincy Adams, Emerson Etheridge and Ben Hill, Charles Sumner and Austin Blair, Lyman Trumbull and Horatio Seymour, Hendricks, Voorhe's Doolittle, Vance, Bradley Johnston, Groesbeck, Walker of Virginia, and many others eminent in the North and south will be present.

We hope the Liberal press will everywhere aid us in giving the occasion universality and significance. It is our design to make it simply, old-fashioned and hearty. It is our wish to have it represent the spirit of hospitality and peace which marked the ancient era of sectional good-will, when there was a union of hearts no less than of States. The time for such a revival has come, and we shall provide the means—Courier Journal.

Grreeley and Jeff Davis.

The only important event of Mr. Greeley's political life concerning which the Grant party profess that he acted disloyally. was his signing the bail bond of Jeff. Davis, along with Gerrit Smith, at Richmond, in May. 1867. Mr. Greeley has nevee repented of this act: on the contrary has always avowed his willingness to accept all the consequences.

But Mr. Greeley was anticipated in even this act by Mr. Henry Wilson the candidate for the Grant party for Vice-President. That gentleman on the 22d of March, 1867, introduced the following joint resolution in the Senate of the United States:

Whereas, Jefferson Davis, a citizen of the State of Mississippi, was captured by a military force in the service of the United States on the 11th day of May, 1865. and was held in confinement as a prisoner of war and prisoner of state in Fortress Monroe, Virginia; and

Whereas, The said Jefferson Davis stands charged on the highest authority with the heinous crime of conspiracy to murder the late president of the United States, Abraham Lincoln, and is also indicted for treason; and;

Whereas, The said Jefferson Davis has persistently declared his innocence of the offences charged against him, and, through his legal advisers by all means known to the law has sought and demanded a speedy and public trial by due process of law before a civil tribunal of competent jurisdiction; therefore

Resolved, By the Senate and House of Representatives concurring: That the longer confinement of the said Jeff Davis without a trial or the assignment of a specific time for a trial is not in accordance with the demands of justice, the spirit of the laws, and the requirements of the constitution; and that common justice, sound public policy and the national honor unite in recommending that the said Jefferson Davis be brought to a speedy and public trial, or that he be released from confinement on bail on his own recognizance.

The act of Mr. Greeley, in going bail for Jeff. Davis was demanded in the language of Henry Wilson, by "common justice, sound public policy, and the national honor." When these Grantites yell about Greeley's bailing Jeff. Davis, let them read, in this resolution of Henry Wilson's, that Greeley and Smith were prompted by the demands of 'national honor' and of 'common justice.'

Mr. Greeley's bond was in the sum of $100,000. He stands pledged to this day in the sum of $100,000 that Jeff. Davis shall appear and stand trial when called for. Which one of his accusers has furnished better security, or more of it, that Jeff. shall be forthcoming when wanted for this purpose? If Grant party want try Jeff., why don't they call for him and declare Greeley's bond forfeited if he don't appear?

If you let the cat out of the bag, never try to cram it back again, it only makes matters worse.

'What's the use,' asked an idol fellow, 'of a man's working himself to death to get a living?'

A Horrible fly.—One of the most extraordinary facts revealed to us by Dr. Livingstone's exploration in Africa is that the high table land of the interior with its rich agricultural resources, its noble flora, its fine temperature, broad inland seas, and inexhaustible stores of mineral wealth, is rendered all but impenetrable to civilized men, certainly beyond all reach of colonization by one ot the most apparrently insignificant of causes, a fly. This terrible insect is a little brown, yellow-striped fly, called the tsetze, scarcely larger than our common household pests, but whose sting is absolutely fatal. So deadly is its poison that it is said three or four flies will kill the largest ox.—Soon after the bite which gives little or no pain, staggering and blindness comes on; the body swells to an enormous size; the coat turns rough, and in a few hours follow convulsions and death. And yet this deadly poison, under the effect of which the horse and ox, the sheep and the dog fall as if plague-stricken, is perfectly harmless to man, to wild animals, to the pig, mule, ass and goat. Here is an achievement of science that would bring glory to the discovery—the discovery of some antidote to the sting of this venomous fly which would open up the treasury of Central Africa to the use of the world.

Grover & Baker's
Sewing
Machine
IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and sti, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

IT
Puffs, Ruffles, Plaits, Braids, Tucks, Fells, Hems, Frills, Quilts, Cords, Gathers,

VOLLMER'S Elixir of PYROPHOSPHATE OF IRON AND PERUVIAN BARK.
In this preparation are combined the valuable properties and virtues of Peruvian Bark, with Phosphorous and Iron, in the shape of Pyrophosphate of Iron. This Elixir will be found of great advantage in Dyspepsia, Indigestion, weak and delicate Stomachs, and generally in weak and delicate states of the system.
The ingredients in this Elixir are skillfully blended into a delightful Cordial, making it the most agreeable and palatable combination to the taste, in use.
ar. 20, '70.

FOUTZ'S CELEBRATED Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

HOW TO GO WEST.
This is an inquiry which everyone should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey and a little care taken in examination of routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.
The "C., B. & Q. R. R." running from Chicago, through Galesburg to Burlington, and the "I., B. & W. Route," running from Indianapolis, through Bloomington to Burlington, have achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading passenger routes to the west. At Burlington they connect with the B. & M. R. R. and from the great Burlington route, which runs direct through South ern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories and passenger starting from DeKalb county, on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the Burlington route.
All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B & M. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

Wonders.

Lewinbeck tells us of an insect seen with a microscope, of which twenty-seven millions would only equal a mite.

Insects of various kinds may be seen in the cavities of a grain of sand.

Mold is a forest of buitiful trees, with branches, leaves and fruit.

Butterflies are fully feathered.

Hairs are hollow tubes.

The surface of our bodies is covered with scales, like a fish; a single grain of sand would cover one hundred and fifty of these scales, and yet a scale covers five hundred pores. Through these narrow openings the prespiration forces itself, like water through a sieve.

The mites take five hundred steps a second.

Each drop of stagnant water contains a world of animated beings, swimming with as much liberty as whales in the sea.

Each leaf has a colony of insects grazing on it, like cows in a meadow.

Once on a time, at the funeral of a wife the undertaker arranged for the husband and mother-in-law to ride in the same carriage.

Must I, said the broken hearted man, must I ride with that awful woman?

I think you will have to, answered the undertaker. It will disturb every carriage of the procession to make a change, and you must ride here.

Well, if I must I must, said the stricken man: but to ride with her destroys all my pleasure on this occasion.

The Dooryard.

Let the trees or shrubs you plant in your dooryard be in proportion to its size. never put large or tall-growing trees in a small yard; it is not in good taste in the first instance, and in a very few years it will be found to be so near a nuisance that you will be tempted to cut it down; but as this would bring you back to a treeless yard, you allow it remain till it completely overshadows everything else, preventing even your favorite flowers from half perfecting their bloom or the green grass from growing, when at last you are compelled to remove it and begin anew. Determine, when you begin, whether you will have the green and ever beautiful grass plat, with a few choice plants here and there, or whether you will devote it to the more elaborate and artistic flower parterre, requiring much more time to dress and keep it, but daily giving out its profusion of delights, greatly in excess of what the simple grass plat or the summer evergreens can do. You cannot well have them both in a small doaryard, or, if having them, you cannot have them both in perfection. In all cases let the extent of your grounds determine the varieties and qualities of the trees and plants that are to occupy them, and then have a care that you do not crowd in too many large trees.

Roasted Alive.

The San Francisco Chronicle relates the particulars of a horible accident that occurred while some workmen were undertaking to make a connection of gas pipes. At 8:30 p. m. Hassard, the foreman, together with Cusack and Mahony, got down in the whole, and set to work to make the connection. A lamp or candle was left standing on the bank, and when the cap was removed from the pipe, a full head of gas rushed out and was instantaneously ignited by the candle on the bank. A loud explosion followed, and the hole was at once converted into a pit of fire. Hassard and Mahoney scrambled out of the hole, and escaped with a few burns. A crowd immediately gathered, and were busied with the two men, when some one cried out:

"My God! there's a man in the hole yet."

A cry of horror went up from the crowd as the fact was verified. A gust of wind blew the flame aside, and revealed poor Cusack standing in the hole, facing toward Market street. His hands were uplifted above his head, and waving wildly in his agony. One of the bystander, Mr. Delaney, sprang forward, and catching the unfortunate man by his hands, endeavored to drag him from the terrible flaming pit, but the charred flesh crackled from the bones, and sickened and almost fainting with horror, Delaney saw the victim slip from his grasp and fall back into the flames. Almost crazed by the appalling event, some of those present grasped shovels and began throwing sand into the whole, hoping to smother the fiery torrent that was rushing from the pipe, and forgetting that they would inevitably smother the man before their object could be accomplished. Delaney made another attempt to drag Cusack out and this time, aided by others, the effort was successful. A frightful sight was presented when the flames which [illegible] the poor man were [illegible] his features were charred and all resemblance [illegible] his nose and lips being literally burned off. A Mississippi River Story.

A couple of flat-boatmen on the Mississippi river having made an extraordinary good speculation, concluded that while they were in New Orleans they would go for a real first-class hotel dinner at the St. Charles Hotel. Having eaten their bill. The waiter in attendance misunderstood them, and, supposing that they wanted the bill of fare, laid it before them, with the wine list uppermost.

Whew, Bill! said Jerry, here's a bill Just look at it! Here, you add up one side and I'll add up the other, and find what the old thing comes to. So Bill added up the prices of wines on one side of the list and Jerry added them up on the other side and they made the sum total $584.

Wh—ew, Bill! said Jerry, that's pretty nigh all we've got! What are we going to do about it?

We can't pay that, said Bill, it 'an clean us right out. The waiter ain't here now, let's jump out o' the window and put!

No, sir-ee, said Jerry, I'd never do sich a mean thing as that. Let's pay the bill and then go down stairs and shot the old landlord.

What will be Gained by Electing Greeley.

The election of Greeley, it is claimed, will bring about the following results:

General amnesty, and not partial, as adopted, a measure that would overcome the animosities that the policy of the Republican party has kept alive and intensified.

The breaking up of the oppressive military rule in the south and the carpet-bag governments that have disgraced the nation.

It would bring to an end the nepotism and favoritism that have brought reproach upon this administration and dishonor, if not disgrace, upon the country.

It would stop the corruption that has been developed in the custom houses in New York, New Orleans, and whatever there has been a chance to steal.

There would be no more white washing of officials for robbing the Treasury under any pretence, divide Roberson and others.

The policy of the administration would aim to local self-government, and not to centralization, as now.

The civil authority would be supreme over the military.

The writ of habes corpus would be jealously upheld as the safeguard of personal freedom.

There would be no federal supervision of the internal policy of the several states and municipalities, but each left free to enforce the rights and promote the well being of its inhabitants by such means as the judgment of its people may prescribe.

There would be a real and not simulated reform in the civil service of the Republic.

The disbuising of the vast official patronage would be shielded from the main temptation to use his power selfishly by a rule inexorably forbidding and precluding his re-election to a second term.

A Fish Story.

A very staid and worthy old gentleman resided in New Haven, whom a successful merchantile career of more than thirty years had placed in independent, if not affluent circumstances, but, through either custom or a desire to add to his already ample store, he still continued his business and his anteprandial visits to the counting-house. One morning the good wife had postponed the matutinal meal in consequence of his absence, until that rare and valuable thing in a woman—her patience—was well-nigh exhausted. At last he made his appearance; and without any excuse for his tardiness, but looking especially glum and out of humor, he sat him down to eat. A cup of coffee restord him, he spake:

Most extraordinary circumstance, indeed!

What do you mean, my dear? demanded the lady.

Mean? Here have I had to open the shop with my own hands, and after sitting in the doorway a full hour, waiting for my boys, not one of them made his appearance, and I was forced to close the shop again to come to breakfast!

Good heavens! exclaimed the lady with unfeigned horror, you have not been to the shop. Why, sir, don't you know its Sunday!

Sunday! returned he; Sunday! Impossible, madam; we did not have fish for dinner yesterday.

By the Name of Potman.

I am a barber, and some time ago I took an apprentice.

He was a cheerful blue-eyed youth, with a habit of whistling out of tune. I fell into a habit of smacking his head for doing so, but that is neither here nor there, you know.

His mother brought him to me, paid the premium, and said I should find him a good boy. I set him to the lathering as a start, and tried to show him how to set the edge on a razor. He set the edges off the razors, on the contrary, tell him what I might, and I never came across his equal for vexatious lathering. The way he filled the customers' ears and got the bristles up their noses, you would hardly credit. If one chanced to gape, the gaper got a mouthful to a certainty, and more than one very narrowly escaped loss of sight.

Of course, as I had taken the old woman's money, I was bound, some time or other, to show him how the scraping was to be done; but that sort of knowledge cannot exactly be picked theoretically, and who was I to let him loose upon to start with?

I had been doing a good steady sort of of trade for the last five years or so, and had got a genteel little circle of customers who came daily. It was not likely I could let him hack and hew at any of them. If a harmless sort of stranger would only drop in when the shop was empty, the poor boy might have a chance A harmless stranger dropped in, unfortunately for himself, before long, and I gave young Potman a good sharp razor, and went and bolted myself in my bedroom and put my fingers into my ears.

Before very long there was an awful howling in the shop. Then more howling. Then some crockery went, and I began to get excited. I ran in, therefore, to see what it was all about, and the sight of that mutilated stranger made me almost weep.

When I think Saint Whats-his-name they are flaying alive in a corner of the picture-galleries at Hampton Court, I rather take it he was let off lightly in comparison with this stranger. When I say that he could just manage to open his eyes, and that he might have kept his mouth shut and taken in his food without an effort, at two other places, I trust I shan't be thought to be exaggerating.—Happily he had no friends in London and was an orphan. I bound up his wounds, and charged him nothing for the shave, and he went away limping, but seemingly not so dissatisfied as he might have been about it.

After that, young Potman tried his hand once or twice. When I was out, he got hold of some of my regular customers; and several strangers he happened to get unawares, were moved out of all human likeness. I had some pounds to pay for noses and ears, and things of that sort, he lopped off prom scnous.

At last I began to think he was injuring the trade, and I put him down to milly—

You fiend incarnate,' I said, you're utterly blasted all my earthly reputation.—You've brought my gray hairs with infamy to the mire. You're crushed me utterly, and bust up for evermore what was once a respectable business. You lopsided, putty-headed, left-handed, butter-fingered, imbecile jackass, get out!

I led him with these gentle words to the threshold of my establishment and fixed him up to have a good kick at him. The ungrateful wretch swerved to the right, and squirmed to the left, and wriggled in a mean and shuffling manner.

When I had unjointed both legs at the knee and hip I gave up the notion of killing him, and returning to my shop, threw three shillings' worth of scented soaps at his head.

I have never seen him since, or the [illegible]

NEWS.

News did nor travel very quickly in the sixteeth century. The descent of the Spanish armada on the English coast was only generally made known to the people of Great Britain through the modium of a paper that was circulated by Lord Burleigh, then Prime Minister of Queen Elizabeth, being in fact the first instance of the printing of important intelligence. Such an event in the present day would be known to every newspaper throughout the civilized would in less than twenty four hours, or even as soon as the undertaing itself had been resolved upon.

Found him at Last.

There was always something irrosistibly funny in what they used to tell about a foppish passenger on a Mississippi boat, who, 'just for a little fun.' jumped on shore at a landing, and rushed up to a gawky-looking fellow at a wood pile, exclaiming, 'I've found you at last! You're the man I've been looking for.' The gawky looked at him for half a second, then straight ened out his arm like a jibboom, and knocked the fellow overboard into ten feet of water. Resuming his position against the wood-pile, he drawled out, 'Is there anybody else on this boat looking for me?

It is not at all surprising that revolutions are chronic in Spain. On the retirement of every Cabinet all the officeholders are changed, and as there are no less than 30,000 in the city of Madrid alone, it may be imagined that the commotion caused by those going out and the rivalry of those desirous of going in must be fearful. As soon as the members of the new Cabinet are known they are literally worried to death by office seekers, are compelled to go in hiding, to deny themselves, to steal home like thieves in the night. No wonder that Spain is a land of conspiracies.

The Smiths and the Browns.

'I'll tell you what it is, wife,' said [illegible], and he emphacized the remark by a wise shake of the forefinger 'things have got into a very bad way The farm is mortgaged to the very last cent it is worth, and I owe a heap of money besides—more by a long shot than I know how to pay.—What is to be done?

"I'm sure I don't know Peter," replied the bothered wife! "but it seems too awful bad to be turned out of house and home at our time of life. Now if our son John would marry Jonas Brown's daughter Sally it would help us out amazingly. The Browns you see are well off, and the connection would be a perfect goldmine to us.—Of course they would give Sally the hundred acres of land and things that they've always said they would.

'That's a good idea wife, and Peter brightened up amazingly. "You were always a cute woman and the notion does you credit. But do you think the young folks would take to it?'

'I don't know but it seems to me that they've always taken a great notion to each other ever since they were children—been more like brother and sister than anything else."

'But suppose the Browns would object, as most likely they would. You know we ai'nt on good terms, thick as the young folks have been.'

'I'll tell you what is just the thing for us to do—put up John to elope with Sally."

'Agreed I'll leave it all for you to manage."

Thus the matter was settled, and the scheming couple went to bed to dream of a speedy release from their financial embarrassments.

Coincidences are sometimes of the most curious character—almost surpassing belief in some instances. About the time of the above conversation between Mr. and Mrs. Smith their neighbors Mr and Mrs Jonas Brown held an important conference.

"Do you remember that note for six hundred dollars I gave for stock last spring?" asked Jonas.

'Yes' [illegible]

'Well, its coming due in about a month, and how under the sun we're going to pay it I don't know,

"Mortgage the farm."

'We [illegible] mortgage [illegible] dismiss [illegible]

a piano." Where the money is coming from is more than I know. We're on the verge of bankruptcy."

'I wish Sally would marry John Smith—gracious knows they're together enough to take a notion that way.'

'Yes, but I don't see how that would help us any."

'You don't eh?' Well I do. Ain't his folks rich? and would'nt they set him up handsomely? then we could stand some chance of getting help through Sally."

'Thats a good plan,' was Jonas conclusion after profound meditation, "but the difficulty is that, the Smiths are not on good terms with us, and would be likely to oppose the match.'

"Then the best plan is to set the young folks up to an elopement.

So it chanced that the Browns and the Smiths planed to dispose of their children in their own pecuniary advantage. The next step in each case was to mould the young ones in the proper shape.

John Smith a handsome brawny, country fellow, with plenty of good sense and an ocean of love for Sally. When his parents proposed his marrying her, he informed them that he would gladly do so, but he feared her parents would object. Then his father slyly suggested an elopement and offered to aid in carrying out such an exploit. John said he would think about it.

Sally Brown was a rustic maiden with much redness of cheeks and rejoicing in the possession of the lasting comliness which is derived from a bright smile, sweet temper and a pair of clear earnest eyes, made none the less expressive by a near neighbor of a saucy little retrouesse nose. Her wavy brown hair had not a ripple out of place, and her plump little figure was encased in a well fitting dress, which was neatness itself. When her parents spoke to her about John, she blushed becomingly and after close questioning admitted that she would be "tickled to death" to marry him. She farther stated that they were running over with love for eachother; that they had long settled the question of ultimate union but that they feared parental parental objection.

'Now, I'll tell you what Sally,' said Mrs. Brown, "you know pa and I dote on you, and would do anything to make you happy."

"We would do any thing to make you happy." echoed Mr. Brown.

'And if you were to hint to John the idea of an elopement we wouldn't lift our finger to prevent it.

"No," repeated Mr. Brown 'we wouldn't lift our fingers to prevent it.'

In thus instructing their children the Smiths and Browns displayed very little knowledge of human nature.—they should have known that John and Sally would upon the first occasion possible unbosom themselves for how could true lovers keep a secret and such a secret? And they didn't.—At the next meeting each told the other all she or he had been told by parental lips, but neither could conceive the object of the old folks. However they were not over disposed to question the matter. They were too glad that the consummation so devoutly wished seemed so near at hand to question how it had been brought about. Concious that their progenitors were up to the same kind of trickery, they resolved to avail themselves of the opportunity to elope before any change in the aspect should occur. Having thus concluded, they proceeded to lead their parents astray.

"I've been talking to John," said Sally demurely, to Mr. and Mrs. Brown 'and we have concluded to elope its all settled, and we're ready just as soon as it can be arranged.

"I saw Sally last night," said John to Mr. and Mr. Smith, "and she agreed to elope with me; so I think the thing had better be hurried right along."

One week from this time all the preliminaries had been arranged. Sally had been supplied with a bran new dress, and all the other fixings, and John had been given enough money to buy a suit of wedding toggery. The respective parents were laughing in their respective sleeves at their own cunning. The Browns were overjoyed at outwiting the Smiths, the Smiths were happy at fooling the Browns, and both chuakled over a speedy relief from financial embarrassment.

The eventful night came and John hitched up one of his father's horses and drove over to Sally's domicile. When within a dozen rods of the house he gave a signal whistle, and Sally came out. Under the peculiar circumstances they feared no interference and did not deem it necessary to exercise any great amount of caution. John gave Sally a resounding kiss, helped her into the wagon, and away they went.

Shortly after their departure two scenes occurred which must here be recorded.

Jonas Brown returned from the village store, and entered his house in a state of great mental and bodily excitement. The latter was caused by fast walking, and the former—but the conversation that ensued will best explain.

"They're gone!" exclaimed Mrs. Brown exultingly "and they'll be hitched in an hour or less.

"The deuce they have," cried Mr. Brown. 'I hoped to get here time to stop 'em.'

'To stop 'em?'

'Yes, that's what I said.'

"What for?"

'Just this. Old Smith ain't worth a cent; can't pay what he owes; will be sold out within a month; it's the [illegible] village."

"Goodness gracious!" gasped Mrs. Brown. 'What shall we do.'

"I'll tell you what I'll do. Sally shan't marry the beggar; I'll follow em, to Squire Jones," and git there before the ceremony."

With this he hurriedly hitched up a horse and spun away to 'Squire Jones house about 5 miles distant.

The other important scene mentioned was at the Smith residence and was opened by the precipitate entrance of Mrs. S. with the breathless exclamation.

"Has he gone?"

"Who?" inquired Mr. Smith.

'John."

"Yes," and Mr. Smith rubbed his hands with glee. "He went all of half an hour ago."

"Don't stand there rubbing your hands," screamed the lady, "but harness up the old mare just as quick as you can and follow em. The Browns ain't worth a dollar in the world; Mrs. Robinson just told me so—and a mortgage on their farm going to be foreclosed. so Sally won't get a solitary cent.'

Smith hurried the old mare in the harness, and rattled away toward Squire Jones' residence.

John and Sally had proceeded leisurely about 4 miles the former driving with one arm, and holding Sally on the seat with the other when they heard the sound of wheels a short distance in the rear. They had just passed a long bend in the road and looking across they saw revealed by moonlight the pursuing Brown.

"Why, that's pa!" exclaimed Sally.

'Yes and he means mischief, I'll bet. said John.

"What shall we do." squealed Sally.

"I'll show you," said John

Jumping from the wagon, he removed a long rail from the fence, and placed it across the roadway. Then he drove on again, at a gait that made the horses steam like a boiler.

Brown came on at a furious rate only to be summarily checked by the rail. The horse jumped the rail but the front wheels collapsed under the collision. Brown was tumbled out and the frightened horse ran off with the wreck of the vehicle.

Just as Mr. Brown was picking himself from the ditch he saw the accident repeated; this time Mr. Smith being the leading actor, and Mr. Smith's mare galloping away with the fore wheels.

Brown and Smith were inveterate enemies, and neither would speak; but both started for the Squire's, about a mile off where they arrived very much out of breath. They burst in the house like a whirlwind, just in time to hear the words.

"I now pronounce you man and wife.'

'Hold on!" yelled Brown, 'I object.'

'So do I,' screamed Smith.

"You are a little too late,' remarked the 'Squire "Nothing but a divorce can fix it now."

The parents fumed and glared at each other.

"I'm sure pa," pleaded the daughter, 'that you and ma both said——'

"Daughter," hurriedly interposed Mr. Brown turning very red but striving to appear dignified. 'I am not disposed to be tyrannical; now that you are married I shall not refuse my blessing.

"And you father," said John, "we would never have eloped if you and mother hadn't said——"

"Never mind interupted Mr. Smith; "I forgive you both.'

Brown and Smith thereupon became reconciled, and all rode home in the elopers wagon.

Pathos Profitable.

A touching incident is reported from Chattanooga. An utter stranger called on a respectable farmer last week and asked him if his house had not been robbed during the war.

The farmer replied that it had. 'I,' said the stranger, 'was one of a marauding party that took it. I took a little silver locket. 'That locket,' said the farmer, 'had been worn by my dear, dead child.' 'Here it is,' replied the stranger, visibly affected; 'I am rich; let me make restitution; here are $20 for your little son. He gave the farmer a $50 bill and received $30 in change. He then wrung the farmer's hand warmly and left. The farmer has since dried his tears and loaded his shotgun. The bill was good for nothing.

Several gentlemen recently in business in Mexico have abandoned all their affairs there and returned to N. Y. They say the hostility to Americans is steadily increasing and makes it unprofitable to remain there. One of these men, who was running a silver mine, says the Mexicans made no objection to the investment of money, but as soon as the mine became profitable large contributions under the name of loans were exacted. All the profit of the mine were thus swallowed up, and finally the superintendent, on refusing to pay, was imprisoned. He was obliged to pay for his release.—Several others were subjected to similar treatment. Several mining and other enterprises in Central and Northern Mexico have been given up.

Horace Morrow Postmaster at Tipton Iowa, has resigned in order to support Greeley through the columns of the Advocate a newspaper to be issued by him.

Out for Greeley.

Ex-Governor Stone, Iowa's best stumper and most perminent Radical leader, is squarely out for Greeley and Brown.

* * *

Mr. Schwartz, candidate for Elector for the State at large on the Grant ticket addressed a German audience of 82 persons at Logansport last Thursday night and was so overcome by the effort that he didn't get away from the place till the following Monday.—It was evidently a case of Grant-tight.

Montana all Right.

Official returns from the Territorial election in Montana, elect Major Maginnis, Liberal Democrat, delegate to Congress by 300 majority. Last year the Grantites carried the election by a good round majority. The supporters of U. S. G. ought to fire cannons over the result. They could do so with the same propriety as they did over the North Carolina election.

Two years ago Morton made a speech in Louisville in which he most highly extoled the few Democratic newspapers that had in advance of the party, advocated the very source that the Baltimore Convention pursued and said that he would thank the Almighty if all the Democracy would follow their lead.—But he was most infamously bitter against Bourbonism. Now he goes again to the Falls, and will tenderly nurse the Bourbon spirit, and launch his most fiery darts at those he praised the most formerly.

—Do you know Blanton Duncan? I have known him for 21 years. He was a Know-Nothing. He was the chief organizer of that party. He was the head of those who mobbed houses, and burned women and children, and slaughtered men in cold blood in the streets. Shame upon the Democrat who takes council of him in preference to acting with three thousand patriotic men who have heretofore acted with you and you with them.—Extracts from Hon. M. C. Keers speech at Fort Wayne.

The Government Revenue.

The committee of seven gentlemen appointed by President Grant to devise means for the reform of our miserable Civil Service system, and presided over by George William Curtis, reported that "it is calculated by those who have made a careful study of all the facts, than one-fourth of the revenues of the United States are annually lost in the collection; and for a large part of this loss a system of the service which is fatally unsound may reasonably be held responsable.

That is what Grant's own Committee reports as to the honesty of his administration. What higher authority is wanted to prove the flagrant swindling practised upon the people by the presing imbecile administration. What do our Grant friend think of this showing of their favorite.

Grant Paying the Debt.

We suppose from the constant manner in which some of the Grant papers and the small-fry orators of the Radical party prate about the paying of the public debt, that many are led to believe that we have not only one of the most economical governments in the world, but the most scrupulously honest of all Administrations. The truth is that the people will have placed in the hands of Grant and his Secretary of the Treasury since his election about 1,647,579,192, out of this vast sum only about 8,346,823, has been paid monthly on the debt. The Administration of Andrew Johnson paid on an average monthly sum of $10,936,201,—So that after all the boasting of the Radical press and Radical orators it will be seen that the model government falls nearly $3,000,000, monthly behind that of an Administration which they charged with corruption in squandering public money. That Grant's Administration has been extravagant beyond any proceeding Administration may be seen from the great sum which it demands yearly for the support of the government. The last year of Democratic rule under Buchanan cost the country only $62,676,557 whilst that of Grant for the year 1871 was $156,420,028,—making a difference of $63,743,468! It will be well for the people when they hear such demagogues as Morton and Brown boasting of the economy of the Grant Administration, and the wonderful sum the party has paid in reduction of the public debt, to remember the almost fabulous sums of money furnished them by willing people and the actual amount which went for that purpose; and when they boast of their economy, to remind them that it costs $93,743,468 more for the "Sea side loiterer" to run the Government one year, than it did for Mr. Buchanan any one year of his Administration.

"Morton Put It There."

General John A. Farnsworth a Representative in Congress from the 4th Congressional district of Illinois, made a speech recently at St. Charles in that State in which he illustrated some of the beauties of Grantism in the most vigorous Saxon. Farnsworth has been a Republican all his life, and now supports the Liberal movement. During the course of his speech Mr. Farnsworth recited a little incident that most aptly illustrates Mr Grant's capacity. Grant had sent a message to Congress in relation to certain legislation relating to the test oath being enforced in Georgia. One passage in the message was a little obscure in its meaning besides containing a suggestion, if observed would compel Congress to violate a plain provision of the constitution. Mr. Farnsworth called upon the President and politely asked him to explain what he meant by the suggestion. Grant removed the cigar from his mouth a moment and replied "that really he did not know, that Morton put it there." Mr. Farnsworth took his hat and retired, asking himself the question, by what authority Morton had writen a message to Congress when he himself was a member of Congress.

The Blue and the Grey.

Senator Morton said in his speech in Goshen that the contest this fall between Greeley and Grant is "between rebel [illegible] and union soldiers, between the boys in blue and the boys in gray." Of the most earnest supporters of Mr. Greeley among the Generals or "boys in blue," are

Five of Lincon's cabinet and ten of his Senators, and a large proportion of the Republican Governors and Lieu. Governors holding office under that administration, now are supporting Greeley. How does that look "Moxy?" It shows that you are trying to gull and mislead the people.

The son of Governor Blair, of Michigan—who is the leader of the Liberal Republicans in that State—has been discharged from a mail agency because he refused to give 50 dollars to the Grant campaign fund. That is Civil Service Reform.

Extracts from Hon. J. F. Farnsworth's Great Speech at St. Charles Illinois.

But Grant, they say, is paying the debt. This is very much like that other statement, that he saved the country—though with less truth. He is at the head of an Administration, while the people are paying the debt. Grant has just about as much to do with paying the debt as my friend Barry there, or myself. He probably pays a larger tax than we do. I suppose that he pays his tax, like any other man; but, aside from that, he has little more to do with paying the debt of the United States than any other man in the United States,—not a bit. Congress passes laws providing for taxing the people. The people pay those taxes into the Treasury—what is not stolen by the way; and, after it gets into the Treasury, it is paid out in the manner in which I shall tell you, towards reducing the public debt. Now, you say, we must continue the present Administration in power because it don't steal the money. Did you ever hear of a merchant continuing a clerk in h's store simply because he would not steal? Did you ever know of a cashier being retained in a bank merely because he did not steal? If that is the only qualification requisite, it is a new rule among merchants and business men.

But how is the public debt being paid? I desire to say a few words upon that subject; and, in connection with it, I desire to call your attention to the subject of the public expenditures of the government.

It is said by some—and speeches of that kind are being circulated broadcast over the country—that the expenditures of the Nation have been reduced, and that it costs less to carry on the Government now, in proportion to population now in the United States, than it did ten or twelve years ago, and all that. I take my figures from the reports of the Secretary of the Treasury:

The expenses of the last year of Buchanan's Administration, in 1860-'61, were, $51,581,456 05, which included pensions and interest on the public debt 5,068,757 03,—leaving for actual expenses for that year 66,512,699 02. The appropriations for the first year of Mr. Lincoln's Administration, made by a Republican Congress, before the war began, and believed by that Congress to be sufficient, amounted to but the sum of 71,,094, 953 09, and this includes the postal revenues, while the ordinary expenses of the Government for 1871, leaving out pensions, interest on public debt, sinking fund, and postal revenues, amounted to 123,149,932 70; add postal revenue 30,000,000, and ordnance stores sold, 8,280,093 13—making $161,220,025-83. And the appropriations for 1872, for ordinary expenses, were 127,566,763 29 and postal revenues at least 30,000,000, make 157,566,763 26; and the estimates of the Secretary of the Treasury for the year amount to nearly as much. The whole amount expended for the army in 1860, was 16,472,202 62, while for 1871 the amount expended for the War Department, including the eight billions realized from the sale of ordnances stores and with that expended, was, 44,080,684 05,—nearly three times as much as the War Department cost in 1865.

Now, let me call your attention to some of the reasons why the war department cost so much, and I refer you to the evidence that you will not dispute. I will read from the speach of John A. Logan, made two years ago when he was chairman of the Committee of Military Affairs in the House of Representatives. What does he say?

"Now, sir, I ask, why do we spend 37,090,000 on thirty-seven regiments? I will explain why some of the great expense arises. The army has a great staff for which they have but little use All these staff officers require to have horses, forage, commutation of rations —everything of this kind.

"Mark that three or four of them are Private Secretaries to the President; and what they have to do with horses and forage [illegible] House, it is difficult to say, but they draw their communication, nevertheless.

"For instance, you have a Quartermaster s establishment in New York. There are not 500 troops to-day in the department, and yet they have allowed for rent of buildings for headquarters and other offices an amount reaching over 30,000 a year. I speak merely of offices rent. Why it is I do not know, but that is the fact. In some military departments the rent of headquarters alone is 15,000. I believe it costs a great deal more than that in San Francisco. That is the way in which the public money is spent for rental of offices and for quarters at extravagant prices, for a gentleman who is perhaps a Lieutenant Colonel or a Colonel."

That is the way the money goes in the War Department, according to Mr Logan.

Again, upon the subject of these expenditures, I read from another gentleman, whose authority you will not dispute, for he is now making speeches for Grant. I read from a speech made by the then Chairman of the Committee on Appropriation in the House, and at present Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means—the Hon. Henry L. Dawes, of Massachusetts—a year ago last winter. He says:

"Now, sir, what did Andrew Johnson, in the last year of his Administration, estimate that he could carry on this Government for? He estimated that he could carry it on foa 303,000,000.

That means to pay the interest and pensions, and everything of that sort

Forty-nine millions more is estimated for under Grant and Boutwell than it cost to carry on the Government the last year of Johnson's Administration according to Daws who was Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. And he goes on:

'There is not one of those Departments that does not estimate to-day in the book I have before me, for an increase of expenditures over the appropriations of last year, save only one, and that is the poor, unpopular Attorney General. I hope it is not because of this remarkable trait in his character (economy) that it is contemplated at the other end of the Capitol to relieve him from further public service.'

Dawes hopes it is not because of the economy of the Attorney General that he is to be turned out of office—ironically. He was turned out shortly afterwards. We had greatly reduced the objects of the expenses of the Government after 1869; we had reduced the army somewhat; we had paid off a great many debts; we had reduced very largely the of the nation; and yet their estimate forty-nine millions more for carrying on the Government under Grant than for the last year of Johnson. And yet they talk about the economy in the Administration of the Government and in its expenditures. It is rank humbug.

NORTH CAROLINA.—Debt in 1861, $12 686,245; debt in 1871, $34,887,464; increase 22,193,219. Bonds sold at 10 to 30 cents on the dollar.—Nothing to show for the debt. Taxes $1 80 on the 100.

SOUTH CAROLINA.—Debt in 1861, 4,407,958; debt in 1871, so far as can be ascertained, 531 000,000; local taxes in 1871 $1,200,000; in 1870 2,700,000. Decrease in area of improved land, one third; decrease in value of farms, from 139,000,000, to 145,000,000.

FLORIDA.—Debt in 1861, $370,617; in 1871, 15,797,237. State taxes averaged, before the war, $3,000 per annum; in 1871, were 471,811. Local taxation increased from 23 cents in 1860 to 1 50 on the dollar in 1870.

GEORGIA.—Debt in 1871, 2,670,750. In 1871, no man knows or can guess how great it is. Bullock and his confederates have bolted; what quantity of bonds they carried off can only be guessed. The known liabilities are about 20,000,000.

ALABAMA.—Debt in 1861, 7,945,000; in 1371, 36,761,9117, with a farther indebtedness for railway bonds of 16,000,000.

MISSISSIPPI.—Cost of the State government in 1850 was 350,000 yearly in 1860, over 2,000,000.

TEXAS.—Debt in 1861, was 2,000,000; in 1871 it was 14,930,000.—Cost of government yearly in 1860-61 was 250,000, and in 1870-71 1,876,437. Rate of taxation in 1860 was 16½ cents on the 100; in 1881 it was 208.

ARKANSAS.—Debt in 1860 was 2,084,169, and in 1871 in was 7,098,000 with over 11,000,000, of railroad indebtedness besides. The rate of taxation has increased from 40 cents to 300 on the 100.

General Farnsworth on Political Records.

General J. F. Farnsworth spoke to a large audience at St. Charles Illinois last week. The following are extracts from his speech.

It is not the first time I have been denounced because I exercised the great high prerogative of every American citizen to think and act for myself. Some twenty-five or six years ago, I was denounced because I left an old Pro-Slavery party and united with a little handful of, an unpopular hand ful, of Anti-Slavery men in defence of the right. But strange to say, the denunciation of even the old Pro-Slavery party of twenty five years ago, were not as bitter or as personal, or its intolerance so great as those of the Grant party today. This comes from a personal Government. As in a monarchy, any refusal to support the king and the State, so now refusal to support the pretentions of General Grant and his adherents becomes treason to the Republican party and to the State. When you go back to records they are ugly things, and cut both ways. I was in Congress in the Spring of 1861; went out of Congress on the 4th of March. During that last session when the Southern States, one after another [illegible] seceding a Committee, composed of 13 gentlemen [illegible] the House of Representatives called a Committee upon the State of the Union to devise some means of maintaining the Union. That Committee through its Chairman, Mr. Corwin of Ohio reported a resolution amending the Constitution of the United States. I have it here and I want to call your attention to that amendment and the votes upon it. Let us see about these records. This was mark you in the spring of 1861, about the time that they say Mr. Lincon was saying that it was impossible to tell how we could coerce States into the Union if they were disposed to stay out of it, and there were a good many speeches made in Congress to that purport. They propose to amend the Constitution by forever puting it out of the power of the people to amend so as to abolish slavery thus fastening the chains upon the blacks forever and forever, by a provision of the Constitution. What was the vote upon that in the House of Representatives? I will read the names of those who voted for it and against it. Of those who voted for it the first name I notice of much prominence is that of Schuyler Colfax.—(Laughter.) Well he is a pretty good Republican is he not? Yet he was willing to fasten the chains of slavery forever on the slaves in order to avoid war. Who else? John A. Logan—A good Republican and a Grant man sometimes. McPherson of Pennsylvania the man who gets up the political manuals for the Republican party, and now Clerk of the House of Representatives and a Grant man. And then too there were Morrill of Vermont a good Grant man; and Dan Sickles, and Maynard of Tennessee, and Windom—all Grant men. They all voted for that, with a good many others. Who voted in the negative in the House? I will read a few names. There is Ashley of Ohio a Greeley man today.—(Applause.) there is Blair of Missouri—Frank blair even voted against it—another Greeley man. And not to speak of him as a man of any prominence, perhaps you may be a little interested in knowing about the vote of Farnsworth of Illinois. (Applause.) He voted against it. And then Fenton of New York, Governor Fenton now a Greeley man—voted against it. Then there was Sedgwick of New York—another Greeley man—Tappan of New Hampshire, who was on the Committee and made a minority report; he voted against it, and he recently came out for Greeley. Both Hickman and Grow of Pennsylvania voted against it and they are both Greeley men to-day. So much for the record in the House of Representatives. How was in in the Senate? Among the members of the Senate who voted for it were Anthony of Rhode Island and Harlem of Iowa—good Grant men. There are not many Senators now who was in the Senate at that time. Then of those who voted against it were Bingham of Michigan who is now dead. Doolittle of Wisconsin Sumner of Massachusetts (cheers) and Trumbull of Illinois.—(Cheers.) That is the record made in those days and now you denounce Greeley because he was willing in 1861 to pay $400,000,000, for the emancipated slaves, and stop the war. Would to God he could have done it. We could have saved $1,000,000,000, and 100,000 precious lives.

Judge Hoge, of South Carolina a carpet-bagger, at a Grant rally at Newberry, S. C., last week called Senator Schurz "a red-whiskered Dutch puppy." Perhaps this will win German votes for his master.

General George W. Jones was a prominent Democrat and violent opponent of Greeley and denunciator of all who did support him, Saturday joined the Greeley club and seems to feel mighty good over it.

The Great Cause OF Human Misery

Just Published, in a Sealed Envelope, Price 6 cts.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment and Radical Cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhoea, induced by self abuse, involuntary emission and impediments to Marriage generally; consumption, &c.—By Rob J. Culverwell, M. D., author of the 'Green Book,' &c.

The world renowned author, in this admirable lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, can privately cure himself. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on receipt of 6 cents, or two postage stamps. Also Dr. Culverwell's 'Marriage Guide,' price 50 cents. Address the publishers.

VINEGAR BITTERS

PURELY VEGETABLE FREE FROM ALCOHOL
DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
VINEGAR BITTERS

Vinegar Bitters are not a vile Fancy Drink, made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced, and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the native roots and herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the Great Blood Purifier and a Life-giving Principle, a Perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition, enriching it, refreshing and invigorating both mind and body. They are easy of administration, prompt in their action, certain in their results, safe and reliable in all forms of disease.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist: There is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics, will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS twice a week.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc., etc. In these as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters act on all these cases in a similar manner. By purifying the Blood they remove the cause, and by resolving away the effects of the inflammation (the tubercular deposits) the affected parts receive health, and a permanent cure is effected.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

The Aperient and mild Laxative properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are the best safe-guard in cases of eruptions and malignant fevers, their balsamic, healing, and soothing properties protect the humors of the fauces. Their Sedative properties allay pain in the nervous system, stomach, and bowels, either from inflammation, wind, colic, cramps, etc.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Directions.—Take of the Bitters on going to bed at night from a half to one and one-half wine-glassful. Eat good nourishing food, such as beef-steak, mutton chop, venison, roast beef, and vegetables, and take out-door exercise. They are composed of purely vegetable ingredients, and contain no spirit.

OFFICIAL PAPER of the COUNTY

Local and Miscellaneous.

The jail is full.

Ms. Hollipeter is again at his post.

The Fort Wayne Republican has played out.

Go to Smith & Hare's for your groceries and provisions.

Farmers are thrashing their wheat, and report a good yield.

The Ensly block is progressing finely, and will soon reach the second floor.

The Corunna hotel is now in running order, and the public will find it a good place to get their "grub."

Personal.—W. G. Toman, Esq., city editor of the Statesman, Columbus, Ohio, gave us a call yesterday.

Remember the appointments of Hon E. V. Long our candidate for Congress, in this county next week.

Remember the appointment to-morrow (Friday) evening, of Hon. S F. Smart, of Fort Wayne, on the political issues of the day.

The Casius M. Clay meeting at Warsaw, beat Morton's gathering considerably, in respectability and number of voters.

The Hotel-de-Sheriff is receiving an increased business. There are now five inmates in this delectable abode, four male and one female.

The new brick Baptist church is under roof and one more steeple now towers toward the sky. The building is a fine one and a substantial addition to our town.

Half Fare.—The Eel River will run an excursion train to Columbia City during the races this week at half the regular rates. Go down to-day and see the attractions.

From all accounts the meeting at Columbia city, to hear Gen. Harlem eulogize Grant would have been quite a success, if about three thousand more people would have attended.

Wanted.—We want to secure a good stout boy to learn the printing trade. A boy from the country of good size, with common school education and good morals is desired.

CARL SCHURZ.

The Great German Senator will speak in Fort Wayne in a very few days. The date will be given in due time.

Where is Pelubius V. Hoffman? His absence for several days would indicate that the United States Grant Committee had ordered his august presence in some of the doubtful States.

Hon. GEO. W. JULIAN.

One of the most prominent statesmen of the Radical party, now Anti-Grant, will speak at Angola to-day, Thursday. Every body should hear him.

On the 17th of February, 1869, just before his inaugration Grant received a present of $105,000. After his inauguration he bestowed offices upon the men who made up this amount. Comment is unnecessary.

Sewing Machines.—Charley Klotz has fixed up his establishment, and has things nicely arranged for the exhibition of the fine Sewing Machine for which he now holds the agency. Those wanting a good maching should give him a call.

TURN OUT.

Let a large attendance from the surrounding towns, be on hand at the meeting at Waterloo to-night, Thursday evening, to hear the eloquent congressman from Illinois, and Gen. Hascall, of Goshen

The Lent House, at Waterloo, changed hands, sometime ago, Mr. Case, well and favorably know as being posted in the hotel business, is now running the establishment. We know that Mr. C. will make it first-class, and the traveling public will find it the best in the place.

The "Straight-out" Democrats are pretty sick over their "grand demonstration" at Fort Wayne on the 17th inst. None but Grant papers abroad give it any significance. The Journal of that place an Anti-Greeley paper says: "The thinest political demonstration of the season was the so called Anti-Greeley District Mass Convention held at Hamilton Hall on Saturday last, to elect delegates to the Louisville convention to be held on the 3d of September next.

As we go to press we learn that Mr. Orth did not put in an appearance at Lima, on Tuesday. The reason we have not learned, but are sure it will be a satisfactory one, when known.—LaGrange Standard.

You ought to be thankful that the worst speaker in the canvass did not appear.—You can count a few votes ahead.

The Ladies Association of the Presbyterian church will meet at Mr. Wm. McIntyre, on Thursday evening Aug 29th. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Mrs. L. Abright, Pres
H. J. Ralston, Sec.'

The Violett House, at Elkhart, Jery Knight the popular landlord, John Bull, clerk, is one of the best establishments of the kind in the country. Goshen should be proud of having as good a hotel as there is in the capitol of the State and a good deal better. When you go to there stop at the Violet and verify our words.

A very unreliable and incorrect article on State Finances, sent out by the Grant Sate Central Committee, appears in the Press of last week. It don't say anything about the $18,000 stolen by the late Chairman of that Committee, Ham Conner. If it is desired that the people should believe these reports, they should be gotten up by honest men.

We gave our popular friend, L. H. Creditor, dentist, a call at Angola, last week, and found him fixed up in most excellent style. He has the best furnished dentist rooms we have seen lately, and possesses all the modern appliances for doing work in his line in the very best order. Being a good workman, we have no fear but that he will meet with abundant success.

F. F. Boltz, of Fort Wayne, signed a call for the organization of a Greeley Club and because he could not be Colonel he swallowed all he had said about an "imbecile president" and joined a Grant club. To make him fast they made him Colonel and the probability is that he will stick, until he is appointed a Brigadier General by the other side.

Fair.—We learn that the first annual fair of the North Eastern, Ind., Agricultural Society, will be held at Waterloo during the first week of October. A fine track has been laid out and the necessary buildings will be constructed for fair purposes. Three thousand dollars will be offered in premiums and the list will be issued in a few days. Everything looks favorable for making the inauguration a success.

John Gestenslagen was arrested last Thursday on a charge of stealing about seventeen dollars from the person of Adam Lizy. It is claimed that the money was taken from the side pocket of Lizey, while they were fooling around the saloon and drinking together. Part of the money was recovered the remainder, it is said was used to pay off several debts constructed by the accused.

The one-horse editor of the Fort Wayne Free Press has announced himself for Sheriff. He has heretofore supported the regular Democratic county Ticket, placed it in his paper, and spoken flatteringly of the candidates, and now to show his perfidy, recants all he said, chaws his own words, and in a sneaking and cowardly way, shows what a tool the Grant men have made him. How dirty and condemned he must feel.

Hon. S. F. SMART.

Mr. S., of Fort Wayne, is one of the finest speakers in the State. He will address the citizens at this place to-morrow, Friday evening, at 7 o'clock p. m. We know Mr. Smart to be an excellent speaker, and we trust that many of our friends from the country will attend. Other speakers will also be present.

The Stealings.

Tom Brown admitted, at Waterloo, that the stealings of the government as he called it amounted to only eleven hundred thousands of dollars. This is about the one hundreth part, but they say this is all. Ought an administration to be sustained that would fraudulently take from the people Eleven Hundred Thousands of dollars.—Does it not go to show that it is incapable, dishonest and unworthy? Eleven Hundred Thousands of Dollars! just think of it.

F. J. Foster, the short horned editor of the Fort Wayne Free Press, has an announcement put in the Journal that he will be a candidate for sheriff. He also announces that he is the bold editor and proprietor of the Free Press, and Monroeville Democrat. Several months ago he was burnt out and was in debt. How he can now be proprietor of two papers, both "weakly," can only be accounted for by the fact that Radical gold has made him so bold. These papers are now run in the interest of the Radical party.

The Fort Wayne Sentinel says that Perry Fitch, Esq., of Butler township, DeKalb county, informs them that the Liberalism is fast gaining ground in his neighborhood, large numbers of Radicals having joined the Greeley movement.

It also says that Gen. Thos. Ewing has informed Col. Zollars that he will deliver a Liberal speech in that city, sometime during the campaign, providing he can find the leisure. He says that he has heard so much of Fort Wayne that he is anxious to see it for himself.

Our Visitors.—Last Tuesday the Liberty Mills Band paid our place a visit, on a little excursion of their own, and furnished thus gratuitously most excellent music during their stay. At night the Grant club demonstrated and the band kindly volunteered their services and added much to the procession. Afterwards they were taken to Mr. Baker's Restaurant and furnished with a substantial lunch and a good time had generally.

We must return thanks for a beautiful serenade rendered by them in most excellent style. The boys play splendidly, and won many compliments from our citizens. They also gave Dr. Spooner, for a while one of their fellow townsmen, a call in which music, and melons and the baby came in for their share, and the boys returned this morning feeling that our folks had not treated them entirely with indifference.

Our friends should keep these appointments in mind and do all they can to get out good crowds.

A Clear Backdown.

The ridiculously small hole through which the editor of the Press is trying to crawl in his endeavor to escape from the responsibility of the lie he told in regard to the "democratic authority," of a communication about a ring meeting is something like Billy Williams Story of some Emperor putting the Colossus of Rhodes in the Vactican, the Pope's residence. The communication was full of falsehood, which was bad enough, but the editor desired to have it still more so, and in his editorial comment, he stated it was from good "democratic authority." Mr. Waterman denied the statement in toto, and demanded to know the author. They have not responded, because they knew it was a lie in the first place, and back clear down by a sickly attempt at something without sense, which they doubtless regard as very funny. We nail the lie to their mast head, and pronounce the whole as a base fabrication, the beautiful conception of which is only equalled by the brilliant failure they have made in getting the public to believe it.

NEWVILLE P. O. ROBBERY.

The Postoffice at Newville was robbed of a lot of stamps about two weeks ago in open day. After the theft was disclosed an effort was made to discover the thief, and by a fortuitous circumstance last Saturday it was crowned with success. At Coburn & Fetter's store the money box is so located that a person can reach it from over the counter, and they discovered on this day that it had been reached and that a ten dollar bill had stuck to the fingers of the one who done the reaching. A young man by the name of L. McClellan, living near Hicksville, Ohio, but employed in Newville, was suspicioned. The authorities made a decent upon him when he unhesitately disgorged, and owned up that he had taken the money, and also banded over about six dollars' worth of postage stamps, as the result of his forage on the postoffice. He had been loafing round the postoffice and laid down on the counter, and when no one was looking he reached forth and got a handful of stamps which he put in his pocket and kept them there until the time he was arrested, evidently not finding any use for them in the meantime. He confessed all and was brought to this place and put in jail last Sunday morning. His mother is said to be quite simple and the son seems to have inherited quite largely of the same article. He don't seem to realize where he stands, and may be playing off for effect.

The Radical papers are now tapping the old live Democrats on the back and calling them the 'honest Democracy.' During the war it was "Copperhead" and 'traitor.' They now want to prevent the defeat of our military President, and, they call on our Democratic friends to help them. How do you like it?

HEAVY!

Formation of an As-tonishing Grant Club!

One Postmaster, One Sundy-school Superintendent!

AND

Seventeen Pensioners, All in a Line.

Thousand of hearts beat in lively response to a grand procession of twenty-six torches the other evening, not all for Grant. Just think of the effect, a marshal band heading a procession of 26 men, and you may form an idea of the exasperated condition of our populace. See them with their gleaming caps and gorgeous housings. Heads up, gentlemen. Don't go along the streets as if you were ashamed of yourselves. You are in the midst of a mighty conglomeration. The watchword is corruption with dishonesty for an alternate. Let it be yours. Inscribe it on the tablets of your hearts, providing there's room. Onward, not in the path of reform and peace, but onward to a nobler crown, for Grant.

THIN.

Meeting of "Straight Outs."

THE BLOODY TENTH

Only Two Counties Represented.

We fear that we will not be able to treat with becoming gravity the solemn concourse that met at Kendallville last Tuesday, for the purpose of appointing delegates to the Louisville Convention for the Tenth District.

There are occasions where solemnity is appropriate but that it should constitute the main feature of a political meeting, is something so original and unique in its design, that even the most circumspect may indulge in a smile without impropriety.—One should behold such a scene to appreciate it. But to the meeting. How a county, within whose sacred borders an august body is to assemble, can only muster two persons to do honor to her visits is a problem that can only be solved by special reference to the good sense of her citizens. Ten representatives from a great and prosperous district, teeming with her thousands speaks volumes for the cause thus represented.

There were good men among these, men of solid worth and high social standing, and we believe honest but misguided members of a party which has thrown aloft the banner of progress and is now marching along in one solid phalanx for honesty and reform. They have disagreed with the popular will, and while we respect them as men and citizens, we cannot but look upon them as antagonists to the great advancements now demanded by the country. Their meeting at Kendallville would indicate to all reasonable minds that such movements are not of the people, neither in sympathy with, nor provoked by them, and that when a few men attempt to arrogate to themselves the right to dictate to the many, they simply transcend the bounds of custom and enter into the ridiculous. Below we give the proceedings and call particular attention to the resolutions. In the first the word "submit" is inserted instead of "accept" as at Fort Wayne. Accept may do well enough for Fort Wayne, but Kendallville prefers submit. That word makes us feel good and we can roll it under our tongue as a sweet morsel. Then it shows pluck, and we can make a grand flourish and say we "submit." Its a big point gained and we stand here to-day the mighty conquerors.

PROCEEDINGS.

Meeting called to order and S. W. Sprott appointed Chairman and John Butt Secretary.

On motion a committee of three was appointed by the chair to draft resolutions, consisting of Messrs. C. M. Philips and B. F. Blair, of DeKalb, and Jas McConnell, of Noble. The following report was made and adopted:

Believing that the government of the United States is limited to the powers delegated by the States for specific purposes, having no original inherent power whatever, that the Union is Federal in character and incapable of existence without the States, that the perpetuation of the Union depends upon the preservation of the integrity of the States.

Resolved, That while as law abiding citizens we submit to the so called amendments to the constitution added by the party in power, we still condemn and hold as infamous the illegal manner by which their adoption was secured.

2nd. That we repudiate with scorn and indignation the corrupt bargain at Baltimore whereby the Democratic party was handed over to a handful of disaffected Radicals, headed by Horace Greeley.

3d. That we favor a tariff for revenue only, that we regard as vicious and oppressive, the whole theory of protection, and, therefore, cannot support for President the most violent advocate of that theory.

On motion S. W. Sprott, of DeKalb, and Jas. McConnell, of Noble, were appointed as delegates to the Louisville convention, and John Butt, of DeKalb, and J. B. Kelly were appointed a committee to confer with others in each county of the district and a point electors and act as a central committee. All papers in the district were requested to publish proceedings.

S. W. Sprott, Chairman.
John Butt, Sec'y.

A NEW PARTY IN THE FIELD!

OR A

Coalition of all Parties!

Calculated to surpass the Grant or Greeley Dynasty. Its adaptation to the wants of both parties are such that scores of people will flock to its support. A grand universal meeting will be held from day to day at the popular store of Messrs. Wood & Williams, Auburn, Indiana, where all may participate. Let there be a grand turn out. Men, women and children are expected to meet and join the enterprise. It needs no long political frothy speech to demonstrate that this is the place for all parties, all creeds and tongues to feast their eyes and satisfy their minds that goods of all classes are sold cheaper here than at any other place in the county.

And be it further remembered that Wood & Williams are selling goods which they buy directly in New York,—of the latest styles—bought since the taking off of the duty, and consequently can sell cheaper than those who replenish their stocks with shoddy goods from Fort Wayne, with the duty added. We hope that all will avail themselves of the privilege of examing our stocks so that they may know how it is themselves.

A CARD.

To the people of DeKalb County and adjourning counties, we extend our sincere thanks for the kind and liberal patronage, and treatment received at your hands since we have come in your midst, and thrust that we may be worthy of a continuance of the same, promising, as in the past, to deal fairly and honorably with you in all our transactions. With our best wishes we are,

Yours Respectfully,
Wood & Williams.

Lots of people that have never been in Fort Wayne and are not acquainted can find the Red Front clothing hall, No. 5, Keystone block. Any woman or child can find this place, and you will save from 20 to 25 cents on each dollar.

Buffalo Land.

We are in receipt of this new and most agreeable volume of over 500 pages from the press of E. Hannaford & Co., (Publishers of first-class subscription books, Cin. & Chicago) The author is Hon. W. E. Webb, of Topeka, Kansas, long and widely known from his connection with the interests of emigration, and a strikingly original and popular humorist.

It describes the wealth and wonders, the mysteries and marvels of the boundless West. It is superbly illustrated, containing no less than fifty-three original and striking engravings, from actual photographs and designs by Prof. Henry Worrall, and executed (the enterprising publishers assure us) at a total cost of over $2,000.

In a short review like this, it is, of course, impossible to convey a perfect idea of this admirable work. To any one who has the least touch of the 'Western Fever,' it must prove really invaluable; and for all classes of readers, without exception, it is the liveliest and most laugh-provoking book we have seen for many a day. It abounds with valuable information, the reliability of which is vouched for by Governor Harvey, of Kansas, and others.

'Buffalo Land' embraces a wide and varied range of topics, among them the following:

Details of great interest and importance concerning the natural features, vast resources, rapid development and almost incredible progress of the far western States and Territories, with glimpses of their mighty future.

Fresh and authentic information, from official sources, respecting the supply of fuel and lumber available for use on the great plains; the cost of a farm, what the emigrant should bring with him, stock-raising at the west, &c.

A full summary of the Homestead and Preemption laws and regulations, prepared by a former Register of the U. S. Land office.

Full and accurate descriptions of the habits, characteristics, &c., of the savage red man, buffalo, wolf, &c., is found in their native wilds and on the out-skirts of civilization.

Graphic and thrilling narratives of hunting adventures, stalking the bison, encounters with Indians, &c.

Vivid pictures of life on the frontiers; the past and present of the Great Plains; the vast inland sea, and the marvelous animal with which it once teemed.

Highly interesting account of the geological wonders of the west, antiquarian and scientific researches, &c.

The publishers desire agents for everywhere, allowing exclusive territory and the most liberal commissions. The firm is a prompt and reliable one. We give their address in full: E. Hannaford & Co., 192 West Madison-st., Chicago. Many of our readers will want this book, and agents will make money rapidly in its sale.

The Folio has come again—this time the September number. It is 'just the thing' to read during these warm Summer hours. The contents are admirable. Embracing the conclusion of the 'Sweet Bye and Bye;' 'Anton Rubinstein;' 'Strauss and Lothian; 'Wagner's Beethoven;' 'How Barnum paid the Trombone Player.' The music in the number is excellent, and comprises Strauss' famous Waltz, 'Wine Wife and song;' C. A. White's beautiful ballad, 'Kitty May,' (published in sheet form, with highly colored lithographic title), and Bayley's 'Softly now the Light of Day,'—in all nine pages of the very best music. The premium Chromo 'Two to one,' is going like wildfire. The Folio and Chromo is only $1.00 a year. Single copies 10 cents. Address the publishers, White, Smith & Perry, Boston.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given to the owners or part owners of lots numbered 43, 44, 113 114, 115, 116, 67 and 72 on Van Buren-st. and lots numbered 152 on 4th-st., be notified that unless they plank so much of the sidewalk as lies fronting their respective lots or part lots, within thirty days of such notice the marshal shall proceed to advertise and let the same to the lowest bidder, the expense of which shall be charged against the respective lots.

But sells for READY PAY, and small profits.

Would also request all those knowing themselves to be indebted to him, either by note or account to come and settle, as he is determined to collect outstanding debts.

Thankful for past patronage he hopes still to receive a share of the same, by strict attention to business.

CHARLEY KLOTZ.

The Mosquito.

[illegible] hundred years ago [illegible] Barbut, writing enthusiastically of the perfect construction of the mosquito, says;

It is impossible to behold, and not admire the amazing structure of its sting. One undergoes with pleasure a puncture that enables us to observe how this [illegible] acts. Of course the world contains few who feel the [illegible] of the naturalist, when the poisonous sting follows the irritating hum of the hated and dreaded mosquito; still there are many who will find very interesting a lengthy article about it and its habits in a late numer of the Scientifi. American.—The male mosquito lives a short, idle life, doing little harm, and subsisting upon the sweets gathered from flowers, having a dainty preference for lilies, in whose creamy petalled bells he pensively swings. The female is the noisy, aggressive sex, and makes life a burden to those unfortunate mortals encountering her. She stings them and 'brags' about it, and, not content with her own evil career, every month deposits one hundred eggs in some cool, damp place, thus multiplying and perpetuating her kind.

Help Yourself.

Fight your own battles. Hoe your own row. Ask no favors of anyone, and you'll succeed five thousand times better than one who is always beseeching some one's influence or patronage. No one will ever help you as you can help yourself, because no one will be so heartily interested in your affairs.—The first step will not be such a long one, perhaps; but carving your own way up the mountain, you make one lead to another, and stand firm in that while you chop another out.

Men who have made fortunes are not those who have had five thousand dollars give them to start with, but boys who have started fair with a well earned dollar or two. Men who have acquired fame have never been thrust into popularity by pulls begged or paid for, or given in friendly spirit. They have outstretched their own hands and touch the public heart.

Men who win love do their own wooing, and I never knew a man fall so signally as one who induced his affectionate grand-mother to speak a good word for him. Whether you work for fame, for love, for money, or for any thing else, wo.k with your hands and heart and brain. So 'I will,' and some day you will conquer. Never let any man say, 'I have dragged you up,' Too many friends sometimes hurt a man more than none at all.—Grace Greenwood.

An Acrobat in Luck.

A wonderful acrobat has recently been discovered in California in the person of a miner named L. P. Ward. He was offered an opportunity to locate a mining claim in Tuolumne Co., and get part of the proceeds. The next morning he found himself one of a half dozen in search of the same spot, but a swollen torrent rushed madly across their path, and they were compelled to stop. To try to ford or swim was certain death. While standing on the bank Ward descried a wire high in the air by means of which an iron water pipe had once been carried across the stream, and in a moment more he had reached it and began to walk toward the other shore. Just above the deepest part of the whirling stream the man slipped and fell.—He caught himself by one hand, and amid the hush of terrible expectancy he lightly regained the wire. In another moment he revealed the 'trick' by hanging on one leg, hanging by his [illegible] to the other side. Poetic justice was satisfied by the discovery of a claim of fabulous value, by means of which Ward was freed from all necessity of doing the 'tight rope' act hereafter as a means of livelihood.

Fisk as a Financier.

I have observed going the rounds lately an extract purporting to be from a New York letter, to the effect that, if James Fisk, Jr., had not been killed when he was, he would have become a street-loafer; that his capacity as a business man had been vastly overrate; and that he was just on the eve of financial collapse. Nothing could be absurder than this to any one at all acquainted with Fisk's shrewdness, perspicacity, and extraordinary executive ability. On moral goounds, no one could well defend Fisk; but, merely as a man of business, independent of principle and integrity, much may be said in his behalf. He was a money-maker, if there ever was one.—It was as natural for him to make money as it was to breathe, or boast, or swagger. He understood his kind, at least its weaknesses; he was very far sighted, and had a keen understanding of character, whenever his inordinate vanity was not involved. It was coarsely and profanely said of Fisk, on the announcement of his death, that he had gone to Tophet, and would soon get up a corner in brimstone. Barring the brutality of the jest, the spirit of is was true in respect to Fisk. Had Fisk been left on an uninhabited island, where he could have had only monkeys for companions, I am sure he would have contrived some means to turn them to his profit, even if he had been compelled to buy them of themselves at a discount, and sell them back to themselves at par. He had, in an eminent degree, all the mental qualities which constitue a successful fiancier. No operator in Wall street was more astute, quicker to percive any possible advantage in a trade, or more capable of informing a profitable combination for any purpose of gain. The most experienced and prosperous speculaters stood in awe of him; and it has frequently been said, with truth, that he was the only man in New York who ever frighten Cornolius Vanderbilt, and compelled him to 'back down' —Chicago Tribune.

The London bootblacks were a regular uniform, and, under the direction of the policy authorities, are posted at convenient points thoroughout the city.

The girls of the St. Louis Normal school all wear calico dresses.

Effects of Tomatoes.

The tomato is one of the most healthful as well as most universally liked of all the vegetables. Its healthy qualities do not depend on the mode of preparation for the table; it may be eaten three times a day, cold or hot, cooked or raw, alone, or with salt, pepper, vinegar, or altogether, to a like advantage, and in the utmost quantity that can be taken with an appetite. Its healthful quality arises from its slight acidity; in this respect as valuable, perhaps, as berries, currants, and similar fruits. The tomato season ends with the frost; if hung up in a well-ventilated cellar, with the tomatoes handing to the vines, the 'love-apple' will continue to ripen until Christmas. The cellar should not be too dry, nor too warm. The knowledge of this may be improved to great advantage for the benefit of invalids, and of all who are fond of the tomato.

Brave Baltimoreans they are who die in their native city, and take the risk of obituary poetry in the Sun.

Sewing

Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and sti, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which everyone should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey and a little care taken in examination of routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R." running from Chicago, through Galesburg to Burlington, and the "I., B. & W. Route," running from Indianapolis, through Bloomington to Burlington, have achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading passenger routes to the west. At Burlington they connect with the B. & M. R. R. and from the great Burlington route, which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories and passenger starting from DeKalb county, on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the Burlington route.

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B & M. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

CLERGYMAN'S TESTIMONY!

AS TO

GRANT'S DRINKING HABITS!

The Grant papers have been making a great ado of late, over an accusation that the Hon. B. Gratz Brown, Liberal candidate for Vice President, was guilty, recently, at New Haven, Conn., of placing himself under the influence of liquor. This accusation, originating from an obscure quarter, has been thoroughly refuted by the testimony of Governor English and other prominent gentlemen, who were with Governor Brown during the whole of his sojourn in that city; and the State officers of Missouri and a large number of leading citizens of the capitol of that State, have, of their own accord borne public testimony to the extremely temperate habits of the Governor. The organs of the Administration, pay no attention to the disproof of the charge, but continue to circulate and comment upon the original slander.

People who live in glass houses should not throw stones; and the question of temperance, in connection with the habits of National candidates is one that the Administrationists would do well to avoid discussing as they will discover by a perusal of the following letter:

OFFEE OF THE NATIONAL HARBINGER WASHINGTON, D. C., July 30th, 1872.

MY DEAR SIR: I am this morning in receipt of your letter of the 28th inst., asking for the exact truth with regard to the drinking habits of President Grant.

In giving you the information of the facts that are known to exist in this important national matter, allow me to promise that I have always, at all times, and in all places been a friend of our Chief Magistrate.

I was one of the first to advocate his being brought from his command at the West to the front end of Richmond.

I wrote a book of his life, known as "The Tanner Boy," which had a wide circulation.

I was extremely anxious to to vindicate him on the temperance question, and was glad on his coming to Washington to learn that for one year immediately prreceding and connected with his inagration he almost entirely abstained from the habitual use of strong drink.

It was during this period, and for a short interim succeeding, that he was recognized in the manner spoken of by the excellent woman (Mrs. Mary J R. Buell), to whom you refer in your letter.

But I regret to be under the necessity of informing you that an unfavorable change has come over the personal habits of President Grant in this respect.

I am solemnly bound in honor to say, from the facts of which I have possession, that no consistent temperance man can support him.

It cannot be denied in Washington that he has on several occasions been seen under the influence of liquor.—The times and places can be specified if they are demanded. The parties who saw him in this condition can be produced.

In a conversation last winter with Senator Henry Wilson, that gentleman said to me:

'President Grant drinks to much;' and concluded with the remark:

'I have told him so.'

Senator Wilson will not deny this fact.

Many other similar facts can be adduced.

A gentleman well and favorably known in Washington, one who has long occupied a public position at the National Capitol, informs me that on the night immediately following the last great speech of Senator Sumner, two respectable citizens, walking together in Jackson Square, encountered Grant.

He was in a state of intoxication, his hat was slouched over his eyes, he had a lighted cigar in his mouth, and he was staggering along, muttering to himself.

The names of all these parties are at command.

Another Washington resident, of unimpeachable veracity, has also informed me, within the last ten days that there is good evidence for stating that the real reason why President Grant made such a hurried exit from the capitol for Long Branch, when so much important public business demanded his attention, and when several Senators and Representatives were so ditterly disappointed at not meeting him, according to appointments he himself had made, was this:

That he was so much under the influence of liquor that he was not fit for interviews in the Executive Mansion.

Names of responsible parties are at hand who will substantiate this statement.

A scholar of established reputation and high moral character writes, within a short time past, to one the most distinguished men of the country on this subject of the drinking habits of President Grant.

The letter is dated at Cambridge, Massachusetts, and I have been permitted to copy from it the facts that are well known to many, to-wit; that the last appearance of Grant in connection with the exercises of Harvard University, was such as to excite a general feeling of anxiety and disgust among all who witnessed it. He was carefully observed by those immediately around him, and the aspects of his inebriety cannot be mistaken.

An old resident of the city of Baltimore, Maryland, only a few weeks ago accompanied a party of friends to the Presidential mansion, where, on being admitted to an audience with Grant, they found him to be so much under the influence of liquor that they immediately closed the interview and withdrew.

An officer in the Civil Service, now a permanent inhabitant of Washington states that during one of his trips on a steamer from New York to the East, President Grant was known by several parties to be excited by strong drink to a disgusting extent.

Should any of these facts be denied by responsible parties the proof will be produced. I make these statements with sincere regret.

I am accountable to my God for the truth of every word.

I remain, dear sir, your obedient servant,

C. W. DENISON,
Editor and proprietor of the "National Harbinger, Washington, D. C.
J. T. Yarrington, Esq., Carbondale, Pa.

OFFICE OF HON. JAMES BLACK }
DANCASTER, Pa., Aug. 8, '72. }

DEAR SIR: I have he pleasure to acknowledge you several recent letters, forwarded to me from Washington, for which favors be pleased to accept my thanks.

The statements of facts I submitted, at your request, proving "the truth, the whold truth, and nothing but the truth," with regard to the drinking habits of Grant, were placed entirely at your disposal.

If, therefore, you think their publication will do good at the present time, you are at liberty to publish them.

Yours, truly,
CHARLES WHEELER DENISON.

A Squall.

By a squall in Delaware Bay last week, while sailing in a yacht, two young men were overtaken. At Nazareth church, on on Twelfth street, Philadelphia, at public worship they had occasionally looked the capsizing of their shallop was very nearly inevitable.

Bill, said one to the other, this is serious business; can you pray?

No, I can't; I've heard Joe Quinn do it, and I've listened to Bill Post; but I can't do it myself.

Well, you can sing a hymn, can't you? For God's sake do something.

No I can't sing here. How can I sing when this boat at any moment may drown us both?

Well we must do something religious.—If you can't pray and can't sing let's take up a collection.

To this Bill consented. In his companion's hat he deposited thirteen pennies, a corkscrew and a broken-bladed knife. As he did this the wind lulled and the shallop made a successful landing.

Changing the Subject.

An attentive "little pitcher" had heard her father instruct older brothers and sisters that when, in course of conversation, a subject came up that seemed to be disagreeable to any one present, etiquette demanded that it should be cahnged as quickly as possible. Some days after, her fater said to her,

Mary, papa wants you to be very careful, if you play in the garden to-day, not to touch the hyacinths. Will you remember?

Of course she would, but on papa's return in the evening he found his hyacinths picked, and the marks of the little feet in the garden bed.

Calling Mary up to him he looked very grave and said:

My dear, you remember that I told you particularly not to touch the hyacinths, and now I find them picked and no one has been in the garden but you. How is this?

Mary laughed and said:

Oh, papa, it was splendid in the garden to-day. I say a beautiful little bird's nest, and there was a very large butterfly——

Wait, my child. I am talking to you about something else now. Don't you understand me? I am very seriously displessed with you. I told you not to touch the hyacinths, and now I find them picked and your foot-prints all about.

Oh, papa, I did have the loveliest time in the garden to-day. Don't you think it was a beautiful day?

Mary, how dare you answer me so impertinently! I am talking to you about your disobedience. Why do you not attend to me, Mary? I shall have to make you.

Rather sobered at this suggestion, 'little pitcher's countenance fell, and she faltered out:

Why, papa, you said that when a subject became unpleasant to any one, the only way was to change it. Papa saw the point, and the unpleasant subject was dropped for that once.

The Railroad Hog.

'This seat is taken sir.' All persons who have traveled to any extent are familiar with this formula. It tells the story of the railroad hog—the small-souled, mean, selfish brute, who pays grudgingly for one seat and strains his small wit to hold two. This particular hog wore a plug hat shiny with the genuine Boston gloss, an enameled shirt and closely-cropped iron grey beard. I know his kind. He is an eminently respectable beast who always pays his debts promptly, takes an interest in Sunday schools, administers to his deceased brother's children out of their patrimony, is the President of joint stock companies, and has biographical eulogies published in the newspapers when he finally kicks the bucket.

I knew the hog lied when he said 'This seat is taken, sir,' but I found one 'that was not taken, sir,' and watched him to see how many times he would reproduce the falsehood. The coach was rather full and would you believe me, the miserable hog told sixteen separate and distinct lies in order to gratify his mean selfishness.—Enough to sink a healthier soul to perdition. He varied the formula; one time it was the wave of the hand and a look to the rear of the car to indicate that the holder of the seat had gone for a drink of water and would be back soon. Another time to the inquiry of a mild-mannered and timid questioner, he replied by a solid stare, and then spreading himself a little wider he resumed the perusal of his newspaper.

I was tempted to crawl up behind him and hiss in his ear, 'You're an awful liar.' But I had my revenge. A big red-faced two hundred pounder, in a dirty linen coat, came in at a way station. He was sweaty to a fearful condition. His feet smelt like valcaisnate of ammonia and rotten fish, and his breath was a hot, stinking sirrocco, based on bad whisky and onions. This bemoth preferred to settle himself in the seat that was taken. This seat is———began the hog.

Well, I guess I'll take it till the other fellow comes, returned the sweetsmelling heavy weight, and down he plumped, partially crushing the hog in his descent.

The latter frowned and began to bluster, but the red-faced ruffian soon took that out of him with a threat to swallow him whole—to chaw him up and spit him out—to pitch him out of the window and to make various other dispositions of him in case he did'nt simmer down.

Our porcine friend simmered, and then the barbarian grew good humored. He told funny anecdotes and poked the hog in the ribs. He wanted to know where he was going. He spit quarts of tobacco juice across him out of the window, spattering his shirt front, between his boots and all around. He offered him a chaw every time he took out his plug of navy. The hog perspired freely, and shivered with disgust. Finally he crawled out and stood up for forty miles until another seat was vacated.

THE POT OF GOLD!

BY REBECCA HARDING DAVIS.

Lieutenant Calderwood was at his sister's house on a visit during his two week's furlough. He was sitting with her one evening in the parlor, while her two children were studying their lessons at the table in an adjoining room.

"So Paul is a lazy scholar eh?" said the Lieutenant lowering his voice.

"No, not at all. He is diligent enough providing his studies suit his fancy.—But what are they?" If you look over his shoulder now, you'll find him poring over some 'Book of dreams,' or the 'History of Captain Kidd and his treasures' instead of his school books.—The boy is deranged on the subject of growing rich sudenly at some master-stroke. I wish you would talk to him. You are supreme with him just now.—It may be you could ridicule him out of his absurdity; I cannot.

"But ought he to be ridiculed?"

'James!"

"Well call Clara in and I'll go and talk to him."

Mrs. Forbes beconed her little girl to her, and the Lieutenant sauntered away into the back room, and, I am sorry to say, lighted a cigar.

"Well Paul my boy, hard at it? What's the book—Latin or algebra.'

Paul colored a little. "Oh I can run over my lessons in the morning. the're so horrible dull. "I'm reading now."

"Head of your classes, I hope aren't you?"

Paul laughed "No indeed; nearer the other end. Well the truth is," throwing down his book and leaning over confidential, "I've got it into my head to make money." Mother has hard work to get along with Clara and me"

"I know, Paul, said the Lieutenant, gravely.

"Now what good does this scanning of dead languages and poring over cube roots do? How much meat will that put in the pot?"

"How do you intend to aid your mother.

"Well sir," whispered Paul eagerly for this was his first patient listener, "if I had a lange sum of money that I could get all at once without any delay— a large sum—then afterward I could make a scholar or anything else of myself.'

The Lieutenant drew the book Paul had been reading toward him, "Revelations by Clairvoyance and Spiritualism regarding Hidden Treasures.". Paul watched him keenly as he read the title over, but not the vestige of a smile flitted over the Lieutenants face.

"I'll tell you candidly; uncle about it." (hithing his chair nearer). 'Fred Parker came from Jersy near where Kidd buried his treasure. You know the place?'

"Not precisely, do you?"

"Not the exact spot; but it is near Burlington. Kidd burried the chest and then called on his men to know who would stand guard over it for a hundred years. So one fellow stepped out and stood firm while Kidd shot him through the heart. So they burried him standing over the chest with a drawn sword in his hand. You've heard the incident?"

"Yes but"—

'How will I find the place? Well,"—Paul began to fidget a little turning over the leaves of the book.

"Perhaps you will laugh at me uncle, qut I don't see why you should.—The ancients called in the aids of oracles and dreams. They knew how to read coming events in the flight of birds or by the entrails of beasts. If we cannot do so it seems to me it is because we have lost the power, not because the signs are not there to read.—The wisest men have not been ashamed to be superstitious. It is only fools who think there is nothing in the world but what they can see and handle."

"I quite agree with you with regard to the fools, Paul."

Paul, who was defiant hitherto blushed with pleasure. 'I don't know' he continued, "what credit to give to spiritual mediums. Fact is I've run after them till I'm about tired. They've got all my last two quarters allowances, and so I've got to go without new clothes this winter. But if I could succeed! If I could only find the pot or chest! Just think it would make mother easy life.

'Very true.' said his uncle.

They were both silent for a while, the Lieutenant smoking and Paul turning over the leaves of his book with a feverish haste glancing up now and then at his uncle.

"What first put this matter into your head. Haul.'

"I don't know. And then Fred Parker told his stories of Kidd's treasures, and I see these clairvoyant advertisements in the papers every day.—"

"As to these mediums," said Lieutenant Calderwood thoughtfully, "my opinion is that they will take your money and you will get information in return. I have no belief in their ability to tell you anything you do not know already yourself. A friend of mine Captain Johns told me of a woman, a fortune teller, who made some remarkable predictions—very remarkable indeed.—She schetched out his whole career for him.'

"Who was she? where is she to be found?" cried Paul, forgetting to ask whether the prophesies proved true or not—and they were most ridiculously absurd and untrue.

"At No 81 Poplar street." said his uncle after several minutes hesitation. "She was only to be consulted at night. But that was several years ago."

"I'll go and see her tomorrow night" said Paul. He was more nervous and unsettled than usual that evening and sat looking into the fire for a long time.

"The boy is ruined," sighed his mother; nothing will ever restore him to common sense and usefulness."

"It is a long day until sunset," said her brother quoting his favor to proverb.

The next night Paul put on his over coat just after supper, and his last dollar in his pocket. His uncle had not been home during the afternoon. Paul kised his mother goop-by once or twice.

'Where are you going my son?'

"To make our fortune," he said gayly as he ran out.

No 81 Poplar street was soon found. It was a narrow dark entry lighted by a red lamp, which gave a ghostly and murderous light. Paul went up the the winding stairs, and found at the top a door with a placard, on which was printed with a common pen:

"MADAM D'AUBREY, SEERESS,'.

Paul tapped. No answer. He tapped again.

"Enter." said a hoarse voice within.

He pushed the door open and went in. The room was bare of furniture except another red lamp which shed its bloody glare over the gray walls, and a black antibue chain in which sat a tall gaunt woman. She was robed in a loose falling habit from head to foot. Her face of which Paul could see but little but the chin was deathly pale. Now and then he caught the glimps of a pair of keen eyes which he thought was both fierce and threatening.

"I came to consult you," he stammered.

The black covered head nodded.—"It is unnecessary to explain yourself further. Your name is paul Forbes.—You want to know by what means you may obtain a certain treasure,

Paul was terrified. The other mediums that he had consulted had never told him actual facts.

"When do you hold asseance?"

"Now in a hoarse grating voice. I need no trumpery tables nor cards, nor machinery. Do you ask if I can see into futurity? You have a scar on your shoulder beneath your clothes, an unhealed wound below your knee. If I can tell you about these things that others eyes cannot see, you can afford to trust me to whatever else I may say.. Ask what you will and I will answer."

'How am I to obtain the treasure?" said Paul,

"How should I know what treasure you mean? But pause." The figure moved her hand slowly to her forehead muttered for a few moments, then slowly took it down and looked pierceingly at the terrified Paul.

'The pot of gold waits for you enough to give you fortune and power. Here are the directions by which you are to obtain it.' She placed a small slip of paper in his hand.

"On these conditions," she said in a hollow whisper, "that you solve the mystery of this paper alone. You are to receive no assistance in reading it; if you do all is lost. Begone; you are answered."

Paul placed the money in her outstretched hand, and went stumbling down stairs under the red lamp.

The next morning at daybreak he was knocking at the door of his uncles chamber.

"What is this?' showing him a paper full of figures, lines, and diagrams "don't read it to me. Only tell me what sort of a puzzle it is."

The Lieutenant raised himself upon his elboe, smothering a yawn. "It seems to be a mathemathical puzzle, Paul—the description of some locality I think. I wont interpret it to you. It would need a good topographical engineer to do that. Where did you pick it up?"

Paul muttered out something and disappeared.

A week afterward the Lieutenant returned to his regiment. He noticed Paul busy with his mathematics and his slate and pencil. The dream-book was laid upon the shelf.

Several months after, Mrs. Forbes writing to her brohter said.

"I have something to tell you of Paul which I know will please you. Much to my surprise he took the first prize in mathematics at school last term.—Finding prize taking agreeable, I presume he has devoted himself to all his studies with renewed aciduity. But mathematics seem to be a passion with the boy. He told me that he designed studying topographical engineering.—The very profession I would have chosen for him. I cannot tell you how thankful I was at his sudden change"

The Lieutenant laughed but made no other sign,

He heard from his sister but at long intervals as he was stationed on the frounteer; but every letter brought accounts of Paul's incessant study labor, in the one direction.

Whether the hope of the treasure still urged him on or whether he found that mathematics were his proper work and that for which his talents and real tastes best fited him, we cannot say.—But it is certain that at the end of three years he was ready to enter the highest class in practicle surveying of the Polytechnic College.

A year later, Lieutenant Calderwood was seated in the door of his tent when two or three strangers dashed up, and a stout bearded, bright eyed young fellow jumped of his horse, caught him by the sholder, shook him and laughed, and ended by kissing him like a girl.

"Paul Forbes! Bless you boy! How did you come here?"

Paul jumped to his feet turned red, and then burst into a shout of laughter.

'You were the seeress? I know you were!"

The Lieutenant nodded. Do you begrudge the dollar for the prophecy? he said "As I look back now, I don't quite approve of my manner of teaching you your lesson, but you have showed yourself a better scholar than I feared."

"Been appointed Assistant Surveyor of this Territory, sir. Attached to the exploration party under General Hay. I can't tell you all now, only that I have the position for ten years, at a fine salary, and mother and Clara are snug and happy as they were before.—What do you think of that, Uncle Jem?

Uncle Jem wrung his hand. 'Think? Why that you must have worked hard to achieve so much Paul.'

"Yes, yes, it took hard work! Nodding. It's queer to, what trifles will drive a fellow on the rode, eh!"

Several months after, the Lieutenant came upon Paul one day, who was looking at a bit of yellow paper, covered with figures and lines.

'Do you know,' said he, looking up, 'there's a puzzle that took me years to make out? I did it just before I left home, and I found the answer to it—nothing.

The Lieutenant smiled. 'Hard, healthful study, a good profession and a good income will not serve for a pot of gold, then, Paul?' he said with a shrewd twinkling in his eye.

The Fraudulent Voting in North Carolina—Some of the Proof.

From the Raleigh Sentinel.

The amount of fraudulent voting that was done by the Radicals in the late election staggers belief. Read the following from the Wilmington Journal. This is merely the begining. Let our friends hunt up every instance of fraud, intimidation, or bribery:

In Bladen County the voting is put down at 2,610. The number of votes actually cast is 2,656.

In Cumberland County the voting strength is put down at 3,222. The number of votes actually cast is 3,733.

In Duplin County, the voting population is put down at 2,969. The number of votes actually cast is 3,485.

In Franklin County the voting strength is put down at 2,270. The number of votes actually cast is 3,035.

In Halifax County the voting strength is put down at 4,455. The actual number of votes cast for Governor in the late election is 5,307, Be it remembered that it was in Halifax County the registration books were said to have been lost.

In Lenior County the voting strength is put down at 2,081, The number of votes cast was 2,264.

In Nashville County the voting strength is put down at 2,181. The number of votes cast is 2,577. The increase is, in part, however, accounted for by the recent annexation of a part of Edgecomb Co., to Nash.

In Northampton County the voting strength is put down at 2,901. The number of votes actually cast is 3,214.

In Robeson County the voting strength is put down at 3,043. The number of votes actually cast is 3,214.

In Sampson County the voting strength is put down at 2,986. The vote actually cast is 3 131.

How's This.

A dinner party was in progress during the brilliant display of northern lights, and a gentleman, stepping out to cool his burning brow, was startled about the display about the frosty pole. He stood perfectly amazed, then turning to the window he saw within the wife of his bosom sitting with the ladies waiting for their liege lords to end their champagne and cigars. Pushing aside the lace curtain he beckoned Mrs. Agnes ——to come out. She complied, when he said to her solemnly:

Wagnes, d'er see anything extronery now?

Yes, Dolly, I see that you have been drinking too much wine.'

No, not that, Wagnes; I mean extronory phernomonums in the amosphere, you know?

Why—where, Dolly?

Upper yonder, sir.

Why, dear me, yes; I do indeed—the most brilliant aurora I ever saw.

Wagnes, are things a-shootin'?

Yes, dear.

And a-flashin', Wagnes?

Yes, Dolly.

An' a sorter spreadin' and dancin', eh, Wagnes?

All that, my dear.

Ho! ho: laughed the husband, much relieved. Do you know,—Wagnes—when I come out an' saw the celestial phenomonums glowin' upper yonder, damn, me effer I did'nt think I was drunk.

COMMITTEE MEETING.

The Democratic Central Committee of the county will meet at the Court House, on next at 3 o'clock P. M. Every member should be present as business of importance will come before the meeting.

Saturday, Sept. 7th,'72

D. Z. HOFFMAN,
Chairman.

The Vermont election took place last Tuesday. There are no returns as yet to indicate the result.

The Louisville Convention assembled Tuesday, when O'Conor's letter declining the nomination was read.

Congressman Getz, Representative from the Burks District of Pennsylvania, denies that he is in sympathy with Grantites, but upon the contrary declares himself in favor of the Liberal movement and supports Greeley and Brown.

THE reason of the close connection between the Grant and Blanton Duncan movement is now explained. Henry Wilson and Duncan were both Know-Nothings in 1855. The remembrance of the oath they both voluntarily took, binding themselves to keep all foreign-born citizens out of office, and to make them live in this country for twenty-one years before even voting, has been a bond of union. They were together in the party of Hate then; they are in the party of Hate now.

L. P. MILLIGAN says, in a letter to the Huntington Democrat, "that it would be foreign to the purpose of this letter to state the reasons why I intend to vote for Mr. Greeley. I will, perhaps do this in some other form before the State election. For the present suffice it to say that it is not from any admiration of Mr. Greeley's record or attainments as a statesman; nor, on the other hand, is it from any defects in the private character of Gen. Grant. And still I hope to be able to satisfy those who have thought as I have, and feel as I have, on this subject, that it is the best we can do, however much we may regret the circumstances, or doubt the wisdom of the management which forces upon us the unpleasant alternative.

L. P. M.

We have received a letter from Gen Williams, of Warsaw, stating that the Republicans will hold the rally of the season at Warsaw on the 26th of Sept. that there will be present from five to seven speakers of national reputation. They want to have present on that occasion not less than 25,000 people and of that number they expect Whitley county to contribute from five hundred to one thousand. Let us turn out and help, citizens of Whitley.—Whitley Com.

Yes, things look bad in Kosciusko, and Rough Williams makes a personal appeal to all his friends outside to get up a show. But the great backbone of corruption and thieving has been broken in that county, and honest men have risen up from both parties and declared that honesty and capability hereafter shall be recognized. The big meeting which greeted Clay warries them and now they propose to show off.

The Maine Election.

A correspondent of the Springfield Massachusetts, Republican, who has spent several weeks in Maine, writes under date of August 20, what he thinks will be the result of the political campaign in that State. Maine always casts a larger vote in September than in November. In 1856 the whole vote was 119,814; In 1860 it was 124,135; and in 1868 it reached 132.782. It is possible that this vote may be increased to 135,000.

In the Fourth District, the Republican candidate is Mr. S. F. Hersey, who is feebly opposed, and who will be elected by at least 2,000 majority.

In the Fifth District Mr. Hale son-in-law of Senator Chandler, and present member, is opposed by Mr. Fridric A. Pike. The contest is close.—Hale who has been aided by all the political machinery and by large money contributions, is also supported by one Perry Supervisor of Internal Revenue in North Carolina whose business it is to purchase votes and manage the corruption. It is considered that, unless Perry can buy a considerable number of Democratic votes, Pike will be elected. The general result as indicated at the date of the letter, was: Republican majorities—First District 500; Second 2,000; Third 1,5‘0; Fourth, 2,000; total 6,000. Liberal—Fifth District, 500. Net Republican majority, 5,500. It is possible that the Liberals may carry the First District and lose the Fifth, as there will be many changes before the date of election.

The conclusion of the writer is that the Republican party may maintain its supremacy in Maine this year, but that a revolution is not far off. The Republican editorial says that a reduction of Perham's majority to 5,000 or thereabouts, will give the State to Greeley in November.

Henry Wilson and Grant's Drinking Habits.

Hon. J. M. Usher, one of the most prominent men in Massachusetts, has written a letter to Henry Wilson in regard to Grant's drinking habits, in which he severely criticises Mr. Wilson's reply to Rev. Charles W. Denison, and puts to that gentleman the following plump questions, which will tax him to the utmost to answer, notwithstanding his well known experience in squeezing out of small places.

"I ask, was Mr. Denison's statement unqualifiedly false, taking your own explanation into the account? Do you not believe in a total abstinance? If used at all as a beverage by the President, does he not use too much.

Why did you regret that he used intoxicating liquors at all? Why did you wish him to take the pledge?

Why did you have a mind to ask him to join the Congressional Temperance Society?

Was it not honestly because you had good reasons to believe that he could not use it at all without using it "too much?" Was it not that you believed the pledge would be a restraint, and, that if he were a member of the Congressional Temperance Society, that would serve as aid to keep him from drinking "too much?"

Do you not admit, substantially, every statement attributed to you by Mr. Denison? No man can fairly read and impartially judge without believing that he stated the facts, if he did not use your words."

The Whitley County "ring" went over to Pierceton last Saturday, and defeated Col. McDonald, of this place for the Senatorship. Dr. Marshal, of Pierceton, received the nomination, and is far inferior to McDonald as regards to statesmanship, learning &c. McDonald and his friends worked hard but it was no go. Kosciusko county with the assistance of the Whitley "ring" done the business.—Whitley Com.

From the way things are working in Whitley there is danger of an upheaval in the Democratic party, and by the very wise manoevering of some, the county will be given to the Republicans. The leaders of a party get very smart sometimes, and think they know all about it, but the people will not be managed by rings, from any party.—Better work for harmony than defeat. As to Mr. Marshal, the Grant men have not a single man that would represent them more ably than he, and we can say this without disparagement to Col. McDonald.

A Card From Albert Pike.

The New York Tribune publishes the following incisive card from Gen. Albert Pike:

"SIR—Was Henry Wilson a Know Nothing? You say that you are constantly receiving letters asking an answer to this question. I will answer it. I was a delegate and a member of the National council of the Know Nothing party in the summer of 1855, at Philadelphia, and one of seven delegates from a Southern State. I found present Senator Wilson in that body when I entered. He sat in it during the whole session, and he helped settle the platform, being one of the seven delegates of Massachusetts. To be there he had to have the sign, word and grip, and necessarily had taken the same oath that we had all taken on entering the order, i. e, not to assist in any way in elevating to any office of trust or profit any person of foreign birth or any Roman Catholics. The oath is as binding on him now as it was then. My name will assure you that I know that of which I speak. I object to Mr. Wilson's sneaking out of the scrape, both "suppressio veri and suggestio faesi."

ALBERT PIKE.

Synopsis

OF THE ADMIRABLE SPEECH

Of Hon. James C.

ROBINSON!

At Waterloo.

I shall speak to-night on national politics only. There is nothing new in the fact that we are now preparing to elect a President of the United States. We have done so every four years since the organization of the Government. But is is said; How strange it is that Democrats should support a life-long Republican. But let us think over these objects. All the great issues that divided us in the past are dead. We are united now. Can we quarrel over things that no longer interest us? How much sense or profit would there be in talking of negro suffrage or the manner in which the war was inaugurated? We are not children to quarrel over toys. What object would we have in reviving matters that we have no longer any interests in?

When men come to us and endeavor to arouse all of our bad passions we should beware of them? I come among you to allay all evil passions.

This is a peculiar government.—Our legislation is left particularly to the local government. The further that the central government is taken from us the freer we are.

I have been surprised to hear certain men talk within the last three weeks about "our rulers" Our rulers indeed! They are our servants, and they have not proven themselves very good servants of late either.—(Cheers.)

During the war the Government was administered outside of the Constitution. Whether this was right or not I am not here to argue; but I can say that whatever unconstitutional acts have occurred since the war they have no safe or reasonable foundation.

I was struck when a boy, with that clause in the Constitution which says, "that all power not therein granted are reserved for the people."

I want the Government once more recognized as the instrument of the people.

I have this to say, if Grant's Administration has proven economical and prudent, it should be indorsed. If not and we have unanswerable proofs that it has not been it should be condemned and the people will condemn it.—(Cheers.)

I want to call your attention to the act of Congress where it says that upon the complaint of two citizens, in a place of 20,000 inhabitants made before the United States District Judge, that there has been an illegality in the elections, the accused can be arrested and thrown into prison, with the right to the writ of liberty suspended. Under this act of Congress, Marshals and Deputy Marshals can be appointed at $5 per day to arrest anyone whom they consider their enemy, themselves to be the Judges.

Let us look a moment at the Ku-Klux law. It was approved by a message from President Grant. Among other things it says that whoever to the number of two interferes with the rights or immunities of another whether the State Court interferes or not the president has the right to interfere with the army and navy.

The writ of habeas corpus can also be suspended by the President according to this law. Why was this law passed? It was said that there was a set of Ku-Kluxes in the South. Perhaps there were a lot of bad men there for we find one or two now and then in the North, But what was the state of affairs? Every State with the exceptions of one were under the control of Republican carpet-baggers.—(Cheers.) But the evil effects of that law is not alone extended to the South. The President of the United States, under that law, can suspend the writ of habeas corpus in any state in the Union—in this State as well as in South Carolina. He can suspend the writ in this city throw your citizens into jail, and cause a reign of terror throughout your community. You can have no redress whatever. Is there a lawyer within hearing of my voice who can release a man who is arrested and held by the federal Government? By no technicality can he do that.

Over a year ago there was grumbling against the administration of Grant. And it sprang from the act that gave him power to suspend the writ of habeas corpus. The citizens had no right left. He could not defend himself by the aid of attorneys witnesses, or whatever, to secure liberty. Does this make you freemen or slaves?

Morton tells you that Grant has paid the public debt What has he done in that direction? Nothing more than you have. You, the people liquidate the indebtedness. The taxes were paid out by you—from taxes raised on your property, and these taxes went in as a sinking fund for the benefit of the United States.

And then again there is great talk by the opposition, about the purity of the present Administration. But suppose the same charges were brought against your county officials that have been brought against the Federal Government—charges of corruption and theft. You would investigate the matter. Of course you would. But, although our Republican friends claim that General Grant has paid a large portion of the public debt, we must remember that he paid just as little on his property, by way of taxes as he could, just like the rest of us: that the money paid on the Government debt was wrung from the people by taxation. If it had collected half as much taxes it could only have paid half as much debt. If double the amount a proper increase in extinguishing the debt. The claim about Grant paying the taxes is the merest balderdash.—The officers of the Government collected the taxes and paid over what they did not steal to the United States Treasurer and his retinue of retainers, and they in turn what they [illegible] steal was applied upon the National debt—and that is how the National debt is being paid.

Morton has made the presumption to speak to you about the purity of this Administration. With him it is not hard for anything to be pure.—But when such men as Trumbull tried to investigate the work and inside of this Administration they were denounced for their impudence in disturbing the equanimity of the Grant Republican party. When the Administration was forced to pay some little attention to the corruption in the New York Custom House, a white washing Committee was appointed, which gave the thieves an opportunity to remain in their places, and to-day Leet and Stocking are the pets of General Grant.

Who was the first man to have the frauds at New York investigated—Horace Greeley. (Cheers.) He searched out the Government thieves at Washington and at other places for the old hero is death on thieves wherever they are found. (Cheers.)

President Grant regards this as a personal Government. I begin to think that he looks upon every office and officer as belonging to him.—When elected he was quiet and said nothing about whom he should appoint in his Cabinet.

The first man who was appointed was Washburn,—for Secretary of State,—who was utterly and entirely unfit for the office.

He also appointed Stewart for Treasurer of State. But this man was not qualified, owing to the fact that he was an importer of goods, and constitutionally unqualified. It is said that Grant did not know that this disqualification existed in the Constitution, but when he did understand the fact wanted congress to repeal it.

He appointed Hoar Attorney General and Bourie for Secretary—men whose names we were unable to pronounce for at least six weeks after their appointment.

But how did Grant become acquainted with the members of his Cabinet? Every one of them had given him handsome and valuable presents and the appointments were to repay the favors.

One more thing and I am done.—This Administration has kept in power in the South a set of thieves and plunderers,—through the KuKlux and Freedmens Bureau laws. These men have stolen $250,000,000, since the close of the war. These States have been bankrupt. But, say the Republicans, the rebels are only receiving their just dues. In answer we will put the meanest argument first—which is one of selfishness. We need their help to pay the debt of our Republic. Can they do this while we keep them insolvent?

The opposition says that we must not "clasp hands across the bloody chasm."

We drove the rebel flag form the country, never to be seen again. The Blue and the Gray are now willing to march with us shoulder to shoulder under the Star-Spangled Banner.—(Cheers.)

Gentlemen 14 years ago I was in the U. S. Congress. Than no Senator lived in Washington. To-day one third of them live in magnificent houses. On a snowy day they will drive up to the doors of their mansions, and have carpet spread by their servants from their sleighs to their thresholds.

Where does all this money come from, my friends? Why let me tell you that there is a corruption of $150.000,000, lying in the Treasury, to influence the money market in behalf of gold manipulators. These Senators take a part in this profitable amusement.

Grant is always surrounded by military rings. He is always attending races, watering places, and the weddings of rich men's daughters, but is never seen at a poor man's wedding.

Who, on the other hand is Horace Greeley? (Cheers.) A man who works. (Cheers.) One of the best men in the nation. (Cheers.) One who is always found at the post of duty. (Cheers.) One who has reached the highest place in the heart of every American who is not looking for office, or is governed by prejudice. (Cheers.)

In this contest, money and corruption is on one side, the people and honest Government on the other.—Which will you have? (Loud and prolonged cheering.)

Mr. Robinson concluded with a fervent and convincing appeal for each man is do his duty his whole duty in the present contest, the most eloquent peroration we have ever listened to.

The latest discovery by some of the Republican papers is now going the rounds, and is nothing less than that Horace Greeley was concerned in the Confederate plots to burn the Northern cities and massacre the women and children. The Chicago Tribune has it upon good authority, that Greeley sold the cow to Mrs. O Leary that kicked over the kerosene lamp, that set the shanty on fire, that resulted in Chicago's distruction. And it argues that Greeley is the culprit incendiary, because in telling what he knows about farming, he has a chapter on milking, in which he recommends dairy-maids to take kerosene lamps with them to the stable whenever they have occasion to milk at nights. The same paper hints that Greeley, having shown a decided hospitality to Erie corruption may not be ignorant of the cause of the recent burning of the work-shops of that Company. "And as he is also accused of intention to go down South and murder all the women and children, is it not conclusive that he is the author of the floods now devastating Alabama."

The Difference.

Democratic papers have had much to say about Senator Morton being compelled to sit down while delivering a speech. Well, what of it? Even in that position he towers head and shoulders above Hendricks—the latter standing up, and stretching to his full height.—Indianian.

Empty heads turn upward, a good head never towers.

South Bend has formally determined to have water works.

The Excursion of Colored Brethren.

The New York Tribune announces that it has received from Washington the following remarkable statement from a gentleman who held a high office under president Lincoln. The gentleman alluded to writes that the election of North Carolina took place on the 1st of August. The Vanderbilt a steamer not now engaged in the Washington trade, was brought there under a temporary commander for special service. The berths and best furniture were removed and a contract made to make a trip to Norfolk and return with as many passengers as could be stowed away. Five hundred dollars were paid down in greenbacks by a colored man for the round trip, who was put forward to make the bargain and conceal his employers. Between five and six hundred and some say seven hundred men composed the party. Not a woman was of the crowd. The Vanderbilt left Washington on the evening of the 26th of July 4 days before the election. The voyage consumed seven and a half days. Cotemperaneously with this incident large numbers of negroes employed by contractors of the Board of Public Works mysteriously disappeared and reappeared when the Vanderbilt returned. A poor attempt has been made to explain this migration of repeaters by calling it a religeous excursion. That thin disguise has deceived nobody. Who ever heard of a negro excursion, religious or social, extending over such a length of time and without the presence of the female element which always preponderates on such occasions? It also appears that about two hundred repeaters were transported by railroad, taking a different rout into North Carolina. A force of 800 or 900 men was thus scattered by a preconcerted plan, and North Carolina returned for the Grant candidate.—These trained mercenaries are now to be thrown into Pennsylvania to be utilized there for a similar purpose. Negroes now in the employ of boards of public works here are to be sent to Pennsylvania under contracts high wages and expenses paid. Cameron was here yesterday and has visited Washington twice recently to perfect his unscrupulous work. As Grant men have no hopes for Kentucky, negroes can be shared without disadvantage,

The 23d anual fair of the Ohio State Board of Agriculture, will be held at Mansfield, of the 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, and 6th days of September.

VINEGAR BITTERS

PURELY VEGETABLE FREE FROM ALCOHOL

DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA

VINEGAR BITTERS

Vinegar Bitters are not a vile Fancy Drink, made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced, and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the native roots and herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the Great Blood Purifier and a Life-giving Principle, a Perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition, enriching it, refreshing and invigorating both mind and body. They are easy of administration, prompt in their action, certain in their results, safe and reliable in all forms of disease.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion. Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist: There is scarcely an individual on the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics, will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS twice a week.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Scrofula, or, King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc., etc. In these as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters act on all these cases in a similar manner. By purifying the Blood they remove the cause, and by resolving away the effects of the inflammation (the tubercular deposits) the affected parts receive health, and a permanent cure is effected.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

The Aperient and mild Laxative properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are the best safe-guard in cases of eruptions and malignant fevers, their balsamic, healing, and soothing properties protect the humors of the fauces. Their Sedative properties allay pain in the nervous system, stomach, and bowels, either from inflammation, wind, colic, cramps, etc.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Directions.—Take of the Bitters on going to bed at night from a half to one and one-half wine-glassfull. Eat good nourishing food, such as beef-steak, mutton chop, venison, roast beef, and vegetables, and take out-door exercise. They are composed of purely vegetable ingredients, and contain no spirit.

The Grant club, of this place, went to Waterloo, last Saturday night, and were met by the club of that place. Our boys took the shine out of them as having the best and largest club. None but voters should be admitted, yet two thirds of them are minors. Our boys understand their business and have good officers which is more than can be said of the Waterloo club.

HON. JAMES C. ROBINSON.

The most convincing and powerful speech we ever listened to was delivered at Waterloo, last Thursday evening, by the above gentleman from Illinois. Had all been aware of the great treat in hearing this speech, it would have been listened to by thousands. He is decidedly the best speaker that has appeared in our county, and there is a general desire by every one that he return, and speak in day-time at this place.

S. F. SMART, Esq.

This gentleman spoke at the Court House, last Friday evening to a very good audience, for a night meeting, and showed up in a plain comprehensive way, the shamelessness and prodigacy of the Grant dynasty. Though feeling worn out from frequent speaking, he spoke for an hour and a half upon the vital issues of the day, and his convincing arguments were received with great attention by the meeting.

JULIAN AT ANGOLA.

The Grant men of Angola were greatly worked up over the speech of Julian the other day. It troubles them that one who knows so much should leave their sinking ship. He knows just where they live, and the scoring they receive at his hands unmasks their corrupt motives, which chagrins them very much. He made a most forcible speech and never faltered in his expose of the administration, though he had at one time been allied with that party. He settled the lie that Morton has been peddling about in regard to the North Pacific Land Swindle, and clearly sustained Hendricks in his statement of the facts. He also exposed a new feature in the duplicity of the Grant party that may not be generally known. He said while the Grant press was teeming with lies about Horace Greeley intending to pay the rebel debt, they forgot that the question of paying pensions to the widows and orphans of deceased rebels was debated before the committee on resolutions of the Philadelphia Convention.—Put that in your pipe and smoke it. It nonplussed the Rads considerably, but there was no help for it. It made Elder Green, of cotton handkerchief notoriety, so mad that he called for three cheers for Grant, and a drunken fellow thinking he meant for Greeley gave three groans. The scene was ludicrous in the extreme, and half a dozen were busy with pencil trying to catch the inspired truths of the old war horse. The attendence was good, and three cheers were given for the speaker at the close. The brains of Steuben county are for Greeley and we may look for a largely increased vote in that county.

THE SPEECHES.

An impromptu meeting of only six hours notice was held at the Court House in this place, last Monday evening, and addressed by Hon. E. V. Long, and Freeman Kelly.

Notwithstanding Mr. Long's recent labors in the State, speaking days and nights, traveling days and nights, his health and voice is in good condition. Mr Kelly's health has been such that he has not been actively engaged in the campaign, but will from this time until the election.

Of the many speeches we have heard and read thus far in the campaign, we unhesitatingly say that the several points presented, the arguments sustained and the speeches generally, were second to none; and were highly appreciated by all present, both by Democrats and Republicans The court room was well filled, and the strictest attention was given the speakers.

HON. E. V. LONG.

This gentleman, our candidate for Congress, had a little talk at New Era last Monday, to a very good crowd, considering how busy each farmer is in getting in his full crop. Nevertheless a number turned out for a few hours and Mr. Long talked to them in that plain, earnest, way that carried conviction with ever word.—He spoke of the present issues of the day such as the tariff, taxing the bonds, the land grabs, and did not go back and make a war speech like his competitor. The best of feeling prevailed and everybody felt that it was good to be there.

Mr. Long spoke at Spencerville Tuesday afternoon, to a fair crowd, and made an excellent speech, which was listened to with great attention. The Grant men of this place have some respect and courtesy for those entertaining different political opinions, but the action of one Col. DeLong at Newville, where Mr. Long spoke in the evening, disregards all courtesy and common decency, and stamps him as anything but a gentleman. A Democrat that would attempt to do what DeLong did, call for three cheers for his candidate, even before the speaker had fairly finished, has no good claim upon his party, and contributes nothing to the cause but injury. DeLong is said to be a preacher but we regard him as a bad man, one who would do bad things to accomplish his purposes. DeLong has, perhaps, to learn yet that a man can be a politician and a gentleman at the same time. A ward bummer could not show more disrespect to his neighbors than did DeLong. But we ought to be thankful to him for this kind of opposition, as it will convince every candid thinking mind that something more than inflaming the passions and appealing to hatred and excitement is required to check the great movement now going on by the people for economy and reform.

Tommy Mays complains of three nuisances, with which Auburn is afflicted. He does not include the Courier, and that is worst nuisance Auburn has suffered from in late years.—Press.

No doubt our neighbor thinks so. It has sorely worked him up, and he is generous enough to admit, and "for this are we doctors." Now, we think the people would know a great deal more of Waterloo and its interests if it only had a nuisance, say half of the "worstness" of the Courier. Some of its citizens thinks so, too, and that's where it pinches.

State Fair.—The twentieth Annual State Fair of Indiana will take place from Sept. 30th to October 6th, at Indianapolis. The Detroit & Eel River Railroad will carry passengers at half fare, and a through tickets will be issued by them, from this point over the Indianapolis, Peru & Chicago R. At the Lutheran church in Bucyrus, O., a few days ago, there were six children brought in to undergo the baptismal ceremonies and when all together it was discovered that there were three pairs of twins in the number. It pleased Rev. J. B. Baltzly, that he was inspired by the twins and wrote the following:

Six little ones from Mansfield street
Did round this sacred altar meet,
In garments rich and white as snow
To yield themselves to Christ below.

First came in order Ella A.
And by her side was Stella May,
Both pure and sweet and white as chalk
The twins of George and Lizzie Lauck.

And next appeared Louisa May
With brother Lewis bright and Gay,
In raiments white and glittering
The twins of M. and W. Pickering.

When Blanche Gertrude, and Julia Grace
Before the altar took their place,
These are the twins as all aver
Of C. W. and Hettie Fisher.

In answer to parental vows
Baptismal water touched their brows,

Of Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

"Stop My Paper."

Illustrating the fearful consequences of this highly retributive measures the Philadelphia Post tells the following upon the Ledger of that city:

This fearful threat reminds up of a story about Mr. Swain years ago, when he was the proprietor of the Ledger. By his course in regard to some public matter he had offended a number of readers, one of whom he met on Chestnut street, and thus accosted him:

'Mr. Swain, I've stopped the Ledger.'

'What is that, sir?'

'I've stopped the Ledger,' was the stern reply.

'Great heavens!' said Mr. Swain, 'my dear sir, that won't do. Come with me to the office. This must be looked into.'—And, taking the man with him he entered the office at Third and Chestnut sts.—There they found the clerks busy at their desks; then they ascended to the editorial rooms and composing rooms, where all was as usual; finally they descended to the press rooms, where the engineers were at work.

'I thought you told me you had stopped the Ledger.'

'So I have,' so I have said the offended subscriber.

'Don't see the stoppage. The Ledger seems to be going on.'

'Oh! I mean to say—that is, that I—ah—had stopped taking it.'

'Is that all!' exclaimed Mr. Swain, 'Why my dear sir, you don't know how you alarmed me. As for your individual subscription I care very little. Good day sir, and never make such rash assertions again.'

Our Grant friends are somewhat incensed at our remarks in regard to the Tanner Club of this place. Some were quite wrathy and one little souled individual stopped his paper. This is only an indication to us that it cut, and that hurts considerable. "Let the galded jade wince." Politically we have no favors to ask of those opposed to us, and socially we think just as much of them as their most intimate friends. They certainly make a mistake when they expect us to withhold any thing of a political character that can be used against them. We propose to deal with them fairly and squarely, and do not intend to resort to lies, and base fabrications to further our ends. The article referred to does not from the spirit in which it was written, claim to be a fact, but simply a burlesque of the whole affair. If it had been taken in the spirit it was written, no one would have been angered, and no more would have been thought of it, If our Grant friends want to get mad, however we shall humor them, and dish the thing up as hot as possible.

When we mentioned our postmaster, we did not mean that he was dishonest and incapable, but rather regard him as an efficient and attentive officer, discharging his duties very acceptably, and according to our view of civil service reform, as liable to be retained in his position under a Greeley as well as Grant administration When we mentioned our Sunday School Superintendent, we thought he ought to be at better business than training with boys, and several of the members of his church have endorsed us in that opinion. When we said pensioners, we included as brave soldiers as any that can be found in the land. They must remember that we are diametrically opposed to them politically, and that no threats will deter us from figting for what we think is right. In the language of Mr. Julian at Angola, "you can have peace or war. One thing is certain, we cannot favor the election of Grant in order to retain the support of Republicans, and we think no reasonable one will ask us so to do. If we were fabricating lies like the following they would have just cause to go back on us. This item is from the Waterloo Press, stolen no doubt, as the editors don't seem to have brains sufficient to write such an article. It is a fabrication from beginning to end as we find upon investigation, and we dare them to prove it:

"At Leesburg, Kosciusko county, Ind., on Monday evening of last week, 27 men, who have hitherto been democrats, signed the roll of the Grant and Wilson club.—"They renounced their allegiance to the party which has sold them out, but was not able to deliver them." So it goes."

This is published in a Grant paper but if we jest in regard to a parade, oh, it hurts, and you must not do it any more Be fair, gentlemen, before you are so generous.

Shortly after the fall of Vicksburg when some one told President Lincoln that Gen Grant drank to much, Mr. Lincoln said 'Do you know where he gets his whisky?' The informant said he did not, and asked why he wanted to know. 'Because' said the President, 'I would like to send some of the same article to a few of my other generals.'—Indianian.

Wonder if Mr. Lincoln included in the "few," Gen. Reuben Williams?

Personal.—We were pleased to meet our friends, Drs. B. S. Woodworth and T. J. Dills, of Fort Wayne, in our town yesterday. The former gentleman delivered a very interesting lecture before the North-east Indiana Medical Society, on Tuesday evening.

Wanted.—We want to secure a good stout boy to learn the printing trade. A boy from the country of good size, with common school education and good morals is desired.

A NEW FEATURE IN DeKALB COUNTY!

Something That Interests all the People!

A GRAND FAIR TO BE HELD IN OCTOBER.

The Fair Grounds, Track, Etc.

So thouroughly has the system of holding fairs been identified with the great progress made in the agricultural interests of our country, that they are now regarded as the true exponents of the achievements made by each locality where they exist, and it is now an index to the public mind that where they are not, there the great interests of our farming and mechanical classes have not attained that perfection so surely arrived at under their auspices.

A COUNTY FAIR

is now an established fact not only in our best farming districts, but also in many localities where the hardy pioneer has had but a few years to develope the resources and cultivate the soil, and so thoroughly are the citizens in such cases awake to their interests, that the annual return of the week that gives an opportunity to compare in a spirit of emulation, the varied products of the soil, and their own handiwork is hailed with the same anticipations of joy, as a

FESTAL OCCASION

in the olden time, where the yeomanry were want to indulge in games and trials of skill and dexterity, and an almost total abandonment, for a time, to pleasure and good cheer. But the custom is not as yet universal throughout our broad domain, partly because of the great area of country that has had to be brought under cultivation and gradually advanced until its

GENERAL PROSPERITY

would warrant the establishment of towns and cities, and manufactories and commerce forced to followed in their trains.—And partly from the want of the necessary enterprise upon the part of the citizens to inaugurate its usefulness in their midst.—In Indiana almost every county holds an annual fair. Even in our own a few years ago, this was the custom, but owing to the war, and a lack of interest, it finally gave way before the united indifferences of the people. But a

NEW ERA

(we have no reference to Butler tp.) is dawning, and we as a county and district, are again to be favored in this direction. A corporation called the North-east Indiana Agricultural Association has been organized, with head-quarters

AT WATERLOO,

where thirty-one acres of ground have been purchased. In the organization of the society the very best citizens of the district were selected as its officers and the enterprise, has every indication of its entire success. They are men of energy and perseverance, and will leave no stone unturned to secure to one of the best institutions of modern times. It is only necessary to say that such men as Dr. Chamberlain, Gust Lease, F. D. Ryan, J. M. Norford, J. I. Best and many others have set to work for its accomplishment, and all that is now required is the hearty

OUR COUNTY

ENDORSEMENT OF THE PEOPLE.

The grounds are located a short distance east of Uniontown, a name which now designates the north suburbs of Waterloo.

We visited them last Saturday in company with Mr. Lease, and found the great fence, which is now nearly completed, enclosing as fine a tract of land as could be desired for this purpose. In the northwest corner is to be found a spring of water unexhaustable in its supply, and of a quality unequaled in the County. But the great feature that attracts the eyes is the already graded and rolled, until it is a fair duplicate of the Jackson track now recognized as one of the best in the country. It is sixty feet wide with a swell of greater breadth at the curves, which are gradual and not unduly abrupt. The outer edge is raised gradually from the inner one to a highth of three feet, and is even now so thoroughly packed that a buggy runs over it without the least jar. Where the

HALF MILE TRACK

GRAND STAND

is to be located is an elevation several feet high, giving an excellent view of the entire track and grounds. The Judges stand will be just opposite with similar advantages. The home stretch is very fine, and will suit the fancy of the most exacting. The necessary will be erected. in time, and every convenience added that will contribute to the comfort of those who attend.

And now that the gentlemen directly interested are pushing forward the good work, it behooves every farmer of our county to come forward and give the enterprise their hearty endorsement, by not only attending in person, but also in bringing any article, or animal, they may possess to add to the attraction. We are surely in need of

of all kinds in this county, and nothing will conduce so much to this end as this enterprise. And in every department I. will be found of great advantage. Owing to the State Fair and Elections during the first two weeks in October, it is thought advisable to hold the first fair in the third week of that month. The premium list will be issued in a few days, furnished gratuitously, and every farmer should obtain a copy.

Some of our Greeley friends get unnecessarily exercised over the organization of Grant Clubs. They should recollect that, hereever their party is sufficiently numerous to furnish officers for such organizations, they have Greeley clubs, too.—Press.

They were pretty hard up, however, for this material in Waterloo, for we noticed in the procession of the small boys, that both the editors walked along the files as big as Major Generals As they passed, Charley Gillitt remarked that it was a good place for cripples and fools, the file representing one and the rank the other.

The Medical Association.

One of the most agreeable and pleasant meetings held for many years, was that of the N. E. Ind., M. A. at this place last Tuesday. The day was consumed in the business of the association, and social intercourse. In the evening the members and a large number of citizens repaired to the M. E. church, and listened to one of the most well-timed lectures that could have been delivered, by Dr. B. S. Woodworth, of Ft. Wayne, which for versatility wit, sound judgement and advice was beyond comparison—considering the members of the association present. The proceedings and lecture have been suggested to be published in our and other papers, which we will be glad to do, when furnished with the proper copies.

After the lecture the members, Dentists, Druggits, choir, clergymen and press, with their families, were invited to, and repaired to the Ice-cream rooms of Smith & Hare's for refreshments, whose rooms being insufficient to accommodate all those of Drs. Ford & Spooner, Knerr, Cowan Littlefield and Casebeer were brought into requisition.

This indeed was a happy reunion and gives us much pleasure to record it, although unable to be personally present.

Thanks, gentlemen, for the many courtesies extended to us and ours during your session and our absence.

Drs. Woodworth and P. J. Dills, of Fort Wayne were the guests of W. H. Dills, Esq of this place, whose estimable wife knows how to "broil a steak without pounding it,"—which Dr. Woodworth so utterly abhors and condemns.

MARRIAGES.

LONG—FADLY—On Aug. 31st, 1872, by Elder T. P. Sutton, Mr. J. W. Long, of Butler, to Miss Ella J. Fadly, of Newville.

Strayed or Stolen.

On the night of August 31st, 1872, a small light dapple gray horse, about 14½ hands high, nine years old, with two warts on the inside of the left hind leg.

A liberal reward will be given for the return of said horse to the subscriber.

CHARLEY KLOTZ

Marriages of Great Men.

Byron married Miss Millbank to get money to pay his bebts. It turned out a bad shift.

Robert Burns married a farm girl with whom he fell in love while they worked together in the plowfield. He was irregular in his life, and committed the most serious mistakes in conducting his domestic affairs.

Milton married the daughter of a country squire, but lived with her but a short time. He was an austere, exacting literary recluse, while she was a rosy, romping country lass that could not endure the restraint imposed upon her, so they separated. Subsequently she returned, and they lived tolerably happy.

Queen Victoria and Prince Albert were cousins, and about the only example in the long line of English monarchs wherein the martial vows were sacredly observed, and sincere affection existed.

Shakespeare loved and weded a farmer's daughter. She was faithful to her vows, but we could hardly say the same of the great bard himself. Like most of the great poets, he showed too little discrimination in bestowing his affections on the other sex.

Washington married a woman with two children. It is enough to say that she was worthy of him, and they lived as married folks should—in perfect harmony.

John Adams married the daughter of a Presbyterian clergyman. Her father objected on account of John's being a lawer—he had a bad opinion of the morals of the profession.

John Howard, the great philanthropist married his nurse. She was altogether beneath him in social life and intellectual capacity, and, besides this, was 52 years old while he was but 25. He would not take 'No' for an answer, and they were married and lived happily together until she died, which occurred two years afterward.

Peter the Great, of Russia, married a peasant girl. She made an excellent wife and a sagacious Empress.

Humboldt married a poor girl because he loved her. Of course they were happy.

It is not generally known that Andrew Jackson married a lady whose husband was still living. She was an uneducated but amiable woman, and was most devotedly attached to the old warrior and statesman.

John C. Calhoun married his cousin and their children, fortunately, were neither diseased nor idiotic, but they do not evince the talent of the great 'State Rights' advocate.

Edward Lytton Bulwer, the English statesman and novelist, married a girl much his inferior in position, and got a shrew for a wife. She is now insane.

How to Fatten Horses.

Many good horses devour large quantities of grain and hay, and still continue thin and poor—the food eaten is not properly assimilated. If the usual feed has been uncrushed grain and hay, nothing but a change will effect any desirable alteration in the appearance of the animal [illegible] cannot be obtained readily, mingle a bushel of flax seed with a bushel of barley, one of oats, and another of Indian corn, and let it be ground into a fine meal. This will be a fair proportion [illegible]. Or meal of the barley, oats and corn in equal quantities may first be procured, and one-fourth part of oil cake mingled with it when the meal is [illegible] cut feed. Feed two or three quarts of the mixture two or three times daily, mingled with a peck of cut hay or straw. If the horse will eat that greedily let the quantity be gradually increased [illegible] quarts at every feeding three times a day. But avoid the practice of allowing the horse to stand at a rack well filled with hay.—In order to fatten a horse that has run [illegible] should be very [illegible] no more than he will eat up clean, and then lick his manger for more.

Stop the Interest.

Daniel Webster once dined with an old Boston merchant, and when they came the wine, a dusty old bottle was carefully decanted by Peter a passed to the host. Taking the bottle he poured out Mr. Webster's glass and handed it to him. Then pouring out another for himself, he held it up before the light and said:

How do you like wine, Webster?

I think it a fine specimen of old Port, sir.

You can't guess what that cost me?

Surely not, I only know that it is excellent.

Yes, I can tell you, for I made a careful estimate the other day. When I add the interest to the first price, I find that it cost me the sum of just one dollar and twenty cents per glass!

Good gracious! you don't say so, said Mr. Webster; and then draining his glass he hastily presented it again with the remark:

[illegible] up again as quick as you can, for I want to stop that confounded big interest.

Made Him Pay.

When General Jackson was President heartless clerk in the Treasury Department ran up an indebtedness with a poor landlady of $60 and then turned her off as he did other creditors. She finely went to the President with her complaint, and asked him if he could not compel him to pay the bill.

He offers his note, she said, but that is good for nothing.

[illegible] the President, get his note and bring it to me.

The clerk gave her the note, with the jeering request, she would let him know when she got the money on it.

Taking it to the President, he worte 'Andrew Jackson' on the back of it, and told her she would get the money at the bank.

When it became due the clerk refused to pay the note, but when he leared who was the indorser he made haste to raise the wind.

The next morning he found a note on his desk saying that his services were no longer required by the government—and it served him right.

A Down-East shop-keeper advertises quart bowls of all sizes for sale cheap—the smaller sizes are to measure berries with.

An Omaha paper says there is no use in making such a fuss about the shooting of a constable, as there are forty candidates for the office.

Milwaukee has had a wooden wedding. Henry Block was married to Amanda Board. It was a very plain affair. We hope neither party got shaved.

Mrs. Miffin, said a visitor, Emma has you features, but I think she has got her father's hair. Oh, now, I see, said the dear little Emma, it's because I have father's hair that he has to wear a wig.

A boy put a lighted match into a nearly empty powder keg, to see what would happen. He won't do so again as his curiosity is satisfied, but the girl who sits next him in school thinks he looks better with his nose on.

A little girl up town joyfully told her mother, the other day, that she had found out where they made horses—she had seen a man in a shop just finishing one of them for he was just nailing on his last foot.

A little three year old gave a reason for his infant brother's good behavior as follows:

Baby doesn't cry tears because he does'nt drink any water, and he can't cry milk.

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and sti, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money. The "C., B. & Q. R. R." running from Chicago, through Galesburg to Burlington, and the "I., B. & W. Route," running from Indianapolis, through Bloomington to Burlington, have achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading passenger routes to the west. At Burlington they connect with the B. & M. R. R. [illegible] through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories and passengers starting from DeKalb county, on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the Burlington route.

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

W. W. WORTHINGTON, Supt.

Home, Sweet Home—Its Author and [illegible]

John H. Payne, the author of that touching [illegible] 'Home, Sweet Home,' was not only poor in pocket, but [illegible] homeless [illegible] conversation [illegible] occasion to the following [illegible]

How often have I been in the heart of Paris, Berlin and London, or some other city, and heard persons singing, or hand-organs playing 'Sweet Home,' without a shilling to buy the next meal, or a place to lay my head. The world has literally sung my song until every heart is familiar with its melody, yet I have been a poor wanderer from my boyhood. My country has turned me ruthlessly from office, and in my old age I have to submit to humilation for my daily bread.

He had the most exact and beautiful expression of the heart's emotion regarding home, always personally a stranger to all its tender loving influences. A wanderer, and sometimes a vagabond, he has touched the human heart to the very depths by his lines.

Disgusted with his treatment, [illegible] impelled by his own disposition [illegible] only wish was to die in a foreign land, and to be buried by strangers and sleep in obscurity. He obtained an appointment as United States Council at Tunis, where he died.

We now turn to a period antecedent to the composition of his song. At times [illegible] most acutely his utter loneliness. One day a friend called to see him, and on [illegible]

How are you to-day, Payne?

Down-hearted enough, [illegible] last night I had one of the most glorious [illegible] in a [illegible] what [illegible]

Well, I will tell you. I suppose [illegible] think it isa scene of vast weath, of a palace [illegible] that kind that man's desires are set upon. It was nothing of the kind. I don't often have dreams [illegible] in this dream I was in a home of most transcendent rural beauty. It was all that poem and painter could imagine. The landscape was composed of gently rolling hills and sweet, still valleys, with meandering streams. There were flowers and birds, crops, flocks and herds. In the midst of this stood various habitation of men, women and children, and I heard pleasant voices, laughter, music and splendid songs.

Truly, a beautiful picture of human contentment, said the friend.

The life long [illegible] cried the poet of home sweet home. Ah, gradually it foded from my sight. I was transfixed. I strained my eyes to catch its outlines as they grew fainter and fainter; but at last it had faded. I then looked up and saw a dark cloud gathering which grew dark and terrible.

Ah, said I, that cloud is significant of my own lot. [illegible] words [illegible] the Almighty to another miserable man: A fugitive and vagabond shalt thou be on earth.

In terror I recognized my doom, and awoke to find it both a dream and a sad reality.

The unhappy man buried his face in his hands, and for some time he seemed to be [illegible]

Well do you know what I am going to do? said Payne looking up. I'll tell you. I've been thinking a great deal over the matter, and I intend to write a song, called Home, Sweet Home. The picture of my dream shall be my inspiration for the task, and my lonely heart will give a touching pathos to any words.

Not long after, the song of Home, Sweet Home was given to the world by John Howard Payne.

Three of the dirtiest, most ragged little [illegible] drug store, marching up to the counter, one said:

I want a cent's worth of rock candy.

Get out you ragamuffins, we don't sell a cent's worth of rock candy.

Slowly and sadly they filed out of the store.

On the side walk consultation took place. [illegible]

Mister, do you sell three cents' worth of rock candy?

Yes, said Davenport.

Well, we ain't got him, and the procession moved again.

[illegible] valleys, where they are melted by the sun and become rivers; whereas in Greenland, although pressed forward to the water's edge, they cannot melt, but break off in large bodies, and become icebergs. The glacier is like a river, because the central part moves faster than its bottom; and because the point of swiftest motion follows the sinuosities of its sides.

It is mentioned [illegible] by the old woodsmen that the beech and sycamore trees are never struck by lightning, though found in close proximity to oak, hickory, and trees of other species that have been [illegible] by the subtle fluid.

A white girl at Niles, Michigan, desiring to marry a negro, and being unable to take the oath, that she had negro blood in her, tapped Sambo's arm with a pen knife, sopped a piece of bread in his blood, swallowed it, hurried to the Squire's office, swore that she had negro blood in her, and was duly made Mrs. Sambo.

A Contract Not Accepted.

[illegible] employed as engineer in Buchanan & Lyall's tobacco factory, South Brooklyn, while in [illegible] lager-beer saloon, [illegible] enterprising painter with whom he was acquainted. The painter stated that business was dull and that he would soon have to discharge most of his employees.

I think I can get you a big job at the tobacco factory, said Low, who was anxious to assist him.

If you can I'll be very grateful, replied the painter, his eyes sparkling at the prospect of getting a contract from Buchanan & Lyall.

Yes, continued Low, reflectively, I am sure I can throw some work in your way. You know the firm has been short of work [illegible]

Oh, yes, I heard of that, interrupted the painter [illegible] but drop the darkey [illegible] job you expect to get for me [illegible] dead.

Well, resumed the engineer, the firm feel disgraced at the ragged condition of their new workmen. In fact, it is reported that they impart a strange odor to the [illegible] they handle, in consequence of their being infested with bed-bugs and other small game.

But I can't see what connection there is between the darkeys and the work that you promised to obtain [illegible] the painter.

As I have intimated, continued Low, deliberately, the darkeys have spoiled some of the tobacco. The firm want to prevent this; and as green paint is poisonous to bed-bugs they want to engage a painter to paint green breeches and shirts on the darkeys.

The painter has not yet accepted the contract.

Subjects for Discussion.

The Waltham, Mass., Farmers' Club has published the following topics for thought and discussion during this year. The idea is a good one and should be generally imitated.

The result of farming in 1871, and what has been learned that will be beneficial to the future.

Has the importation of foreign breeds of cattle, horses and other stock been a benefit to the community?

Trades and trade unions; their influence on the business of the community.—Would a combination of the farming interests be a benefit to their general prosperity?

Woodland and forest trees; their advantages or disadvantages to the farm and community.

Farm and farmers; what are the indications of good farming? [illegible]

[illegible] and poultry; [illegible] the best method of keeping and feeding.

[illegible] proper time to gather, and the best method of preserving them.

Milch cows; feeding and management in regard to health and the production of milk.

The raising, feeding and training of horses for speed, on the road, and farm work.

The Duk.

BY JOSH BILLINGS.

The duk is a fool. There aint no doubt about this; [illegible] kommon sense teaches it.

They are bilt sumthing like a hen, and are an up-and-down, flat-footed [illegible] They don't [illegible] like the rooster, nor [illegible] like the turkey: but they quack [illegible]

They have a woven fut, [illegible]

They are pretty [illegible] all feathers, and [illegible]

Wild duks are [illegible] shooting, and are very good to miss also, unless you understand the biznes.

You should aim about three foot ahead ov them and let them fly up to the spot.

I hav shot at them all day, and got [illegible] all kind ov sport, you know.

There are sum kind ov duks that are very-har tew kill, even if you do hit them. [illegible] ago at sum duks, and never got one ov them. I hav never told ov this before, and hope no one will repeat it—this is strikly confidenshall.

The women of Massachusetts are to have a college of their own at Northampton.

[illegible] nothing like a good definition, as the teacher thought, when he explained the meaning of old maid as a woman who had been made a long time.

Ah, Mr. Simpkins, we have not enough chairs for our company, said a gay wife to her frugal husband. Plenty of chairs, dear, but too much company, replied he, with a knowing wink.

A blind woman in Iowa has learned to thread a cambric needle with her teeth and tongue. Is there anything in the world that a woman's tongue cannot do—or undo? asks an exchange. We will think about it.

A close line—The End.

Pretty Good.

A funny joke, and all the more laughable [illegible] New Jersey [illegible] church in that State. It seems that a worthy deacon had been very industrious in selling a new church book, costing 75 cents. At the service in question, the minister, just before dismissing the congregation said:

All you who have children to baptize will please to present them next Sunday.

The deacon, who, by the way, was a little deaf, having an eye to selling the books, and supposing the pastor was referring to them, immediately jumped up and shouted:

All who haven't any can get as many as you want by calling on me, at 75 cents each.

Didn't Give It Up.

One of our citizens is blessed, or otherwise, with a very stubborn wife. In his case, he finds that when a woman will, she will, you may depend on't, and when she won't, she won't, and that's an end on't. This peculiarity of his disposition in his wife is no secret among his associates, and one of them meeting him the other day, asked:

'Well, W—, do you know why you are like a donkey?'

'Like a donkey?' opening his eyes wide. 'No I don't.'

'Do you give it up?'

'I do.'

'Because your better half is stubbornness itself.'

'That's not bad. Ha! ha! I'll give that to my wife when I go home to-night.'

'Mrs. W—,' he asked, 'do you know why I am like a donkey?'

He waited a moment, expecting his wife to give it up, but she did not; she looked at him somewhat [illegible] as she answered:

'I suppose it's because you were born so.'

W— has abjured the habit of putting conundrums to his wife.

Chaffing Negroes.

A correspondent of the New York Post, while traveling on a railroad train in Virginia, a few days since, overheard this conversation.

At the station several miles beyond Farmville, where clay pipe and fried chicken appeared to be the principal articles of African trade, the New Yorker always in the lead, put his head out of the window and said.

Helo, aunty, what have you there?

Chicken sir—fried.

Spring chicken?

Yes, sir.

This spring's or last spring's?

Dis spring's sah sartin.

Where did they spring from?

After a moment's hesitation the woman said.

Dunno, sar, unless dey sprung from aigs (eggs)

At this a dark eyed little girl who sat in front of me laughed outright and said.

That was an excellent reply, aunty.

Well, said the New Yorker, nothing abashed, I wish you would tell Horace Greeley to step this way a minute. I [illegible]

What, Don't Horace Greeley live here?

No sar, he done move away.

Grant lives here, don't he?

No sar, he done gone away too. All dem people gone.

Who are you going to vote for, my friend?

Me, Boss? I ain't gwine to vote for nobody. I gwine to vote for bread and meat. [illegible] the New Yorker drew his head in [illegible] the negroes alone.

[illegible] 8,000 diameters [illegible]

There are about 330,000 stars in the northern, and 60,000 in the southern hemisphere whose places have been recorded, and yet the facility for observing is much more favorable in the south on account of the clearness of the sky.

An old lawyer says that the three most troublesome clients he ever had were a young woman who wanted to be married, a married woman who wanted to be unmarried, and an old maid who did'nt know what she wanted.

An Indiana woman just divorced has written a letter of advice to her sex in which she says:

I would say to young girls not to marry young, and when you are married live at least fifty miles from your relations.

A little boy after watching the burning of the school house till the novelty of the thing had ceased, started down the street, saying 'I am glad the old thing burned down; I did'nt have my jogfry lesson, no how.'

At Northampton, Mass., a few nights ago, a young couple were billing and cooing in a hotel parlor, with the gas turned off, when a barber, who boarded at the house, came in, and lighting the gas, settled himself to read. The young folks resented the intrusion; barber didn't care; young Romeo said saucy things; barber asked if he meant him, and at last the fair Juliet bade her cavalier 'go for him.' He went, and the result was strongly in favor [illegible]

A Sister's Revenge.

Lord Redmond was riding slowly along [illegible] Valley, when the slow [illegible] gloom of night seemed to suddenly deepen. The light died along the slopes of the mountains, and the little tarn beside which his horse had leisurely walked for the last hour seemed actually to have grown into a black [illegible]

"The storm is on us, Kitty, and we're stalled in this confounded rut of a valley,' said Lord Redmond. I have been trying to get out of it for [illegible] he muttured, dismounting and leading his horse.

The [illegible] seemed [illegible] his anxiety, following him obediently and with an occasional glance [illegible] Suddenly she gave a shrill whinny, and at the same moment Redmond thought he heard a [illegible] Looking up eagerly, [illegible] a boy standing on a point of one of the bluffs [illegible] gesticulating wildly [illegible]

[illegible] to follow the path [illegible] lead [illegible] Hallo, or you will be [illegible]

[illegible] and the boy [illegible] suspicious that he was half [illegible] and when he gained the rock on which he stood, [illegible] in [illegible] half-crazed [illegible] staring eyes [illegible] yet [illegible] poor [illegible]

'Come—come [illegible]' cried, [illegible]

And Redmond followed leading his horse.

Kitty [illegible] again at the [illegible] which she perceived as they turned a sharp angle and faced an old stone structure with out-buildings, more gloomy in its appearance than the surrounding scene.

'Go in to the fire,' cried the boy, pointing to the door and grasping Kitty's bridle.

No! I will see her put up first, answered Lord Redmond, leading the horse round to the stable.

The animal was too valuable a one to be left to chance care. He was surprised at the readiness with which the half-crazed boy rubbed down her glossy flanks and covered her with an old blanket, showing a gleeful satisfaction in her beauty, [illegible] He left her [illegible] the house.

It was a good stone building, showing [illegible] of decay where decay could touch it. [illegible] windows though [illegible]

[illegible] in which an old woman [illegible] rusty rifle, and two [illegible] pointers lay at [illegible] the fire [illegible] lower order [illegible] serving woman, as she showed by the awkward haste to obey the old man's command to bring a seat to the fire. He did not speak, but commanded by gesture.

Redmond addressed him courteously. He smiled sadly, shook his head and touched his ear in token of helpless deafness.

And so the weary Lord detained from his waiting bride and marriage feast sat in the old dreary house, looking [illegible] from the fire to the serving woman, and from the dogs to the passive and fatigued face of his silent host.

When the woman came and wheeled the old man's chair to the board, he [illegible] The [illegible] turned to him.

"Will you sit by, sir?" she asked.

As he rose the door was opened and he stood arrested in the movement. A lady entered, so fair, so pure, so cold, that she might be made of snow. She had a loose black mantle about her which she threw off showing a regal form clad in a rich black [illegible] the brocade of a former generation. [illegible] her still face lighted with a look of surprise as she beheld the stranger. Redmond stepped forward with the grace of courts revealed in [illegible]

"I hope I am not intruding, lady; I have been overtaken by the storm in these mountains."

"What is your name," she asked, looking him in the face, nor giving other sign of interest in his handsome presence.

"I am the Lord of Redmond. I will trouble you no longer than I can avoid," he added a little haughtily.

"Lord Redmond," said the lady, you are welcome—you are very welcome, Lord Redmond."

She spoke with energy—not with warmth; but Redmond, confused at the strangeness of his position, observed only that her manner was a peculiar one; and though wishing himself well out of the place, he took his seat at the table as she desired.

The meal was good and she served him bountifully, while the old man for the first time breaking the silence, began telling a rambling incoherent, yet not uninteresting way, the story of some storm among those hills.

'It was five years ago, Barbara, you [illegible] carried home in my arms. Do you mind her hair curling over my arm in the way [illegible] was too heavy for me?'

He paused and looked across at the young lady [illegible] his face, showing some dim remembered pain in his broken mind.

"Where is Bess, Barbara?" he asked suddenly.

She [illegible] answered his daughter with a strange smile.

"Dead," said the old man drinking from his pewter cup [illegible] satisfied child.

In spite of a long fast, Redmond could not eat. These strange people had risen among his rosy bridegroom visage like ghosts at a feast.

'I am very tired [illegible]' he said rising from the table. I would like to go to rest, for I must be on my way early in the morning.

[illegible] beautiful [illegible] face.

'Kathy will show you [illegible]—her room! He shall sleep there, [illegible] sleep!' she murmured turning [illegible] leaving the room.

The chamber into which the old woman ushered him was large, irregular, full of nooks and shelves, on which [illegible]

'Has Miss Barbara [illegible] her own bed-room, I wonder?' he asked, looking about him [illegible] was left alone.

At the head of the bed hung a family portrait, a hale man and 3 children [illegible] girls. In the dark [illegible] nize the childhood [illegible] he had just left, but [illegible] of the youngest girl had in it something familiar.

[illegible]

His eyes wandered [illegible] upon a scarlet cloak flung over a chair, and then to a pair of dainty shoes [illegible] a peg. There was a knot of pink ribbon beneath the little round mirror of burnished steel, and [illegible] hat hung out from the [illegible] chest.

[illegible] said Redmond [illegible] chair [illegible] throwing his cloak over it [illegible] tired enough to sleep anywhere. I wonder what my little bride will think,' was his last thought as he composed himself to sleep.

He awoke with the dawn, and sprang up. Early as it was breakfast was awaiting him, and his horse was saddled at the door.

'I am afraid you have been put to some trouble on my account,' he said as Barbara appeared and took her place at the table. 'I meant to have taken my leave without disturbing any one in the house.'

'You could not have done that,' she answered, with the same [illegible]

[illegible]

In vain he protested. She brought [illegible] black horse, and rode by his side down the path. She wore a black cloak—her pale chiseled face under its hood. Redmond looked at her covertly, pondering how she could be so [illegible] yet so repulsive to him.

'Your father [illegible]?' he asked by way of conversation.

'No. He sits all day [illegible] dogs trying to clean the [illegible] that will never be used again.'

'Your brother is dead then?'

'He died of a broken heart.'

'Your family have seen trouble,' said Redmond carelessly.

'We have seen bitter trouble,' she answered.

After a moment she resumed.

'We had a sister [illegible] our darling and our pride, the boy's [illegible] she was murdered. [illegible] together you know. She could not die and [illegible] followed her weakness. We [illegible] to poverty, desolation and despair. Where are you going, Lord Redmond?'

He was [illegible] and told the truth [illegible] my mind.

'I am going home to [illegible]

'Where?'

'At Redmond Castle.'

'Is your bride young?'

'Young and lovely [illegible] Lady Ann Delaney.'

'She loves you?'

'Yes, see this little [illegible] I bought it for her to ride over the hills with, when the Spring comes.'

'Lord Redmond stop!' she cried. 'Do you know where you stand? You stand before my sister's grave, my sister whom you murdered three years ago, by false vows as surely as the knife murders. You know who I am now—I can see it in your face! You remember Bess McCrea. You won her love; she came home to die. It is you who have ruined us. Do you think I will let you go to happiness? Never! There is her grave. You shall go over it to your death.'

The mound was on the very edge of a cliff.

He held his horse desperately but she urged hers forward a step pressing [illegible] upon her with an oath.

'You must never go back!' She cried, with a mocking laugh at the horror in his face.

She had a thong in her hand, which [illegible] on her own horse. He was terrified by his position.

'[illegible] across the ravine!' he exclaimed.

'Go [illegible]' she said.

He [illegible] the little filly instantly [illegible] would strike the [illegible] creature—and he spurred her to the leap. The distance [illegible] struck the opposite ledge with her fore feet, slipped and horse and rider went spinning into the gulf below.

THE MAINE ELECTION.

Grant's Majority Reduced!

The Maine election took place last Monday. The Radicals carried the State by about 15,000, a reduction of 5,000 on the vote of 1868. The Grant cause is getting weak, while our prospects are becoming brighter every day.

Lincoln's entire cabinet, with the exception of Simon Cameron, who was kicked out of his position in six weeks for corruption, is strong for Greeley.

Fifty thousand dollars have been stolen from the State Department fund to build the palatial stables for the [illegible] of Ulysses I. This is civil service reform.

Judge Settle, who presided over the Philadelphia Convention, drew ten thousand dollars as Minister to Peru. He [illegible] that country and in all probability, never will.

[illegible] day, who had a pretty good [illegible] of General Grant, [illegible] during his recent [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] which was [illegible]. "See the [illegible]."

When [illegible] wants to Voorhees to [illegible] Louisville, Voorhees [illegible]. "If I want to vote for Grant, I [illegible] and square, without [illegible] any tom-fool convention as [illegible]."

[illegible] makes an earnest appeal to Mr. Wilson and Governor Hawley to ask themselves the question whether they would support a proved rogue, like Hartranft, for Governors of their own States. If not, [illegible] is honest or decent [illegible] to Pennsylvania and ask the people of that State to vote for him.

John A. Dix, the Grant candidate for Governor of New York, has been a [illegible] all his life. He was for Buchanan, Lincoln, Johnson and Grant, and has managed to hold [illegible] under all of them. He was President of the Johnson Convention in Philadelphia in 1866, which was called "to organize opposition to Congressional usurpation."

According to Secretary McCulloch's report, submitted in December, 1868, the whole amount of the reduction of the public debt during the three years and seven months of Johnson's administration was over $470,000,000. This shows that the average rate of reduction under Johnson was nearly $2,000,000 a month more than the average rate under Grant.

There is no doubt, whatever, that the importation of negro votes has already commenced. The State Central Committee are in possession of facts that leave no doubt upon this question. Even in Fort Wayne there have [illegible] some strange black faces [illegible] the past week or two. It will do no good, gentlemen, you can't sustain your failing cause in that way in Indiana. It worked well in North Carolina, but won't avail you here.

As was expected, the Vermont election, last Tuesday, resulted in the usual Radical majority. As the Greeleyites have about four votes to one for the opposition, there was no contest and the Radicals practically had a clear field. The election for Congressmen in Wyoming resulted in the defeat of the present Grant incumbent and the election of the Liberal candidate by a large majority.

The steamer [illegible] collided on the 2d, in the sound, with a schooner, and went to pieces. The boat was a palace almost, and ran in the Stonington and Boston line, and had a heavy passenger list, principally of families on their way [illegible]. Over forty passengers are supposed to have been drowned—a large portion of them women and children.

How an Old Democrat Talks.

The following is an extract of a private letter from an old Democrat of Switzerland county:

"If I live to vote at the next Presidential election, it will be the twelfth vote cast for President by me, two for Jackson, two for Van Buren, one for Polk, one for Douglas, one for McClellan, one for Seymour, and if I live to cast my vote next November it will be for Horace Greeley as the regularly nominated candidate of the old Democracy."

It is stated by Gen. Farnsworth, of Illinois, member of Congress, who is now a Liberal Republican, that at the beginning of the session, upon the reception of the President's message in the House, he (Farnsworth) being on the Committee on Reconstruction, called the attention of the President to certain sentences in the message which referred to reconstruction, and asked him what he meant by it, and this was the answer of the great soldier and civilian, Ulysses S. Grant: "Well, I really cannot say, exactly. Morton put that in."

Francis Kernan, of Utica, Oneida county, New York, who is the Democratic and Liberal Republican candidate for Governor, is one of the ablest and most eminent lawyers in the State. His purity of character, his unchallenged integrity, are as widely known as his name. There is no position in the State that he could not have had years ago if he would have accepted it. He has declined more offers of honor and emolument than generally fall to the lot of one man to accept. After the development of rascality in the city of New York and at Albany, the people demanded a man who would afford a guarantee that there should be no stealing in Legislatures, and they have found such a one in Mr. Kernan. His election by an immense majority over the octogenarian General Dix is as certain as that November rolls round.

Hauled Down the Flag.

Bro. Brown, the able editor of the Cardington (O.) Republican, has changed the name of his to the Independent and hauled down the names of Grant and Wilson. He says in his letter last week:

"Gen. U. S. Grant has been put in nomination for President of these United States, by the Republican party, and I say I say, verily, [illegible] but by a [illegible] ring of [illegible] politicians at the White House [illegible] to the Republicans [illegible] United States [illegible] [illegible] Grant, we have put him in position [illegible] you must vote for him for the [illegible] in the gift of the people, or a Republican you dare not say you will not vote for him, if you do you [illegible] a scrub, a traitor to your party, and by these thongs of anathemas poured upon your backs you are whipped into the ring. Oh! shame upon such independence."

Hendricks Sustained.

The Indianapolis Journal has been trying to prejudice the people against Thomas A. Hendricks, by charging him with dishonesty, while connected with the Water Works Company of that city. Mayor Mitchell, a Grant Republican, has this to say of the matter.

A CARD.

As the affairs of the Water Works Company are being brought into public discussion by reason I presume, of the fact that one of its members Hon. T. A. Hendricks, is in politics, I deem it but an act of justice to the company and to Mr. Hendricks personally, to state some of the facts that are in my personal knowledge.

The stock sold to Mr. William C. Smock and General George F. McGinnis was stock owned by Mr. James O. Woodruff. He had purchased it from a party in New York. No person else than Mr. Woodruff had any interest in it whatever when it was sold. I made the sale to Mr. Smock myself as the agent of Mr. Woodruff, and was cognizant to the sale to General McGinnis. Neither the Water Works Company nor Mr. Hendricks had any interest in the transaction. I have no reason to believe and do not believe, that Mr. Hendricks had any knowledge whatever, that either of the sales were being made or was contemplated.

I know personally that neither Mr. Hendricks nor the Water Works Company, ever recieved one cent of the proceeds of either of those sales, and that neither of them care to have the slightest pretext for making any such claim.

DANIEL MACAULEY.

Indianapolis, September 5, 1872.

There is another card of similar report signed by a prominent Grant man of that city. But this is sufficient to show that Mr. Hendricks is recognized by all who know him, as an honest man without regard to party.

The Louisville Farce.

[illegible] adjourning on Wednesday night, after the nomination had been made, the Louisville sideshow adjourning until Thursday morning, when they affirmed the work of the day previous, notwithstanding the continued declination of Mr. O'Conor and the refusal of J. Q. Adams to go on with the farce unless the former would accept the doubtful compliment, and lead the way. A committee was appointed to meet in New York and inform Mr. O'Conor of his nomination on the 10th instant. If Mr O'Conor has any self respect he will refuse to lend his name to one of the greatest frauds ever attempted upon the people. Those who witnessed the Convention and some of the scenes that transpired say that language can not give any adequate idea of the scalawags and political dead head beats who had been hired to enact the farce. The Convention excited the disgust of every decent person who looked upon it. A few incidents transpired during the session of Wednesday will give some idea of the parties engaged in it which we gather from the Louisville Courier-Journal.

"The fact that there was a ring working the Convention for its own purpose became so apparent that the dulest delegate could have shut his eyes to it, and the ill-feeling that resulted broke out every now and then. One of the ugliest incidents of the confusion was the expulsion of Geo. Francis Train. He had better credentials than any other delegate whose papers we saw, and a thousand times better than many who remained without question. But, notwithstanding this fact, he was, nevertheless hustled out on attempting to sustain his rights as a delegate. Somebody remarked that Col. Duncan was envious of his prototype. Mr. Moore of New York made a speech, arguing that the labor reformers should be represented on the ticket. Mr. Train arose and commenced to speak on the subject, when he was interrupted by loud cries and the Chairman called him to order.—Several shouted that he was no delegate, and there were cries of "Put him out," etc., when Duncan explained that he had given Train a ticket, and the affair was finally quieted down, but not before Mr. Train was forcibly ejected by the police.

Mr. Train came to Louisville on the invitation of Duncan to be present at the Convention. He represented four States, traveled at his own expense and will settle his own bills while in the city, which cannot be said of all the delegates. Dr. Field, of Jeffersonville a Grant man, was well supplied with tickets of admission.

A citizen of Jeffersonville was in Louisville yesterday and met a man who ran off from Seymour some months since owing him about seventy dollars. The citizen asked the gentleman for the amount he owed, but he refused to pay it, stating that he had no money. A warrant was issued but the money was paid. The man who owed the money was a delegate from Ohio, and an intense Radical.

Judge Woodward, of Pennsylvania, was in the city with his family. The Duncanites seeing him started the report that he was in attendance upon the convention. It was a grave mistake. The Judge is a warm Greeley man, and feels hurt at being classed among the indignant Grantites.

During the struggle over the nomination for the Vice Presidency, McCullagh, of the St. Louis Democrat, who was in the room, and who was deeply interested in the success of the Grant party of Indiana, engineered [illegible] for Edgerton. Duncan [illegible] very big seller [illegible] and being in favor of Adams, went over to McCullagh.

"Mac," said he, "you are not a delegate, and if you don't quit interfering I will call the attention of the convention to the fact."

"But I want to help Grant in Indiana," persisted Mac.

"This is not a Grant convention," said Duncan.

Mac looked up in his face with a sort of quizzical smile, and said in a confidential tone:

"Pshaw, now, Colonel, what's the use of talking that way to me. That's too thin. The convention is either for Grant or Greeley, and you know you are not for Greeley. It'l do to tell to outsiders, but it won't do to talk to an old stager like me."

Duncan looked at him for a moment with speculation in his eyes and walked off, not too soon, however, to hear the parting shot:

"Grant pays for this thing, and he has a right to be considered."

Another Republican Journal for Mr. Greeley.

The Gloversville Standard, for many years the only Republican paper in Fulton County, New York, has taken down the head of its columns and substituted those of Greeley and Brown.

In announcing this change that paper says.

"The time has arrived when the strongest conviction of duty impel us to declare that from to-day, the Standard will advocate the election of Messrs Greeley and Brown to the offices of President and Vice-President of the United States. * * * Horace Greeley, with tens of thousands of his Republican fellow citizens, and hundreds of thousands of his Democratic countrymen, honestly believed that President Grant and his councellors were conducting the Government in a manner detrimental to the best interests of the country. They endeavored—as they had the unquestioned right to do to arrest this state of things, and, as the result, of their deliberations, Mr. Greeley, himself, was nominated for the Presidency, first by a convention of Republicans, and subsequently by the unanimous decision of the Democratic Convention at Baltimore. At the time of his nomination by the Democracy, that historic party, by a solemn act, the very unanimity of which commends its sincerity, adopted a platform that ought to be satisfactory to every honest Republican. Before Mr. Greeley's nomination by Liberal Republicans and Democrats, none stood fairer with the great Republican party than he; since that significant event, none has been so fiercely assailed. We cannot agree with those who persistently attack him and malign his motives. The Republican party was the advocate of reform, and of the reduction of governmental expenditures, and consequently of the immense load of taxation under which the people toil. It is no longer what it was in the days of its early promise. We can look for no reform at the hands of those who now control its action; hence we turn with earnest hope to the new party of the people, that the necessity of the times has originated, into which are gathering the enlightened and patriots, the best element of the parties of the past.

Louisville Refugees.

Samuel Clem, an old and respected citizen of Allen county, and we believe President of the Straight out Convention, at Fort Wayne, and also a delegate to the Louisville Convention, has this to say in a card, to the Sentinel on his return;

"I desire to say to my Democratic friends in Allen county, that I went to the Louisville Convention as a delegate from the Ninth Congressional District of the State of Indiana, honestly believing that that Convention was called for the furtherance of sound Democratic principles. Intercourse with the managers of that affair, at Louisville, has satisfied me that it was instigated and managed by men wholly for selfish purposes, and to secure the re-election of General Grant.

SAMUEL CLEM.

The prospects don't seem to be very flattering according to Mr. Clem.

HERE is another from C. C. Hicks. Our merchants know Mr. Hicks, as the gentlemanly agent for a long time of the Trentman grocery establishment of Fort Wayne. Mr. Hicks was a Straight Out and attended the convention at Fort Wayne, and comes down on the Louisville affair pretty hard.

Communicated.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept 3, '72.

Editors Fort Wayne Daily Sentinel:

GENTLEMEN:—I am convinced, satisfied and fully converted. The "Straigh-out Convention," or rather the self appointed delegates, composingthe Convention, are the shabbiest, dirty shirt crowdthat ever disgraced a political gathering. Falstaff's ragged guard, which even he, was ashamed to march through the country with, were genteel, compared with these rapscallions assembled here to-day. Every body is drunk, and the thing will resolve itself into a stupendous farce. One delegate, from Arkansas, (a Fedal office-holder) is in jail for obtaining money upon false representations. Another from Ohio has been turned out of his hotel as a common nuisance, and scores of them are having a big drunk generally, at the expense of Grant, Morton & Co. Am sorry I cannot remain until to-morrow to give you the result of this day's proceedings. Last night at the Galt House, a gentleman charged Blanton Duncan, to his face, with having sold out to Grant. Duncan said that any man who said so lied, whereupon Dr. Keller, a Prof. of Surgery in the Louisville College, jumped up, saying, "I say so!" and immediately knocked Duncan as flat as a flounder. Keller is a Greeley Democrat.

To-night I leave for Corinth, Miss., thence south through Alabama and Georgia.

Hurrah for Greeley!

Believe me, etc.,

C. CARROLL HICKS.

Honorable J. E. Edgerton.

The gentleman writes an interesting communication to the Fort Wayne Sentinel, from which we take the following.

Personally and as a Democrat, I would prefer other men to Greeley and Brown for President and Vice President. Most Democrats could have chosen other men from among the candidates before the Cincinnati Convention, who would have suited them better—and I can certainly name many men in the Democratic party whom I would greatly prefer to Greeley and Brown. With such men as Seymour, Hoffman Pendleton Thurman, Groesbeck and Hendricks in its ranks the Democratic party was not at a loss for able and true men to fill the Presidential office. But the people did not select them. No spontaneous and united voice of the party or the people called for them. The Cincinnati convention, led by the highest intelligence and ability of the Republican party, did not choose them. The Baltimore Convention, the recognized representative of the Democratic party, as a national organization, did not choose them. What then shall I do? Shall I from mere pride of opinion, of obstinate self-will, or because of personal preference, or from any baser motive fail to cooperate with the great mass of men of my own party and principles to secure peace and good Government to my country? Shall I vote for Grant, or fail to vote for Greeley, and thus give strength and success to a party, and to men who, I honestly believe, will not give the country peace and good Government? For one as a citizen and a democrat, faithful to the principle of the party, as I understand them, I have from the first announcement of the Cincinnati nomination and platform believed it to be wise and patriotic, for the Democratic party to support Greeley and Brown.

Patriotism is above party. Democratic organizations and policy are not ends but means. Fidelity to the Constitution, capacity for administration, and incorruptable integrity and wisdom, in administration are what we want in our Government now. I will join hands with any and all who, in my opinion, will lead us most quickly and surely to that end! History has seen few higher examples of patriotic magnanimity than that illustrated by the Democratic party of the United States powerful as it is, in numbers and able leadership, in its spontaneous and cordial support of men long opposed to it, but now ready to co-operate with it, in establishing the future hope of our country on the solid basis of fraternal good will, constitutional right, and honest and capable administration. In view of these grand, personal considerations sink to insignificance. Therefore it is that Democrats are for Greeley and Brown, not because they love them much but because they love their country more.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of a certified copy of a Decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Common Pleas Court, in a cause wherein Robert Cummings and John Cummings are plaintiffs and Joseph DePew and Ellen DePew are Defendants requiring me to make the sum of Three hundred and eighty-six dollars and fourteen cents, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder on SATURDAY SEPT. 28, 1872.

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits, for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

Sixty acres of land off of the east side of the south-east quarter of section twenty-nine (29) in township thirty-four, north of range twelve (12) East beginning at the south, at the south-east corner of said quarter, thence running west along the south line of said quarter sixty rods, thence north parallel with the east line of said quarter to the north line of the same, thence east along the north line of said quarter sixty rods to the north-east corner of said quarter, thence south along the east line of said quarter to the place of beginning, excepting two acres of land heretofore sold by Benjamin Miller and wife to Joseph S. Bentley out of the south-west corner of said land and one-fourth of an acre of land sold by said Miller and wife to John Zeeker in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said Decree, interest and costs I will, at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said Decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation and appraisement laws.

J. PLUM, Sheriff.
Geo. W. Maxwell, Dept'y.

VINEGAR BITTERS
VEGETABLE FREE FROM ALCOHOL
DR. J. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
VINEGAR BITTERS

Vinegar Bitters are not a vile Fancy Drink, made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced, and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the native roots and herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the Great Blood Purifier and a Life-giving Principle, a Perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition, enriching it, refreshing and invigorating both mind and body. They are easy of administration, prompt in their action, certain in their results, safe and reliable in all forms of disease.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist: There is scarcely an individual on the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics, will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS twice a week.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc., etc. In these as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters act on all these cases in a similar manner. By purifying the Blood they remove the cause, and by resolving away the effects of the inflammation (the tubercular deposits) the affected parts receive health, and a permanent cure is effected.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

The Aperient and mild Laxative properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are the best safe-guard in cases of eruptions and malignant fevers, their balsamic, healing and soothing properties protect the humors of the fauces. Their Sedative properties allay pain in the nervous system, stomach, and bowels, either from inflammation, wind, colic, cramps, etc.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Directions.—Take of the Bitters on going to bed at night from a half to one and one-half wine-glassfull. Eat good nourishing food, such as beef-steak, mutton chop, venison, roast beef, and vegetables, and take out-door exercise. They are composed of purely vegetable ingredients, and contain no spirit.

The Auburn Courier

OFFICIAL PAPER of the COUNTY.

Local and Miscellaneous.

Money is plenty.

Grapes are ripe.

A HEAVY rain last Sunday.

The melancholy days have come.

Spring chickens seem to be scarce.

The Grant club is getting thined out.

Evening parties, among the small fry are numerous.

The District Fair at Waterloo 3d week in October.

A DANCE will be given at Newville, tomorrow evening.

Boots and shoes of every variety just received fresh from the east at Humes'.

Go to Smith & Hare's when you want good bargains.

A BAD 'rooster' in this town says 'that Auburn is getting a few good-looking girls

The audience was not very large, at the M. E. Church, last Sabbath evening.

If you want a good pair of boots you will fine them at Humes'.

Look out for Miss Katy Did—she always comes six weeks before frost, to arrange her domestic affairs for winter.

'J. N.' the Immortal, is said to be traveling with Barnum's show as a Digger Indian. This is his last dodge in the veil and pressure business.

'Dolly Varden' is played. Her successor in popular favor with the gentleman is 'Polly Tikes' but the ladies abhor the creature.

Some of the sidewalks on Main street are being repaired. Several are in a wretched condition.

Go and see that splendid new stock of boots and shoes just received by W. W. Humes.

Always purchase a good article at a fair price. You will find this kind at Humes' shoe store.

Auburn has done more building this summer than any place it's equal, in Northern Indiana.

Look on the Rainier hotel fence, if you want to know what to do with your butter, eggs, &c.

QUITE a number of our Grant friends condemn the course of Col. DeLong, at Newville, at the Democratic meeting.

The brick work of the third story will soon be commenced on the Odd Fellows building.

BELLED cows are a nuisance. One of our neighbors indulges in this luxury, and we are reminded of the fact almost every night.

THAT young man who walks, with his gal, down the depot side walk had to 'run his face' for a new pair of gate hinges, last Monday morning.

THE Rainier House has undergone several fine improvements. This house is first-class and the public can fully satisfy themselves by stopping there.

The new brick block has received another addition. D. D. Snyder, has purchased ground on the west for a store room and is now laying the foundation.

The young folks should remember the social, at Mr. Beard's, east of town, tonight. A large number of young folks are expected to be present, and a general good time is anticipated.

HON R. V. LONG's appointments for this county, closed at Sedan, last Thursday evening. He expects to be back to give a few more speeches before the State election.

CHAS. FOX, one of our saloonists, failed to get license at the Commissioners Court last week, and we are now one less off in saloons, which will not materially retard our future growth.

Notice the change in Root & Co's, advertisement. This firm does a fare square business with every person, and we would recommend them to our friends when they go to Fort Wayne.

Abright & Shepherd have before the public, this week, their advertisement, and those wishing to purchase musical instrument, of any kind, or clocks, watches and jewelry, should, by all means give them a call. They deal in nothing but first-class goods, and to satisfy our friends of this fact we would ask you to call and see for yourselves.

READ the advertisment headed Organs, in another column. Mr. Hoffman makes the Estey Organ a speciality, and those wishing to purchase an instrument should call on him.

A GENTLEMAN from Butler says that the Grant clubs from Waterloo and this place made so much noise at the meeting, at that place Friday evening, that he got but little satisfaction out of the speech.

IF you want to obtain an excellent quality of drugs, go to Davenport & Co., but if they have not what you want go to Woesner, Williams & Co., corner Main and Calhoun streets, Fort Wayne, where you can obtain a pure article at a reasonable price. They are obliging, agreeable gentlemen, and one can rely on their representations.

Messrs. Abright & Shepherd have opened up a large stock of organs, of all styles and prices, and are now ready to supply the public with all kinds of musical instruments and goods. Jewelry, silverware, etc., at the lowest prices. Mr. Shepherd is an excellent musician and will give you the advantage of a long experience in the purchase of an instrument.

Nearly 3,000,000 letters went to the Dead Letter Office last year. 50,000 had no county or State direction, 100,000 lacked stamps, and 3,000 had no address at all. $191,000 in cash and more than $3,000,000 in drafts, checks, etc., were found in these letters. The Department reports that, on an average, every letter that goes to the Dead Letter Office contains one dollar.

A HOUSE divided against itself cannot stand. That's scripture. The Weaver House in this place is now in that condition. It has been divided and the rear part removed to the rear several rods, and the other will follow in a few days. Old things must give way. A handsome new brick is to go up in the place of the present one, and ere long we trust we can boast of a nice new commodious hotel.

An old Farmer by the name of Stayley, came into our office yesterday, and complained about the conduct of the Grant club of this place, in passing his house on their return from Butler. He says they stopped at his house for a drink, made a great noise and called him a 'd—d old traitor.' We do not know anything about the matter more than he told us, and it is to be hoped that it is not so bad as he makes out.

The Setember Number of Peters' Musical Monthly, price 30 cents, contains the following music, worth in sheet-form, $3.40:

Father of All. Sacred Song, 50c; Lay me where my mother's Sleeping, 40c; Little Dan, song and chorus, 35c; Love Chase Galop, four hands, 35c; School Girl's Waltz, 35c; Willie's Schottische, 35c; Laughing Wave Mazurka, 50.

Mr. Peters offers to send July, August, and September numbers, post-paid, for 75 cents, or the nine back numbers for 1872 for $2. Address, J. L. Peters, 599 Broadway, N. Y.

REMEMBER that Hon. B. B. Daily speaks at the Court House next Tuesday evening Mr. Daily is said to be a good speaker and we hope the attendance will be good.—Major Saylor will speak on Monday evening and a general attendance is requested We trust on these occasions there will be less going out than has heretofore been the case. If you cannot go and stay, it would be better if you would not go at all. Running out every minute disturbs a speaker, and it is not good manners.—There are but few things that will excuse a person in leaving a hall during a public meeting and ill manners is not one of them.

MR. CURRY, at Butler, tried to show that the tax levy is higher in counties where Democrats are in power. If all the counties are like our own, this may be so, and we are led then to seek the cause. A loss Twenty Thousand Dollars under Radical rule is the main cause of the high levy at present. Since the Democrats have came into power, then, they have been compelled to make these high levies to pay up the robberies, the stealings, the defalcations which took place while the Radicals were in power. Mr. Curry had better not say too much about this matter, it awakens old recollection and will make people think.

Some of our exchanges are publishing as a curious item a statement to the effect that 'A horse in Iowa pulled the plug out of the bung hole of a barrel, and slaked his thirst with the water that ran out.'—We do not see anything extraordinary in the occurrence. Now, if the horse had pulled the barrel out of the bung hole and slaked its thirst with the plug, or if the plug had pulled the horse out of the barrel and slaked its thirst with the bunghole, or if the bung hole had pulled the thirst out of the horse or slaked its plug with the barrel, or if the barrel had pulled its thirst with a stake, it might be worth while to make a fuss over it.

LIVELY TIMES AT FAIRFIELD.

One of the most enthusiastic meeting that has yet taken place in the county, came off at Fairfield Center, last Monday evening. It was addressed by Hon. Allen Zollars, of Fort Wayne, and for two hours a crowded audience gave an individed attention, and repeatedly applauded the speaker. The best joke was that the citizens there had judged that it was to be a German speech from the name of the speaker, and several of our German friends had prepared a few songs in that language to sing on the occasion. Well, we had the songs, any way, and they were good and sang in excellent style. The meeting was a grand success in every particular.

LEET & STOCKING.—We hardly know what the opposition would do if they were to lose the Leet and Stocking items out of their speeches. Yet these men have not been, and are not now Government officers. They do not hold, and never have held, any civil appointment under Gen. Grant.—LaGrange Standard.

Another style of Radical argument.—Who was it recommended, Leet to the collector of New York! General Grant. Who was instrumental in the removal of Collector General? Col. Leet. Who was it that appointed Tom Murphy? General Grant. Who was it that controlled the money order business under Murphy?—Leet and Stocking. And Grant is not responsible, is that what you want the people to understand? A beautiful argument truly, but its all we can expect from that side.

THE Press, last week, says, there was very little said by the COURIER, concerning the apportionment of officers except that it was a fabrication, and that it was our job to say so. Certainly it is, and we intend to keep it before the people that the Press has lied in the matter. If not, give us the proof. Regarding the gift received by Grant of $105,000, we have not seen it denied by any respectable paper.—The Kendallville Standard and the Press, should bring proof to sustain their assertions. When they show us that it is not so, then we will admit it.

Sunday School Pic-nic.

The following report of a very interesting Sunday School pic-nic was handed in last week for publication, but not in time for that issue:

The several schools of Jackson township met at the Cedar Creek school house on Saturday, Aug 30th, for the purpose of holding a pic-nic. The following named schools were present:

Hopewell, Cedar Creek and Bethel. The exercises were opened by singing and prayer by Elder Ward, followed by an address by Prof. McIntosh, and an oration from P. V. Hoffman, and short addresses from others. Then came a sumptuous repast in the grove, which was greatly enjoyed. After dinner came declamations, songs, essays, etc. Freeman's band enlivened the occasion with good music.

H. N. Ward is now headquarters in the Crockery Trade. He has an immense stock, and sells very low. We call attention to his Pictorial in this issue. When you go to Fort Wayne give him a call.

PREPARE FOR THE FAIR.

Our friends should get things ready for the first fair of the North-east Indiana Agricultural Society to be held at Waterloo, the third week in October. Commence now to prepare your articles for exhibition and get everything up in good style. This is an enterprise that should receive our entire attention because in contributes largely to the interests of our county.—Every farmer and mechanic can assist by brining forward articles of unusual merit, to make up a display that will be a credit to our county. This not only does us good at home but gives us a reputation abroad, and we [illegible] among the most prosperous counties in the State.—There is no reason why DeKalb should not take her rank with them, as she posesses every thing within her borders to entitle her to a position of this kind.—Therefore, begin now, and do all you can to this end.

Another Radical Lie.

The Goshen Times gives a list of the towns in this part of the State, and the number of business men who are for Greeley. We notice that Auburn is credited with 34 business men, four of whom, it claims are for Greeley. Now, what are the facts. Auburn has twice that number of business men, and half of them are for Greeley. And in Butler and Waterloo the same proportion is mentioned in this list, yet the facts in such cases will prove almost the reverse. If the Rads count up their majorities on this basis their chances to elect Grant are worse than ever. We are perfectly satisfied that they shall do this. It says there are two business men in Waterloo for Greeley! and all the rest are for Grant. This is Radical argument. How truthful! It is like the assertion of Mr. Curry, at Butler, last week, when he said that the tax levies were more in counties where Democrats were in authority than where Radicals ruled. It is worthy of about as much consideration.

THAT SPEECH.

The Press of last week gives a very flattering account of the speech delivered at Waterloo on the 30th of August, 1872, by Hon. W. H. Withers. The figure is so much overdrawn that we cannot help noticing it; besides the Press wholly failed in giving an account of what occurred immediately after the speech. It was so consistent. After lecturing the people and telling them what to do, the speaker left the stand and was soon surrounded by a few of his political friends who were waiting to escort him to a place where he might lie down and rest his wearied frame But his teachings were not yet finished.—Looking around he spied a fine looking "Democrat" in the crowd, and longing for better company he cut loose from his Republican friends and stepping up to his Democratic friend and taking him by the arm says to him: Let's go and smile Well, he was right from Fort Wayne, and come up here to tell the people what to do, and how to act, and what else could a fellow do than to just go right along like a nice little man, and have something. The two started and entered the popular saloon of Mr. Lock, in full view of all present, and oiled their tonsils. His friends stared, looked disgusted and bewildered, save one whose name is Joseph who has never as yet been known to fail in being on hand when anybody is going to treat. Being well posted in this kind of business he poped in just at the right time and as a matter of courtesy was invited to take a nip. His ability is beyond question, in this business, and if we are to judge him by his record he can furnish 'Benzine' better than criminals as the aforesaid document shows that he has 'Non-prossed' thirty-six cases in DeKalb county alone during his term of office.—But to the speaker, after imbibing, the Hon. W. H W. says to his 'Democratic' friend. Let us go and play billiards. Of course he was the right Hon. direct and fresh from Fort Wayne and again there was nothing that a fellow could well do but accept. So arm in arm they started for the billiard room. In a very short time, however, the aforesaid Joseph again put in an appearance, to be followed in a short time by "R. Wes" who in the forepart of the evening exercises attended the meeting on top of a horse and just 'bossed' things, but was now dismounted and anxious to entertain his friend W. H. W. but he was too much interested in his little game, with his Democratic friend, to pay any attention. His Republican friends soon retired, and thus ended the great speech.

Lots of people that have never been in Fort Wayne and are not acquainted can find the Red Front clothing hall, No. 5, Keystone block. Any woman or child can find this place, and you will save from 20 to 25 cents on each dollar.

FRIGHTFULL OCCURENCE!

A Little Boy Falls Upon his Knife and Bleeds to Death, in Ten Minutes.

We are called upon to chronicle one of the saddest accidents that can be inflicted upon a happy and contented family. So suddenly and under such heart rending circumstances did death do his work, that a general gloom fell upon our place, and do what we might the terrible occurrence seemed ever to be present.

Master Charlie Bloom, only son of Charles [illegible], Esq., merchant of this place, went across the street last Saturday morning to neighbor Palmer's, to play with the children, taking with him a pocket knife, which he had lost several days before, and which he again came in possession of that morning. He had been in the habit of climbing an apple tree in the garden of this neighbor, and it is supposed, for there was no one present, that he had done so this morning, with the knife open, losing his hold fell from the tree.—When discovered he was near the kitchen door. He said to one of the women of the house that he had fallen and he was going to die. She laid him down and ran quickly for his mother and they found him rapidly sinking. His father and the Doctors were sent for but he only gasped once or twice after their arrival. The cause of his death was not yet known, and Mr. Totten who happened to be near, went to the spot and found the knife, still open and blood upon the blade and ground. He went back, and on examination, a small incision just large enough to admit the blade was found between the right shoulder and breast. In its course it had severed an artery, and little Charlie actually bled to dead internally.

He was a sprightly little lad of some seven summers, of an excellent disposition, and the joy and pride of the household.—There is not a heart in the place but what beats in sympathy with the stricken family and we trust that never again will such a terrible calamity startle our people with such frightful suddenness as this.

Now a glorious spirit hovers
Just above our Charlie's head,
While beneath the snowy covers
Lies our darling still and dead.

On the face of alabaster
Still a smile seraphic plays,
'Tis the work of the great Master;
Question not his wondrous ways

Clasp the hand so small and and tender,
On the still and lifeless breast,
All the service we can render
Is to give it final rest.

Weep not, O father, mother,
He has flown to realms of day,
For the angels home are bringing
Charlie's spirit, while they say:

"Glory be to God, the Master,
Glory to our Lord, the King,
He has saved thee from disaster,
And we now his praises sing."

Let All Turn Out!

TALK about a woman without a bang, a man without a wife, a ship without a rudder. What is the lack of each of those individuals or things to that of a man without an advertisement? He is a hope less cuss, a "goner in community." Talk of him being successful in business. You might as well talk of ascending to the moon on a greased moonbeam. People point at him in the street and say: "You Cassius has a lean hungry look." It may, however, be consoling to him to reflect that, when he dies, he will be advertised at last, and gratuitously at that.

The matter of an appropriation to build bridge in Franklin tp. referred to Dan' [illegible].

IF Van Long or any one else in this county has induced the editor of the Valpariso Messenger to take up the cudgel in his defence, while his brother here remains silent, we have only to say to him and a number of others now aiding in conductin the Union, that they may expect lively times from this forward. No man in this place, perhaps, is better acquainted with 'facts and figures' in and about this region, than the editor of the Indianian, and it will, perhaps, be just as well for Van. to 'call off his hounds' unless he desires some very unpleasant revelations. Take your choice, gentlemen.

The above is from the Indianian, edited by Gen. Reub. Williams, one of the Union Generals that lacked some of the whisky that Grant drank. He can't do much with Zimmerman, of the Messenger, so he wants to go for Zimmerman of the Union to catch up. What a detestable spirit, but we can't expect much else, from Grant-tights. What does Tom Taylor say of Reub. now that he has stuck his nose in against Zimmerman.

If you want the worth of your money, be treated by gentlemanly clerks, and not be asked for goods three times more than they are worth, go to the Red Front clothing hall, No. 5. Keystone block, For Wayne.

Everybody that goes to Fort Wayne should not fail to call at the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone block, and see the largest stock of clothing in the city. It has all been bought for cash before the late advance of wool.

The American Desert.

From Mr. C. H. Dorot we learn of the death in the Colorado Desert of Mr. Wm. Kirk, formerly a resident of this city, under the most melancholy circumstances. Mr. [illegible] gentleman whose name we did not learn, started a few days since from Mountain Springs, with a view of crossing the desert to the Colorado river, a distance of forty-five miles.—They had but a small canteen of water with them, which was exhausted before reaching their destination. Mr. [illegible] for the purpose of allaying his own thirst and procuring water to allay Mr Kirk's thirst likewise. Reaching the river and quenching his thirst, he [illegible] returned with water for Mr. Kirk, whose body he found twelve miles off, where he had evently died from exhaustion. On the same day the body of a G[illegible] found [illegible] between Ivanhan and the river. He is supposed to have perished from tho same cause.—Los Angeles Herald.

In a Balloon.

A perilous balloon ascension was performed in Chicago, July 4th, from the corner of Madison and Elizabeth sts. No basket was used, a trapeze of the size commonly used by circus performers being suspended below. When the balloon was filled, thirty persons kept it to the earth with difficulty. The aeronaut took his position, and the guys loosed, it shot up into the air with extraordinary rapidity. The athlete held by one leg [illegible] the level of the earth. At the height of a 1000 feet, he performed a summersault, and [illegible] continued, he performed a variety of feats, ending when the height of nearly a mile had been reached, by sliding head downward [illegible] ring and catching his toes upon the bar. He kept this position for a while and carefully drew himself up, seated himself upon the bar, and so continued through the remainder of the voyage. The atmosphere war almost too fresh for comfort upon the surface of the earth, but at the height of a mile and a half, which was soon reached, the cold became intense. Clouds were around him, and occasionally, a field of mist passed beneath his feet. From below, only the great gray body of the balloon was visable. Those who looked intently could just espy a little speck below it.

Until the height of a mile was gained, the fresh Northern was sweeping the balloon rapidly toward the east and Lake Michigan. The danger was imminent, and he had made preparations The balloon was spedily carried over the lake, which was reached near 16th street.

The last weight was loosened and a large part of the gas having escaped, the balloon began to descend rapidly, and at last struck the water about [illegible] miles from shore.

Being encumbered by the cord of the trapeze, he disentangled himself and cut it loose from the balloon, and clung to the ring and network. The wind carried the balloon rapidly in a southwest direction to the shore, and he was recued stiff, almost dead with cold.

A Russion Ghost Story.

In a certain village, the story runs, there [illegible] who hated work but loved gossip. So she never span herself, [illegible] to [illegible] girls to her house, where she feasted them, and they span for her. During one of these spinning feasts a dispute arose as to who of all the party was the boldest.

[illegible]

'Well, then,' said the spinners, 'if you're not afraid go through the grave yard into the church, take down the holy picture from the door, and bring [illegible]'

'Very Good,' said she. 'I'll bring it: only each of you must spin me a distaff-full.'

Well, [illegible] church, took down the picture, and brought it home with her. But then [illegible] to be taken back again, and the midnight hour had arrived. Who was to take it?

'Go [illegible] girls,' said the lazy-bones; 'I'll take it back myself.—I'm not afraid of anything.'

So she went to the church and replaced the picture. As she passed through the graveyard on her return, she saw a corpse in a white shroud sitting [illegible] moonlight night, and everything was visible.—She went up to the corpse and [illegible] han nt arrived, perhaps.) Then she went home, carrying the shroud with her. [illegible], when everybody had gone to bed, all of a sudden the corpse tapped at the window, saying, 'Give me my shroud! Give me my shroud!' The other girls were frightened out of their wits. But the lazy-bones took the shroud, [illegible] the window [illegible]

'There, take it!'

'No,' replied the corpse; 'take it to the place you took it from.'

[illegible] the cocks crowed, the corpse vanished.

Next night, at the same hour, after all the spinners had gone to their own homes, the corpse came again, tapped at the window, and cried,—

"Give me my shroud!"

Well, the girl's father and mother opened the window, and offered the corpse its shroud, but it cried,—

'No! Let her carry it back where she took it from.'

Just then the cocks began to crow and the [illegible]. Well, next day they sent for the priest, told him the whole story, and implored him [illegible]. The priest reflected a while, and then told the girl to come to mass next day. So in the morning she went to mass. There [illegible] people came to it; but just as they were going to sing the 'Cherubim Song,' a terrible whirlwind arose: and it caught up that girl in the air, and then [illegible] on the ground, and straight way the girl disappeared from sight. Nothing was ever found of her except her black hair.

Sewing Machine

IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly reinvigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

HOW TO GO WEST.
This is an inquiry which everyone should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey and a little care taken in examination of routes will in many cases save much trouble time and money.
The "C., B. & Q. R. R." running from Chicago, through Galesburg to Burlington, and the "I. B. & W. Route," running from Indianapolis, through Bloomington to Burlington, have achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading passenger routes to the West. At Burlington they connect with the great [illegible] from the great Burlington route which runs through South ern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the territories and passenger starting from DeKalb county, on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the Burlington route.

W. W. WORTHINGTON, Supt.

CRUSING.

BY CA'L SPENCER.

What a wide days but islands,
So many little islands,
And sleep the sea of silence
That flows about them all?
There, when the moon is risen,
The peaceful waters glisten,
But yonder splashing—list and listen!
It is the souls that fall.

The little boats are skimming
The wind led boats are skimming,
Each in its silver rimming,
[illegible] from shoal and shore.
There, not a oar is dipping—
With just a cable's slipping
Glides out the phantom shipping!
That wanders evermore.

Every day's an island,
A green or barren island,
A lowland or a highland,
That looks upon the sea.
There fruitful groves are crowning!
There barren cliffs are frowning,
And rocky channels drowning
The little boats that flee.

How many are the islands,
The teeming, talking islands,
That in the sea of silence
The roving vessels find?
Their number no man knoweth,
Their way the current showeth
The tide returneth [illegible]
As each is left behind.

The sailors long to tarry—
For rest they long to tarry—
When at some isle of fairy
They touch and go ashore.
With songs of wistful pleading
They follow the unheeding,
And with the tide's receding
Are drifting as before.

But sometime, in the sailing,
The blind and endless sailing,
They pass beyond the bailing
Of land upon the lee:
The lowlands and the highlands
And all beyond the islands,
Behold the sea of silence—
Behold the great white sea.

The Pigeon Pie.

Mother, will you make a pigeon pie to-morrow? asked father, when the silence in the bed-room showed that sleep had at last conquered the frolicers.

A pigeon pie? said mother.

Yes, replied father. I have told the children time enough that if they did not give these doves away I would kill them all.

But they knew you would't, suggested Mary.

Father pretended not to hear. They are all over in the barn; have just ruined that buckwheat, and I can't stand it any longer. I have got them shut up to-night, and Mrs. Clark will kill them and dress them over there for you if you make a pie of them to-morrow morning early.

Why, yes; I suppose I can, said mother, if I can only manage it so the children wont know it; they'll feel so badly, you know.

Let them go chestnuting, said Mary

That will do, said mother.

They wanted to go to-day. I will let them take their dinner, so they'll stay all day, and they wont know what became of the doves.

Say, Fan, said Ella, early the next morning, wake up, mother says we may go a chestnuting, and take our dinner.

Good, said Fanny, wide awake in a minute.

You'd better hurry up after breakfast, said Mary, so as to have a nice long day of it.

That's good! said Ella, if you will wash the dishes for me, for that was the trial of her life.

What may we have for dinner, mother? asked Fannie.

Go, get anything you are a mind to, said she. There's some pie, and some ginger cake, and take these tarts, if you want them

I thought something was up, said Ella afterwards. You were all so wonderful good, and so anxious we should have a long day of it.

But it did seem as if they would never get started that morning. I do believe all four shoestrings broke, and the red basket could'nt be found high nor low, and nothing else would do to hold the nuts, and we expected every moment Mrs. Clark would bring in the doves, and then! But at last the shoes were all tied, and the basket found, and Fannie ready, but then, where was Ella?

Oh, she has found some old paper of course, said Fannie, and she must stop and read it. Come Ella, oh, come along. You've read that old story forty times. I know you have.

Do wait one minute, please, Fan said Ella; I'll finish it in just one minute.

Oh, dear! Just one minute. It's always the way.

Come. Ella, I'll save the paper till you get home, said Mary. Don't keep Fannie waiting so. And at last they were fairly out of sight.

Mrs. Clark brought the birds already dressed, and mother had the pie ready for the oven, when—There, said Mary, the children are coming back.

Oh, we shall have a fuss now, said her mother.

What did you come home for girls? ask Mary.

Oh, we did'nt feel like staying one bit' said Fannie, and there wasn't any chestnuts, either.

There was no help for it now, so we must make the best of it. Ella caught a glimpse of the pie as it went into the oven and exclaimed:

Chicken pie for dinner! Oh, I'm glad I came home.

Mother could'nt quite say she was glad too. It was a wonder Fannie did not go to feed the doves, but she did'nt happen to think of it, and all went on right till dinner time. Ella took some pie and pronounced it splendid. Fannie did'nt eat chicken, but she wanted to know which chicken was killed?

How can I tell you which one! said father.

Was it Top-knot?

No.

Was it Yellow-legs?

No.

Was it Blackey?

No.

Well, then, I don't care which one you did kill, said Fannie.

It must have been a very small chicken, said Ella

We grown folks were very busy eating, and did't look at each other. Ella had commenced on her third plateful, when she exclaimed:

Well, if this ain't the funniest chicken I ever did see! I can't find the wish bone or anything.

We did'nt answer. A minute after Ell's knife and fork went down on the table—not very softly—I knew very well what was coming.

Fannie, do you know what we are eating?

Poor Fannie, she thought in an instant. Her knife and fork fell slowly out of her hands; the large black eyes filled with tears, and with a sob she ran out of the room.

We were so sorry for her, and for Ella, too; only it was so funny that Ella had eaten them, and called them good, she could not help laughing herself, though she was crying, too. She kept still till father had gone out.

It was a shame to make me eat them.—It was mean to make a pie of my doves. I suppose we shall have a pie made out of my kitten next.

Poor little Fannie cried all afternoon' till at last Mary told her she might look over her box of pretty things, and have whatever she wanted if she wouldn't cry any more. She chose a little needle book which Mary gave her, calling it a 'peace offering. In the evening I heard them yelling it all over.

It is too bad to kill our little pets, said Fannie.

I tell you what, Ella, let us have father arrested for murder.

No we can't do that, said Ella, for you know he didn't kill them.

Well, said Fannie, I tell you what we can do. We can have him arrested for false imprisonment, for he shut them up for Mrs. Clark to kill.

Don't Do It.

Don't get your teeth pulled when a traveling dentist comes to town; simply because you can have the work done cheap. It discourages home enterprise.

Don't strain your eyes in looking for an honest politician. You will appreciate your eye sight when you grow old.

Don't tell your child that he is the brightest boy in school. It is unjust to your neighbor's children.

Don't drive a fast horse at the expense of your creditors. They might make unkind remarks.

Don't sell strong butter to a little boy. His parents might lose confidence in his sagacity.

Don't speak disrespectfully of all your neighbors. It is wrong for one man to blast the reputation of an entire community.

Don't attempt to 'paddle your own canoe' unless you are a good swimmer. The word is slow to render assistance to a man in deep water.

Don't crowd a lady off the side walk.—His big brother might present the result.

Don't waste your breath in trying to convice the world that you are honest because you denounce other men as thieves. A great many men are too stupid to see the point.

Don't ask the Lord to forgive your enemies so long as you hate them yourself. It isn't manly to be outdone in generosity.

Don't go home at midnight, go to bed with your boots on, and tell your wife next morning that you was duly sober.—It's cruel to deceive a woman so.

Don't borrow trouble and parcel it out to your neighbors. 'Tis wrong to be so lavish of borrowed capital.

Once on a time, at the funeral of a wife the undertaker arranged for the husband and mother-in-law to ride in the same carriage.

Must I, said the broken hearted man, must I ride with that awful woman?

I think you will have to, answered the undertaker. It will disturb every carriage of the profession to make a change, and you must ride here.

Well, if I must, said the stricken man; but to ride with her detroys all my pleasure on this occasion.

Montana grasshoppers are more ravenous than usual this season. They eat wagons, have been known to tickle a mule in the ribs until he kicked, and devour his shoes while his feet were high in the air.

A witness, describing certain events, said: The person that I saw at the top of the stairs was a man with one eye named Jacob Wilkons. What was the full name of the other eye? spitefully asked the opposing counsel. The witness was disgusted with levity of the audience.

Success in life is very apt to make us forget the time when we weren't much.—It is just so with a frog on a jump; he can't remember when he was a tadpole, but other folks can.

An Irish advertisement:

If the gentleman who keeps a shoe store with a red head, will return the umbrella of a young lady with the ivory handle, he will hear something to her best advantage.

Red Tape.

One of the celebrities of the Moscow ballet lately called upon a local official with a request that he would give her the usual formal permission to take a month's tour in the provinces for the benefit of her health, retaining her salary during the time of furlough. The man in office received her very politely, and asked for her written petition.

I have no written petition answered the artist; I had no idea that such a thing was neccessary.

Not necessary? Nothing can be done without it.

What am I to do, then?

Here are pens, ink and paper; be so good as to sit down and write while I dictate.

The lady obeyed; the petition was written, and signed.

And now, said the representative of justice, you have only to deliver it, madan.

To whom?

To whom? said the official, with a slight smile at her simplicity. To me, of course.

And taking the petition which he had himself dictated, he produced his spectacles; wiped them carefully, adjusted them upon his nose, read over the whole document as though it were perfectly new to him, docketed and filled it in due form, and then, turning to the impatient dansense, said, with the utmost gravity:

Madame, I have read your petition, and regret extremely that I can not grant it!

Lying and Swearing.

Old Parson S., of Connecticut, was a particular kind of a person. One day he had a man plowing in his field, and he went out to see how the work was going on. The ground was very stony and every time the plow struck a stone the man took occasion to swear a little.

'Look here, crid Parson S., 'you must'nt swear that way in my field.

'Well, I reckon you'd swear too,' said the man, 'if you had to plow such a stony field as this'

'Not a bit of it,' said Mr. S. Just let me show you.'

So the parson took hold of the plow but he very soon had great trouble with the stones. As stone after stone caught the plowshare. Mr. S. ejaculated:

"Well, I never saw the like!"

And this he repeated every time a stone stopped his onward way. When he had plowed around once, he stopped and said to the man,

'There now! You see I can plow without swearing.'

'But I guess it's pretty near as bad to lie,' said the man, 'and you told dozens o' lies. Every time the plow struck a stone, you said, 'I never saw the like, when the same thing had happened the minute before.

Col. Fisk's Partner.

A correspondent of the Post tells a pleasant story:

Col. Fisk had often noticed in Twenty-third street a little crippled newsboy, and one day he spoke to him in his bluff offhand manner:

Well, my boy, how's business?

Not very good, sir, was the boy's reply.

What's the matter?

Why, you see I'm lame and I can't run, and the other boys get ahead of me, and I can't sell my papers very well.

Not a very good lookout for you, is it? I say, my boy, how would like to go into business with me.

The boy looked perplexed and eyed the Col. curiously

I think we might strike up a bargain.—You come to the Opera House at 11 this morning. I've got a plan for you; now be on time.

At 11 o'clock the boy was there, quite curious to know what the Colonel wanted.

Hulloa, boy, you're a good one. Now see here; do you know a good place for a paper-stand?

Yes, sir; tip-top.

Where is it?

Down here at the corner.

How much will a stand cost?

Lots of money; much as fifty or a hundred dollars.

You don't say so; why that's a fortune. Do you think there's money to be made there?

Yes, I do.

Well, I'll get a carpenter to make the stand and I'll stock it; then you shall take care of it, and we'll be partners; you and I will go into the paper business, and try it.

Col. Fisk then arranged with the boy what part of the profits he should receive, told him when the stand should be ready, and sent him on his way rejoicing.

The plan was very successful. Trade was good, and every week the boy carried his share of the money to his partner. Seeing the boy's determination, Col. Fisk quietly put the money aside, and one day gave it all to him, releasing him from his contract to pay any part of the money to himself.

When Fisk died there was nowhere a sincerer mourner than this little newsboy and the little stand on the corner was heavily draped on the day of Mr. Fisk' burial.

If seven days will make one week how many days will make one strong?

When is money damp? When it is dew early in the morning and midst at night.

BESSY HAY.

The fragrant wild roses lifted their pink chalices up towards the sunshine and dew of the July heavens; the robins sang uproarious glees in the branches of the old apple orchard; and neither rose nor robin was fairer or sweeter voiced than Bessy Hay, as she stood among the bushes culling the red ripe fruit under the shade of a huge old peartree, where the stone wall of the garden was draped with the emerald festoons as a wild grape vine, while Paul Estcott stood leaning against the mossy trunk of the pear tree, twisting a stem of blue bells in his hand.

"I know I'm poor Bessy," he said resuming a conversation which had apparently lapsed into silence for a moment or so; "but I suppose that poor people have a right to live and be happy as well as rich ones."

"I suppose so to, Paul,"

"And I am sure that I am willing to work, if only I could find some thing to do."

Bessy glanced deprecatingly at him.

"Mr. Elton wants some one to take the farm, and work it—'

"That is mere drudgery, and besides, the pay would not enable me to marry and support a wife comfortably."

"We could wait, Paul,"

"You are very willing," said the young man bitterly. "I don't believe you care for me, Bessy as much as I do for you."

"Oh, Paul!"

And a pained look came over the fair young face.

"Well, then, what do you, think of becoming tutor to Mr. Sinclairs little boys."

"Thank you, I don't fancy the idea of being toad-eater to a pompous arristocrat like Henry Sinclair."

"But Paul, we cannot alwrys do and be as we like in this world," pleaded Bessy, a troubled look shining in her tender garnet-brown eyes.

"Easy philosophy for you,"

And the young man flung down his stem of blue bells

"I suppose you would like to have me break stone upon the roads. I thought at least that you could sympathize with a gentleman's feelings.

"So I do Paul, but I believe in the Scripture doctrine of a man's doing with all his might whatever his hands finds to do."

"I see how it is,' said Paul Estcott, haughtily, "you are weary of our engagement; you want to break the worldly fetters that bind you Very well, so let it be. You are free

And he strode over the high grass, muttering to himself something about having suspected how it would turn out ever since Norton Van Brugh had come down from London to sketch the scenery and turn the heads of all the girls'

Bessy Hay made a step or two to over take him, but she checked herself in an instant, with a scarlet stain on her cheek and a gathering mist in her eyes.

"He ought to know better," she thought "and he does. No I will not follow him. He will come back to me when the momentary pique has worn itself away."

In the meantime, Paul vaulting over the low stone wall a few Paces below, had nearly stumbled over the prostrate form of a man lying among the red clover blossoms, in the island of shade cast by an unbrageous tree, and reading.

"Mr. Van Burgh,"

The young artist glanced up with a sort of lazy scorn showing under his long dark eye lashes. Paul bit his lips.

"Engaged in the noble occupation of evesdropping, eh?"

"Come now Estcott dont be crusty; I didn't mean to overhear your conversation, but what was a fellow to do? this is the jolliest place on the whole farm, and I was not to blame because Miss Hay came out looking like Hebe's self, to gather red currens and you followed like her shadow. Come, let's go down to the trout stream, and talk over matters and things in general.—Are you realy in earnest about wanting something to do?"

"Of course I do."

"Then suppose you glance over this letter that I received this morning from my uncle. I've no idea of expatriating myself among the pig-tailed celestials for all the fortunes that ever were made. But for an ambitious man—read this letter, that's all.

Paul Estcott obeyed almost dazzled for a moment by the brilient prospect it seemed to open to him.

'You realy give me the privilege of accepting or refusing this situation? he exclaimed.

"I realy do and consider that I don't want it mytelf it is no great stretch of generosity on my part. Only, you see that you have to decide at once, and be in the city to report yourself, at my uncle's counting-house within twenty-four hours.'

Paul sprang up flushed and eager 'I'll do it. I'll show Bessy Hay that I'm no do-nothing after all, when a motive realy worth my while presents itself. But," glancing at his old fashioned silver watch, which contrasted so remarkedly with Mr. Nan Burgh's elegant fulljeweled chronometer.—"I have no time to loose."

"Not a seccond."

"But my trunk?"

"You can get what you need in town; my uncle supplies the out-fit

"But Bessy—"

"Write to her to-night; my uncle will forward the letter under cover to me, and I will see that she gets it.'

Paul Estcott wrung his companions hand.

"You are very kind," he said huskily. I had almost grown to regard you with distrust.'

Van Burgh laughed, showing his dainty pearl white teeth under a brown mustache.

"Never judge by appearence," he said, "take my word for it, Miss Hay will excuse all lack of ceremony when she knows all."

Mr. Van Burgh accompanied Paul to the railway station, and saw him off with a smilingly uttered profusion of good wishes.

'The best friend a fellow ever had.' thought Paul as the train moved off

But he did not the sardonic grin into which the curves of the farewell smile altered, when the little country station was left once more to silence and lonliness.

"Now," said Norton Van Burgh, "I have the field all to my self. Strange how facinated I have allowed myself to become, with a mere country girl but there certainly is something winning in her type of beauty."

Bessy Hay never answered Paul's Estcotts farewell letter; nor did the latter ever suspect that it was because Mr. Van Burgh had never delivered it.

Paul firing up under the fevered impulse of his old enemy, jealousy took place in silence. Nor did a long epistle from his aunt Jemima, which contained more news—possible, probably, and impossible—that any government bulletin, serve to cool the flames.

"Folks say," wrote the epistolary spinster 'that Eliza Hay is going to marry the widower Sinclair, because he's rich. There was a deal of talk about her and that young Van Burgh but he went away all of a sudden folks thought it likely with a flea in his ear. Eliza knows pretty well which side her bread's buttered on. and Sinclair can't live long with that cough of his."

It is no wonder that when pretty Bessy Hay made an excuse to come to Aunt Jemima's, and ask wistfully and with a certain quiver in her voice, if Paul's letter contained no message for her, the elderly gossip-monger answered:

"Dear me no! You didn't expect to here, did you?"

Bessy went home very little heart cold as lead.

She had refused Norton Van Burgh; she said 'No.' to Mr. Sinclair in spite of Aunt Jemima's knowing prognostication.; and people began to wonder if pretty Bessy Hay was going to be an old maid after all.

'Why dont he write to me, or send me at least one word to show that he has not utterly forgotten me?' thought Bessy.

'Why dosen't she answer my letter? thought Paul.

So the world wagged on until Mr. Estcott came home from the far-off flowery land—not indeed with the fortune he had dreamed in such sanguine fashion—but with a sufficient competence to live well, and comfortably in a place as modest as his native village.

It was a stormy November evening, with the threatening of snow in the chill air, and a low wind stiring the last withered leaves upon the boughs, when he alighted at the station looking almost into the eyes of Bessy Hay, who had come to the post office to ask once again for the letter that never came.

How seldom are our vissions realized!

Bessy had dreamed a thousand times of meeting Paul Estcott but never in such a way as this.

"Paul," she quavered.

"Ah?" said Paul doffing his stylish fur traveling cap. "I hope you are, well!"

For he did not like to call her Mrs. Sinclair, as yet.

The res stains of sunset had almost faded out of the sky when he overtook her, about a hundred yards from the station.

His heart smote him as he saw the look of meek endurence in her face.

"Are you alone Besy?"

"Yes, Paul."

"I suppose," he said with an effort, 'that I must call you by some new name now?"

'Call me Bessy Hay,' she answered quietly.

"You are not married?"

"No, Paul.'

He drew a long breath that was almost like a sob.

'Aunt Jemima said—but Bessy why did you not answer my letter?"

"Why did you not write to me Paul?"

Before they had reached the old hay farm, where the curren bushes had long since lost their leaves, and the garden wall was already beinging to be whitened with the falling snow-flakes, the mists of doubt and misunderstanding were all cleared up, and Bessy Hay had promised to forgive and forget all her lovers seeming neglect.

"Van Burgh was a scoundrel." uttered Paul, "but, without his aid, I could scarcely have been in a position to marry you. It was a long time to wait. But it's all right after all.'

"It's like a story Paul." said Bessy, trials and tribultions, but are happy at the last? Oh, Paul I never thought I should live a story."

The Liberal Democratic majority in the North Carolina Legislature will be 24 on joint ballot.

The Grant organs have already begun to discuss the probabilities of Mr. Greeley's Cabinet.

Grant and His System.

In the approaching Presidential election the people of the United States are called upon to decide between two competing candidates, but between two different and irreconcilable systems of administratoring the government.—Those who vote for General Grant will thereby approve his system and make themselves responsible for its continuence, while those who vote for Horace Greeley will thereby declare their opposition to this system, and their preferences of methods of administration, totally opposite, to that of Grant.

To vote for Grant is to vote in favor of the following characteristic features of his system.

1 Appointments to office in return for presents.

2 Appointments to office of relation of the president or of some members of his family, without regard to their qualifications or merits.

3 The sale of appointments to office as in case of William D. Ferband, appointed Counsel at Callon, by President Grant for $2,500, paid to Judge Lewis Dent, and 1,000 paid to F. T. Dent the president's brother-in-law.

4 The surrender of the Soscol Branch military reservation of the Bank of California for 5,282 the value of the property being $10,000,000 and its posession by the Government being essential to the safety of Mare Island Navy Yard.

5 The payment of forged bounty claims out of the Treasury of the U. S.; such payment have been made knowingly and deliberately by Paymaster General Brice, and General Grant having supported Brice in the payment of such forged claims, and restored him to office after President Johnson had dismissed him for his connection with these forgeries.

6 The payment to fraudulent army contractors of large sums of money half a million or thereabouts withheld from them by Secretary Edwin M. Stanton by reason of their frauds, detected and proved at Elexandria Virginia.

7 A deficancy of 1.500 in the stamp account of the Internal Revenue Bureau the money having been recieved, for stamps furnished, but never paid over or accounted for to the Treasury.

8 The Chorpenning fraud by which Postmaster General Creswell, with the direct support and cooperation of General Grant, arranged to pay $244,000 out of the Treasury, when the Government owed Chorpenning nothing. Creswell's law partner who being the attorney of Chorpenning in the case.

9 The various frauds of George M. Robeson, Secretary of the Navy, of which $313,719 58 have been proved upon him, these frauds being merely indicators of others not yet discovered,

10 The San Domingo job with the usurpations of the war power [illegible] Congress, its inexcusable attact upon the Republic of Hayti and its lawless appropriation of the public money in payment for the unauthorized lease of the Bay of Samana.

11 The frauds in the New York Custom House and the general under extortation practiced by Leet, Grant's Adjutant levying vast sums of money upon the commerce of New York.

12 The outrages of Brother-in-law Casey of New Orleans in breaking up a Republican Convention with armed force, and in attempting to break up the State Legislature of Louisina, by the clandestine use of the power of the Federal Government, all for the purpose of promoting the re-election of Grant.

13 The oppression and robbery of the Southern States by the carpet-bag governments, adding $250,000,000 to their debt, and by the laws for the oppression of the habeas corpus and for military interference at elections.

14 Prostituting the influence and power of the United States to sustain Spanish despotism in Cuba, and to preserve slavery and the slave there.

15 Humiliating the United States before the powers of Europe, as in sacrificing Amerrican citizens in Cuba, to Spanish malignity and violence, in setling the Alabama question in the interest of England and in attempting to compel Rusia to pay the swindling Perkins claim.

Such are some of the more conspicuous and general features of the system be which Mr. Grant identifies himself. To vote for him is to vote for these things and to express a desire for their cotinuence and perpetuation.

The New York 'Sun's' Jobb reports the following conversation between himself and a noble Briton:

Says I 'Where are you going?'

To hide a hoe.

What are you going [illegible] for sir?

I going to hide a hoe, [illegible].

Spell it.

Idaho.

Oh! says I, Idaho.

Yes, Hide a hoe.

During the late civil war some children were talking of their fathers and brothers who had been captured as prisoners of war. Many tales of forts and camps were told, the speakers evidently priding themselves very much on the sufferings of their relatives, when a little fellow who had been silent now spoke up:

That's nuthin, said he, I've got an uncle in prison, too, and he ain't been to war, nuther.

A tender-hearted [illegible] driver says he hates to run over a [illegible] because it hurts the springs.

CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

The Democratic Central Committee will meet at Auburn, on SATURDAY, SEPT. 28th, 1872.

Every member is requested to be present.

By order of the Chairman.

The Reed House the largest hotel in Erie Pa., and a block of stores were burned last Wednesday night involving a loss of $500,000.

—Memphis Tennessee, was visited by a destructive conflagration last Sunday, which destroyed $260,000, worth of property in the business center of the city.

Shurz says 1,402 warrants had been issued under the Ku-Klux Law in North Carolina alone, and but two had been put into execution, while the rest were kept pending over the heads of victims, with a threat to have them carried out if they did not vote for Grant.

This is what the Rev. Mr. Dinison of Washington city, says of General Grants habits:

"I am solemnly bound in honor to say, from the facts of which I have possession that no consistent temperance man can support him."

Mr. Hendricks received an ovation at New Albany, last week, that eclipses anything ever before seen in the State Just think of 2,500 men in uniform on foot, and 1,000 men in uniform on horseback, and the whole city illuminated with calcium lights and enlivened by fire-works! It must have been magnificent.

There is no lack of Presidential candidates this year, and the platforms are sufficiently diversified to suit the most fastidious. Heading the list we have Greeley and Brown, for the people; then follows Grant and Wilson, on the corruption line; O'Connor and Adams, straight Democratic; Black and Russell, Temperance; Woodhull and Douglass, Woman's Rights; Adams and Barlow, Anti-Secret Society; Davis and Parker, Labor Reform; Georgefrancistrain, on his own hook. You pays your money, you takes your choice.

The Maine Election.

The latest returns from Maine shows a gain in favor of the Democrats and Liberals of about 3000. So it goes.—We gain 7,000 in North Carolina, carry West virginia, gain 2,000 in Vermont, and 3,000 in Maine, and completely rout Grantism in Montana.—Already the power of the Grantites trembles. Liberalism advances. Indiana Pennsylvania, and Nebraska are sure to give us large majorities in October, and even Ohio is conceded to us by the frightened Rads.

The Liberals of Pennsylvania are organizing Vigilance Committees, to prevent illegal voting at the polls in that State in October. This has been done since the discovery of an organized plan on the part of the Cameron ring to carry the State upon illegal votes. The infamous Morton is doing the same thing in this State. Let the Democrats and Liberal Republicans of Indiana initiate the course of their brother in Pennsylvania, and organize their Committees also. We want only a fair election, and are determined to have it.

The Slow Poison at Work.

"In every Department in the Government the slow poison of corruption seems to have pervaded the whole civil and political administration of the country, from head to foot."

Such was the earnest language of Stanley Mathews on accepting the temporary Presidency of the Cincinnatti Convention. And he did no more than give public utterance to the conviction of every member of that body. Indeed, it was because of the general prevailence of that conviction throughout the country, that the Cincinnati Convention came into being, and grew to the proportion it now ocupies in the minds of the people.

Tax Payers, Read!

Since the Democracy have come into power in this State there have been saved in one year, to the tax payer. This was done by economy, and retrenchment. The Radicals spent that much more than they should have done as demonstrated by our State officers.

One Hundred and Fourteen Thousand Dollars!

The Terre Haute Journal, heretofore against Greeley has come out since the Louisville Convention and says, "We shall made no further warfare on the Greeley ticket. If he can be elected, and the good of the country is to be subserved thereby, we shall hail the event as earnestly as any other person who desires good government and the safety and glory of the country, and who has no selfish or office-seeking in the result.

Democrats who have read our paper will readily understand our meaning. We are left adrift by the failure to have a Democratic Presidential ticket. None of us can or will support Grant. Whether or not to vote for Greeley every man must determine for himself, but our judment should be takeg carefully and considerately in view of surrounding circumstances."

Reducing Expenditures.

The Grant papers and orators insist that the present is a reform and economising administration. It is claimed by them that General Grant is not only reducing taxation, but is likewise diminishing the ordinary expenditures.—Here is a table taken from official resources by ex-Congressman Wells which shows that instead of the ordinary expenses diminishing, they have increased from year to year ever since 1866.

1866	$43,900,000
1867	55,652,000
1868	57,109,000
1869	63,516,000
1870	56,644,000
1871	67,907,000

The average annual increase are about nine per cent., and the figures show that this rate of increase is fully maintained under Mr. Grant. Just the ordinary expenses of 1871, are about equal to the average annual total expenditures under the administration of Mr. Buchanan. If there is any economy or retrenchment under the Grant Administration, it is exceeding difficult to tell where it is.

Pennsylvania Politics.

The position of Governor Curtin is no longer in doubt. He declined a Grant Republican nomination for Congress, and has accepted the nomination from the Liberal Republicans as delegate at large to the Constitutional Convention. This settle the question as to Pennsylvania, as it is conceded that Governor Curtin's adhesion to the Liberal movement will add ten thousand votes to the Liberal ticket. A special dispatch from Washington says that it was stated in Grant's presence at the Executive Mansion that five millions had been raised as a corruption fund to buy up Pennsylvania, and thereupon his Excellency, Ulysses the First, expressed great confidence that the ring ticket would be elected. It is stated by those well informed in Pennsylvania politics that Mr. Buckalew will come into Philadelphia with thirty thousand majority, and nothing but the most extraordinary frauds can defeat him. All hail the Keystone State!

Maine all Right.

Here is what the pullett of the Press cackled over last week,

Maine.

The Cincinnati Enquirer thus reviews the result in Maine.

We claim the result of the election in Maine as indicating, beyond the possibility of a doubt, the choice of Greeley and Brown as President and Vice President, of the United States. In September 1868, just before the last Presidential election, when, as now a full vote was polled—and no full vote as been given since—when the struggle was collored by the Presidential preference of the voters, the majority for the Grant candidate for Governor in Maine was 20,403. It is now admitted that the majority for Governor Perham will not be over 15 000, and may be less. but we will take the higher number as the figure.—Thus it stands.

Grant's majority, in September, 1868	20,400
Grant's majority in September, 1872	15,000
Grant's loss	5,400

The total vote of Maine is 125,000 The only supposed value of a State election in a Presidentirl contest is the thermometer which it exhibits of the pulse of the people, Let us suppose that the Grant men do as well in all the States as they have just done in Maine, what would be the result? How would Ohio go? At the October election in 1868, the following was the vote for Secretary of State.

Grant candidate	287,065
Seymour candidate	249,682
Grants majority	17,373

The full vote in Ohio, it will be preceived, was 517,000. The Grant men on the Maine vote just cast, are loosing 5,400, on every 125,000 On the vote of Ohio they would therefore lose 22,000 votes. This would give us the State by a majority of, between 4,000. and 5,000. In October 1868 the Grant majority in Indiana for Governor was 960, on 340,000 votes. The Grant loss in Maine sustained in Indiana would be over 15,000. In Pennsylvania the Grant majority was 9,667, on a poll of 650,000. If the Maine election is a test, if we make corresponding gains in the old keystone State, our majority would be over 20,000 for Buckalew. What chattering idiots those must be, who find any consolation for Grant in the Maine election. If they can't do better elswhere than they have in Maine, they are "gone up." That is the only lesson which is taught by it.

How the Radicals Run the Louisville Convention.

The following card was published in the Louisville Ledger of September 4th. It will show who run the convention and what a contemptable farce it was:

"Card from Fisk Conrad. To the True Democracy of the United States. Representing the Seventeenth District of Pensylvania in the Convention assembled in the city under the call of Blanton Duncan, I made several attempts to-day in the Conventson to be heard. This was denied me, and in the most discourteous manner, by the President who himself occupied at least two hours in a foolish gasconade about Dicken's Dolly Varden. My object was to expose the treachery of Cameron Hatrauft thieves of my own State. The Grant men excepting myself, not one who ever intended to vote for the nominee of this Convention. Their transportation to the Convention was obtained and paid for by the Grant people. My own those of five others, each representing a District in Pennsylvania, I procured in the office of the Grant State Central Committee of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, corner of Eighth and Walnut streets, over a well known tailoring establishment.—For this transportation I had an order from Sypes, Chairman of the Bourbon State Central Committee of Pensylvania. That order was obeyed by the State Treasurer of Pennsylvania, Bob Mackey, who is well known as one of the Cameron subjects. The band of music which accompanied us was furnished and paid for by the same Grant people, and our little banner which was carried by George Mountjoy is the same that designated the seats in the Radical Convention of the 5th of June of the Pennsylvania delegation that nominated Grant, and presided over by Thomas Settle the Rebel of North Carolina. This is the sum and substance of which I intended to say, had the President allowed me to proceed, and now I assure all my Democratic friends who may chance to see this communication, that what I have stated here are facts all of which I am prepared to prove.

W. Fisk Conrad.

Is there a man who ever called himself a Democrat, who will disgrace himself by acknowledging any sympathy with such a contemptable movement?

—An excursion train returning from the Ohio State Fair at Mansfield collided with a regular passenger train on the Erie Division of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad near Indipendence, Ohio, last Thursday evening killing seven or eight passengers, and seriously injuring 28 others.

Massachusetts.

Worcester, September, 11—Liberal Republican State Conention met here to-day, and was called to order by B. F. Bird. General N. P. Banks was chosen Permanent Chairman. Six hundred delegates were in attendence. A Committee was appointed to confer with the Committee from the Democrats and a recess was taken.

The Democratic State convention was called to order by Hon. R. S. Spinney. Eleven hundred and sixty-six delegates were present. Edward Avery was chosen Permanent Chairman, and then a recess was taken.

The Democratic Convention reassembled at 2 o'clock, It was agreed upon. For Governor, Charles Sumner; for Lieutenant Governor, George M. Stearns; Secretary of State George H. Munroe; Treasurer Levi Haywood; Auditor, P. A. Collins; Attorney General, Waldo, Coburn; Electors at Large, Chester Chapman, and F. W. Bird, Sumner and Munroe, are Liberals, the others Democrats The Convention adopted only two resolutions The first endorses the platform and candidates adopted at Cincinnati and accepted at Baltimore. The second endorses the candidates put in nomination here to-day, and recomends them to voters.

—Mishawaka has been visited by a fire calamity, which in comparison with the size of the place surpasses the Chicago disaster. Four buildings are all that remain of the business portion of the place, These were saved by the help of the steam fire engines, from South Bend and Elkhart. Over sixty buildings were burned, causing a loss of nearly $200,000 covered by only $54,000 Insurence. The citizens are reported as hopeful and gritty, and propose to rebuild immediately. The South Bend Tribune has the following.

During the fire scenes of the wildest disorder ensued. Household goods, and the contents of stores, and buildings were strewn along the streets, in inexhaustible confusion. Women and children were running hither and thither, mothers searching for their little ones, and children hunting for parents. Teams loaded with goods dashed rapidly along the glaring streets; men struggling under heavy loads tottered along the sidewalks to find places of safety for them. Later in the evening, when the contents of the saloons had been rolled into the streets, the roughs became wild with liquor, and while in that condition some of them were guilty of the grosest outrages, paying no respect to persons or things. Of course the thieves were busy, and they had plenty of opportunities which they were quick to take the advantage of, and goods were taken away by armsfull and cartloads. It is to be hoped that some of them have been recognized, and will be brought to justice.

Tammany Supports Greeley!

The above ejaculation was the substance of Curry's eloquent (?) peroration. "Tammany supports Greeley!" On this point alone, the gentleman seemed willing to rest the controversy. What are the facts? Mr. Curry would be secretary of State under Tom Browne the Temperance candidete for Governor, knew very well that most of his hearers had forgotten that the downfall of the Tammany ring was followed by a complete revolution in the Tammany society. He was well aware that "Tammany" to those who heard him would suggested Tweed Connolly, Sweeney, Garvin and A. Oakey Hall, why didn't the would-be-Secretary tell his hearers that the "Tammany" that supports Greeley, is the Tammany that partially redeemed the great chief-ridden city, and not the Tammany of Connolly, and Co. Here are the two Tammanys:—

1871	1872.
Grand Sachem.	Grand Sachem
Wm. M. Tweed.	Augustus Schell.
Sachems	Sachems.
R. B Connolly,	C. O'Conno,
P. B. Sweeney,	S. J. Tilden,
L. B. Garvin,	A. S. Hewitt,
Jos. Dowling,	H. Seymour,
A. Oakeo Hall,	S. E. Church
Mat. T. Brennen,	John Kelly,
Isaac Bell,	C. Ottendorfer,
J. J. Bradley,	A. Belmont,
C. C. Cornell,	E. B. Andrus,
N. Jarvis Jr.	J. W. Chanler,
E. B. Hart,	E. L. Donnelly,

J. B. Nicholson.

Now good men every where, hold your noses while the Tammany thieves pass to the support of Greeley. Who fancies that Boss Tweed controls more than one vote in New York city, and who believes that he'el cast that one for Greeley. Yes, Tammany will throw part of its influence for Greeley. but that means the Tammany that is and not the Tammany that was.

Greeley and Brown CLUB AT CORUNNA, INDIANA

The following resolutions were adopted on the organization of Greeley and Brown Club at Corunna.

Resolved, 1st. That this organization be known by the name of Greeley and Brown club and shall be governed by a constitution and by laws containing the general rules of all similar organized bodies.

2nd That as Democrats and Liberals we are united in principles, and regard the present administration as corrupt and dangerous to the prosperity of free government.

3d. That we as a body indorse freely the platform of Principals as set forth in The People's Convention, held at Cincinati and afterwards adopted at National Democratic Convention, held at Baltimore, wherein we recognize the true principles of Democracy as taught by Washington, Jefferson and Jackson.

4th. That we hereby pledge ourselves as true and honest citizens to labor for the achievement of all principles herein set forth and that with Horace Greeley and Benjamin Gratz Brown as our standard bearers we will make sure the election of the entire National and State ticket as nominated by the Liberals and Democrats. There by securing peace and prosperity throughout our land.

VINEGAR BITTERS

PURELY VEGETABLE FREE FROM ALCOHOL

DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA

VINEGAR BITTERS

Vinegar Bitters are not a vile Fancy Drink, made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced, and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the native roots and herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the Great Blood Purifier and a Life-giving Principle, a Perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition, enriching it, refreshing and invigorating both mind and body. They are easy of administration, prompt in their action, certain in their results, safe and reliable in all forms of disease.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. In these complaints it has no equal, and one bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

Grateful Thousands proclaim Vinegar Bitters the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist: There is scarcely an individual on the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics, will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of Walker's Vinegar Bitters twice a week.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to Dr. J. Walker's Vinegar Bitters, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc., etc. In these as in all other constitutional Diseases, Walker's Vinegar Bitters have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters act on all these cases in a similar manner. By purifying the Blood they remove the cause, and by resolving away the effects of the inflammation (the tubercular deposits) the affected parts receive health, and a permanent cure is effected.

The properties of Dr. Walker's Vinegar Bitters are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

The Aperient and mild Laxative properties of Dr. Walker's Vinegar Bitters are the best safe-guard in cases of eruptions and malignant fevers, their balsamic, healing, and soothing properties protect the humors of the fauces. Their Sedative properties allay pain in the nervous system, stomach, and bowels, either from inflammation, wind, colic, cramps, etc.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with Vinegar Bitters. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Directions.—Take of the Bitters on going to bed at night from a half to one and one-half wine-glassfull. Eat good nourishing food, such as beef-steak, mutton chop, venison, roast beef, and vegetables, and take out-door exercise. They are composed of purely vegetable ingredients, and contain no spirit.

The first annual fair of the North Eastern Indiana Agricultural Society will be held at Waterloo on October 15th, 16th, 17th and 18th.

The whisky story of the Press about Newville, is a little like the one about "Democratic authority" of the same sheet—they can't prove either of them to be true.

We learn from two Grant men that Hon R. V. Long made a splendid speech at Sedan, and hence the communication in the Press last week, by the erudite office seeker of Fairfield.

Jno. L. Davis, has now in his employ an experienced workman, one who understands the business, and those wanting a good job done in tin roofing, spouting, etc., should give him a call.

We are now in receipt of the Cincinnati Daily Enquirer, the best paper now published in the west. The weekly is just what many of our farmer friends would enjoy, and a club should be formed at once. The daily can be obtained for fifty cents per month during the campaign.

There was only one Grant Rooster that crowed because of the election in Maine, and that is owned by the big blonde of the Waterloo Press. Its like the darky's coon, it gets a fool notion now and then and seems to have a special stroke on this occasion.

F. E. DAVENPORT, Scribe

FAIRFIELD O. K.

Hon. Allen Zollars, of Fort Wayne spoke to quite a large audience at Fairfield Center, last week, and made some good points aga'nst the present administration in its rapacity to steal the peoples money. Fairfield is awake and we look for good work at the October election.—Last Saturday a caucus was held for the selection of a township ticket The following gentlemen were nominated.

For Trustee—George W. Downs, Constable—Wm. A. Goodrich, Westley Seder, Assessor—David Bair.

To produce that permanent elasticity of the nerve structure, so essential to the healthy action of the nervous system, tone and stimulate it with Smolander's glandular diseases, mental and physical debility, diabetes, gravel, female weakness and uterine maladies. It has the emphatic endorsement of family physicians.

Col. I. B. McDonald, of Columbia City, met with quite a serious accident while engaged in measuring lumber last week. A pile of joice fell upon him crushing his foot and otherwise injuring him. He no doubt felt that there was another vote saved, and thought of Greeley.

Our County Finances.

When the Democracy came in power in this county there was a debt of some Twenty Thousand Dollars. What is the condition of things to-day? The county does not owe a dollar and county orders are now at par. So much for an honest administration.

The Press approves of Col. DeLong or any other man disturbing Greeley meetings and yelling for Grant. The members of its party do not, as a general thing, but as the Press does not represent the sentiment of its party in this county, Why of course, it makes no difference what it does say. Bloviate, neighbor, upon anything, you'll be excused, on account of lack of brains if for nothing more.

Hon. J. B. Hoover, you have heard of him, no doubt. Well, J. B. has at last found an office. The Grantites finding that they could now get a vote had the judge appoint J. B. as bailiff, and J. B. is now all right. The Democrats have made a legal tender of him several times to the Rads, and they now have mustered up courage to take this elephant off our hands. Farewell, J. B. and may you be happy.

The speaker announced for Corunna, last Friday evening, did not appear, for some reason unknown to us and our local speakers had to fill his place as the crowd would not be disappointed in a speech.—Mr. Britton introduced S. S. Shutt, Esq., who though not anticipating any such a result acquitted himself very favorably, in an impromptu effort followed by D. D. Moody, Esq., who by the way is destined to make one of the best stumpers in the county.

Some of the Courier's subscribers have stopped taking that paper, whereupon the editor flatters himself that he has said something that hurts, or they would not have done so.—Press.

Say one instead of some. We have not found it necessary yet to stop one of our own party on the street, as the big blonde of the Press did, on Sunday, just as the people were going to church, and call him a d—d liar, because he had become disgusted with that sheet, and ordered it stopped. Glass houses, neighbor.

Gus. Helmey, a former citizen of this place, but now at Fort Wayne, quietly came into our county the other day, and quietly stole away again, but not, however, until he had captured one of our most beautiful young ladies, Miss Lehman Gust told us he was coming up here to enter into the campaign, and we infer from the time that it was a short one,—that he stormed the citadel and onwardly marched, over the breast works, when the enemy surrendered. Well, Gust is a good fellow and deserves the excellent wife he has secured.

T'was early dawn, Aurora in her rosy chariot, had just started upon her daily tour of the heavens, when in a certain locality of our sleeping city the pleading voice of a woman might have been heard, in tones so pitiful and tender as to melt obdurate heart. Before her stood, that fiend in human shape, her husband, his fierce eyes blazing in wrath, his shaggy brows knit, his hands clenched, and in a voice of thunder yelled Harriet! woman, what wouldst thou have? In a voice subdued and melancholy as the echoes of the gentle lute she replied, John. my love, to render my life blissful and happy you must get me a pair of those handsome gaitors at Here's shoe store, for they are the latest style and have just been received, together with a large lot of boots and shoes of all descriptions.

Senator Schurz!

—AT—

FORT WAYNE!

Saturday, Sept. 21.

Hon Carl Schurz, the most eloquent German orator in the country, will speak at Fort Wayne. Every German in the county should be there. A special train will accommodate all who may want to go, and we want to see DeKalb county largely represented. Go and hear what an honest Republican says of the corrupt administration of Gen. Grant. He speaks in both German and English.

A correspondent in the west who knows how it is himself writes us the following on HOME.

"When some individual more daring, or more ambitious than his fellow, leaves the peaceful enjoyments of his home to breast the perils of some unknow sea, or wander wearily throughout a distant land, all his thoughts, his hopes, his fears, his, is still concentrated in that little spot so distant and so small, but which to him seems greater than an empire. Every useful invention that meets his eye, every work of arts that strikes his imagination, every wise law, or scientific phenomenon by which men learn new things, is treasured up carefully in his mind, and after years of toilsome wanderings, of long days and nights spent in the painful acquisition of knowledge, the wayfarer turns his step at last to that spot where his heart has ever been, and where once more he rests his weary limbs beneath the shadows of his household gods—shadows that fell across his brow in the springtime of youth, and which now darken again the silvered tresses of his hair; he pours forth upon the land of his birth with an unsparing hand the hard earned fruits of his labor; he enlarges men's minds with narrations of what he has seen he adds to their laws and contributes to their science; improves and directs their attention; and if at length when time has dimmed his powers of instruction, no other reward crowns his useful life, he sinks into the grave, happy in the conviction that he has contributed his mite to the wisdom and glory of that land which contains his Home!

HON. W. H. WIER,

of Laporte, addressed a large audience at the Court House last Tuesday evening, and made an excellent speech, one full of fact and argument and not composed entirely of jokes and declamation as was the case with Saylor. He gave authority for what he said had the figures and saying right with him and read them so there would be no mistake about it. He is a Liberal and doing excellent service in the cause. He explained the condition of the Southern States differently and more hideously than has been presented heretofore He was at Salsbury when the Klu-Klux raid, as reported by the administration, took place there, and he did not know of any excitement in the place upon which to found so base a report. He said the administration manufactured these reports out of nothing and then cried "Rebels" "Klu-Klux," etc. He answered Maj. Saylor in regard to the Southern debt only being sixty million and showed from the records that it was over two hundred millions.

SAILOR SPEAKS HIS PEACE.

H. B. Saylor, the Grant candidate for Congress spoke to a fair audience last Monday evening, at the Court House, for which he was indebted principally to the Grant clubs of the county. Of all the wishy washy, trashy declamations we have yet heard this takes the lead. Not one word of argument, not one single authority given, except a few extracts from the New York Tribune to prejudice voters against Greeley. That is what his speech mainly consisted of, an appeal to prejudice series of stories and jokes that fell without any good effect. There was nothing convincing in it, but the speaker seemed to prefer driving all those who differed with him still further away. To show his fairness in statements he said the increase in the southern debt was sixty million, instead of two hundred. He said Gov. Warmouth was for Greeley, but failed to state that Boss Tweed was for Grant. He spoke of our national currency but forgot to mention that the author of that system is now for Greeley. He spoke in glaring terms of the terrible war Grant had averted by the Geneva Arbitration, but forgot to state that about half of the bill demanded by this Administration was all that was allowed. A few more such speeches will give strength to our ticket and we hope the Major will be retained.

The Five Senses!

—BY—

J. W. Williams, M. D.

—OF—

Ada, Ohio

While it is universally understood and taught that there are five senses, arising of course from as many kinds of nerve action, each having its own distict influence, we undertake to show in this article, that there is, in fact, but one kind of nerve influence or action that produces the phenomena known as the five senses.

Were the tissues all alike as skin muscle &c., these nerves supply, and the nerves themselves of different origin and structure, then, it might be reasonably supposed that their action would be different, and thus produce different results. But this is not the case, they all arise from ganglions essentially alike in structure and properties, and that too throughout the whole cerebro—spinal tract. In a word they are of like action, but supply unlike tissues, hence the difference in their phenomena. To illustrate; the fifth pair of nerves is not only a nerve of common sensation, but also of special sensation, and motion. Its sensatory properties are derived from the casserion glangliors and its moter from the pons valol's. There is no difference whatever in the branch that supplies the tongue—the gustatory—and those that supply the integument of the head and face, yet the former is called a nerve of special sensation, while the latter belongs to that class known as nerves of common sensation or feeling.

Thus by the same nerve we taste and feel. Taste is therefore but a modified term for feeling, for we feel the sensation produced by the action of a foreign body on the tongue thus supplied by a nerve of common feeling, that conveys sensation and pain to the brain. The difference is therefore not in the nerve so much, as in the tissues it supplies, one of these being tongue and the other, the integument.

Again, we have a branch of this same fifth pain—the opthalmic division—performing the office of smell in connection with the olfactory proper; latter being distributed to the superior and middle turbinated bones and upper portion of the septumnasi, while the former—the fifth—supplied the remainder of the nasal passage.

This opthalmic branch of the fifth, that so often becomes extremely painful—neuralgia—performs the same office in this that its fellow of the lingual, does the tongue. They appear not only to perform the function of common sensation but also that of special sensation. They are also like the spinal nerves in having motor filaments in the same sheath with the sensative, at their place of origion. Is it not reasonable to suppose that these phenomena—tasting and smelling—are more the result arising from form, texture, vascularity &c., of the tissue, than from the nerves they supply, and also, that special sensation is merely a modification of common sensation or feeling arising from the causes above stated.

Again, hearing is the sensation conveyed to the brain by the ganglionic nerve, portio Mollis, caused by the wave action of the atmosphere. We express this feeling or sensation as that of noise or sound but it must be remembered it is a sensation only, for there is no such thing in nature as sound.

The peculiarity of the action of this nerve doubtless arises from the form, character, &c., of the tissue it supplies, for it is like the other nerves of its class in retaining sensation after the cause is removed, its limit of perceiving distinct impressions, and of its capacity like nerves of common sensation, by improvement of education, attention and practice.

It is also like the other nerves of general and special sensation in being compound in its action, by having motor, filaments that responds to sensatory action which it receives from the seventh or facial.

A flood of light cannot be pored in upon the sensative retina without the immediate action of the motor oculi in drawing a curtain—the iris—over the pupil to cut off the excess of sensation that gives pain, and obscurity to vision. So also has the sense of taste and smell their motor guards that immediately respond to every sensation to protect them from injury But further with regard to the sense of vision It is nothing else than a sensation or feeling, caused by the impression of a foreign body by means of light that imparts sensation to the apounratic filaments of the optic nerve—the retani—which also arises from a ganglion called guadrigemina. By the retina we feel the sensation of the object, and thus obtain a knowledge of its size, form, &c., so does the blind person through the feeling of touch from common sensation obtain a knowledge of the same object even to color itself.

Thus the five sensations so called are actually the result or production of but one common sensation; that is, the action of all ganglionic nerves are essentially the same in sensation or feeling, as much so as the monganglonic to that of motion, and also, the difference in their phenomena is the result of the different form and tissue structure of the parts supplied by these nerves.

The laws of Nature are simple in character—when rightly understood—and are divested of mystic complications, however great and sublime the phenomena they produce. But human wisdom has to often perverted her character in this respect from being rightly understood, and thus marred to a certain extent their inexpressable grandeur and sublimity.

We see order, beauty, harmony and design displayed in the great and varied phenomena before us, in all organic matter; and yet they are all the result of a simple law that governs life, and growth, and death.

Can it be possible that the organic history of man, animals and plants is the same! Yes. for when we look upon the humble herb in its growth and bloom, the harvest crowned fields of ripening grain and the towering oak whose boughs are want to skim the clouds, or as it lies with prostrate trunk mouldering back to dust, or upon the slimy worm of earth, behemeth of the floods, and all of animal life to that of exalted man, we see they have one common life origin, a simple cell with its vital germ or living speck that growes by the same law of nutrition, completes its course in life, and dies to return again to earth

Why then should nature depart from her law of simplicity, and make five or more varieties of nerves for as many varieties of tissues! We see in this a simple cause produce a variety of modified results which is highly calculated to lead the contemplative mind to the admiration of "Him, who hath in wisdom, made them all."

The only hope we have Is preventing the Democrats from voting for Greeley.

SENATOR MORTON."

The other night, two countrymen went into the telegraph office at Aroostook, Maine, for the purpose of sending a dispatch. The message was taken by the operator, and the pair proceded down stairs. They had just reached the sidewalk, when the gong at the 'Snell House' was sounded for tea. Whereupon one of pair went into the air several feet, exclaiming, 'By Jerusalem, there it goes, Jim!'

The special merits of Smolander's Buchu are that it thoroughly invigorates an enervated system, and that it is a perfect and truthful specific for kidney, bladder and glandular diseases, mental and physical debility, gravel, diabetes, all complaints of the urino-genital organs so frequent in the female sex, whether married or single, and the fact of its being prescribed by family physicians, should be enough to endorse its superiority.

ALWAYS AHEAD.

Some Interesting Facts Concerning the Far-Famed Palace of Fashion.

One of the institutions of Fort Wayne is the far-famed Palace of Fashion, situated in Keystone Block, at the corner of Calhoun and Columbia streets. This establishment has been in full blast for a number of years, and has always advanced with the growth of the city until it is now a thoroughly metropolitan establishment in all of its departments. Mr. Jacob Nirdlinger, the proprietor, is determined that the old popularity of the Palace of Fashion shall be maintained in the future and that the wholesale and retail trade, which has already reached mammoth proportions shall continue to increase apace. The arrangements of this house are such as to warrant the expectation of greater success in the future even than in the past. The fact that a heavy jobbing trade is done, causes them to purchase immense stocks of goods, and as this is the only concern in the city, which wholesales to any considerable extent, it may readily be seen that the Palace of Fashion enjoys an advantage over every other similar establishment of securing a reduction of at least fifty per cent, in cost price. Mr. Nirdlinger gives his customers the benefit of this, which, added to the fact that the variety is large, and that every article is guaranteed to be as represented, is the great secret of his heavy patronage. The Palace of Fashion has long had a reputation among the fashionable gentlemen of Fort Wayne as the great headquarters for stylish furnishing goods. This department is now more complete than ever, and includes all the novelties in collars, neck wear, shirts, etc., which have recently made their appearance in the eastern cities. Mr. Max. Nirdlinger showed us a sample of Richardson's celebrated New York shirts. These were ordered by particular request for some customers, and were found to give such good satisfaction that a large stock was purchased. They are made of the finest materials, cut in newest style, warranted to fit, and are sold at a low figure. We shall be surprised if they do not become very popular among Fort Wayne gentlemen 'of high estate,' and in closing this article let us advise those of our readers who like to see a handsome sight, to call and examine the assortment of choice goods at the Palace of Fashion.

If you want the worth of your money be treated by gentlemanly clerks, and not be asked for goods three times more than they are worth, go to the Red Front clothing hall, No. 5. Keystone block, Fort Wayne.

Everybody that goes to Fort Wayne should not fail to call at the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone block, and see the largest stock of clothing in the city. It has all been bought for cash before the late advance of wool.

Everybody that goes to Fort Wayne should not fail to call at the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone block, and see the largest stock of clothing in the city. It has all been bought for cash before the late advance of wool.

When you go to Fort Wayne to buy clothing ask for one of our price list before you purchase your goods, and get posted on prices and not be cheated by outsiders. No. 5 Keystone block.

Lots of people that have never been in Fort Wayne and are not acquainted can find the Red Front clothing hall, No. 5, Keystone block. Any woman or child can find this place, and you will save from 20 to 25 cents on each dollar.

Durhams for Sale!

The undersigned offers at private sale. Fifteen thorough-bred Durham Bulls; twelve of which are calves, two yearlings, and one two year old. The sire of all is my Duke of Wabash county, and he was sired by Duncan's Duke of Airdrie; his dam, Louan 7th, which Mr. Jeremiah Duncan, of Paris, Bourbon County, Ky., told me was the best milker he ever owned, and had been breeding Durhams for Forty Years. A full sister to my Duke Louan 19th was sold at Duncan's sale for $1,275. Several of Duncan's Louan's were purchased by McMillen, of Xenia, O., and were re-sold at McMillen's great sale at the following prices. $475, $800, 3,000 $1,750, $2.625, $1,050, the lower priced ones being old ones, one being over 30 years. Some of my cows, the dams of stock offered, are Louans and Fashions bred by Mr. Duncan, of Ky. Some are of the Duchess milker family, which are excellent milkers.

I propose showing a sample of my stock at the Wabash and Huntington county fair and shall take pleasure in showing them to all who call on me at home, near Liberty Mills, Wabash county, Ind.

Chas B. Leonard, of Woodbury, N. J., has twelve cows which last year averaged 238 pounds of butter each. They were fed corn meal and bran all the year round.

In Washington Territory there were raised last year, and exhibited in New Cork, a turnip weiging 34 pounds, which measured nearly four feet in circumference airuta-baga which weighed 30 pounds.

A New York farmer saved a calf which was choking with a potato in its throat, by bending a fence wire, putting it down the calf's throat, and working it behind the potato, thus was enabled to draw it out.

A cows's age may be determined by the teeth, but the horns is the surest. Count the rings around the horn and add to this number three years, which is the lapse of time before any rings make their appearance.

Californian has another new industry. It has just been found that the opium popy flourishes there to perfection. A field of them is growing near San Jose; they are about five feet high with seed balls of the size of an ordinary teacup.

Lots of fun has been made of New Hampshire land. At one place, they say, the seed is forced in between the stones by being discharged from a gun and upon another tract of land a mullen stalk and two bull thistles make a grove; and somewhere else the soil is so poor that you can't raise a disturbance on it. But Mr. Goodale, of Laucaster, has a field which has been mowed upward of sixty-five years in succession, and has never borne less than two tons of hay to the acre. This year it will yield two and a half.

The Traitors and the True Men.

Every Liberal Republican, according to the organs of the office-holders party, is in some way a person of bad character, whose departure from the organization is matter of congratulation, and whose support of Mr. Greeley will be of no service What a lot of isreputable men, then the Republican party in the past must have had in its chief places! Thus:

Speaker of the house of Representatives, Thirty-seven congress, Galusha A. Grow of Penn.

Speak r of the house of representatives of the Thirty-fourth congress, and chairman foreign relations committee since, Nathaniel P. Banks of Massachusetts.

Chairman of foreign relations committee, United States senate, for many years, Charles Sumner, of Massachusetts.

Chief Justice of the supreme court of the United States, former governor of Ohio, senator, and secretary of treasury S. P. Chase.

Associate justice of the supreme court, one of the founders of the Republican party of the west, David Davis, of Illinois.

Finally, of the five free soil senators who helped organize the Republican party, one is for Grant, one is taking no part in the contest, and the other three are for Greeley; of the Republican electors in the state of N. Y. in 1868 over one-half are already declared for Greeley; of the four surviving members of Lincoln's cabinet, three ardently support the Liberal cause. The people are asked to believe all these men traitors to Republicanism of which they have been prophets, and to the Reyublican party which they founded and led. They are asked to accept instead of these traitors, as the only true men now, and the rightful Republican leaders, Roscoe Conkling, Simon Cameron, O. P. Morton, Zachariah Chandler, and Mat ew H. Carpenter.—N. Y. Triquue.

Temperance.

A high officer of the sons of Temperance presenting himself with the smell of grog he had been drinking, at the door of a "Division" for admission, was waited upon by an Irish sentinel, to whom he gave the pass-word, when the following passed.

Sir, said he, and ye are Mister O'-Wright, the Grand Worth Patriarch of the State of Khaintucky, I do be after belavin.

Yes, said Jim, you are perfectly right, my friend, but why do you ask the question?

To tell ye the truth, then, sir, and shame the deevil, said Pat, ye do be having the right pass word for a Son of Temperance, entirely; but by the Holy Virgin and the blessed Saint Patherick ye've got the wrong shell, ye know.

The air grew twenty degrees colder during the rain on Monday last.

The preacher who said he could preach without notes did'nt mean bank notes.

A little girl being asked what dust was, said that it was mud with the juice squeezed out.

Can a man who has been fined by magistrate again and again be considered a refined man?

How to dress beets—A horsewhip is a good thing to dress beets with especially a dead deat.

Patients on a monument has no reference to doctor's patients. You will find them under a monument.

One Missouri editor says of another, that his ears would do for awnings to a ten story wholesale hog-packing establishment.

An old man suggests that when men break their heart it is all the same as when a lobster breaks one of its claws—another sprouts immediately and grows in its place.

A School-master, on being asked what was meant by the word fortification, when he answered, Two twentifications makes a fortification.

What a nuisance, exclaimed a gentleman at a concert, as a young fop in front of him kept talking in a loud voice to a lady at his side.

Did you refer to me, sir?

Oh no; I meant the mean musicians here, who keep up such a noise with their instruments that I can't hear your conversation.

Grover & Baker's
Sewing Machine
IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which everyone should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey and a little care taken in examination of routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R." running from Chicago, through Galesburg to Burlington, and the "I., B. & W. Route," running from Indianapolis, through Bloomington to Burlington, have achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading passenger routes to the west. At Burlington they connect with the B. & M. R. R. and from the great Burlington route, which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories and passenger starting from DeKalb county, on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the Burlington route.

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

W. W. WORTHINGTON, Supt.

Mother Goose Modified.

There was a man in Washington,
And he wondrous wise,
He used his office as a bait
For gifts of every size;
And when his term was out he strove,
With all his might and main,
To take another four years' chance
Of getting gifts again.

Little Beau Grant
Has lost his "plant,"
And had better never mind it,
But cease to roam
And go quietly home,
For Horace is gone to find it,

What care I how high I be,
Little gifts can lower me;
If little can't, why larger can,
For I'm the nation's gifted man.

Bah, bah, black man,
Have you any wool?
Yes, yes, massa, two bags full;
One for Mass' Grant to disguise,
And one to pull o'er older persons eyes

Great Bribery and Corruption Unearthed at Washington.

Nothing has appeared which throws so much light upon the corruption and profligacy of our present rulers at Washington as the expose of Pa philadelphia correspondent of the New York Sun printed a few days since. It has connected with the Union Pacific Railroad, one of those monster corporations that completely owns this rotton Administration and its friends in Congress. As is well known, grants of public land were made by Congress to it—grants that equaled in amount several States like Ohio. In addition, it received bonds sufficient to build and equip the road. When rogues fall out honest men get their dues. This old maxim has not been exactly verified in this case, but should be changed, we think, to the expression that when rogues fall out honest men are informed of who the rogues are, and what they are about. A lawsuit in equity is before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, brought by one Henry S. McCombs, of Philadelphia, who was one of the original incorporators of the road, to obtain some stock which belongs to him. He had made a good thing out of it, and had subscribed for 250 shares, worth $250 000, for one H. G. Fant, now of Washington city. Fant did not come to time, and the whole thing was thrown on McCombs. Still McCombs agreed to take it, but was never able to get it made out to him. The other directors were determined to cheat him out of it. The excuse given by the controllers of the road, at the head of whom was Oakes Ames, of Massachusetts, a well-known lobbyist of Washington, was that they had to distribute his (McCombs') stock and a great deal more among certain influential members of Congress to get everything to work satisfactorily to the interests of the road in Congress.—Now, who are these members of Congress whom it was necessary to quiet by a liberal distribution of this valuable stock.

The following is in pencil on the Ames letter:

"Oaks Ames' list of names, as shown to day to me for Credit Moiblir, is:

	Shares.
Blaine, of Maine	3,000
Patterson, of New Hampshire	2,000
Wilson, of Massachusetts	2,000
Painter. (Rep.) for Quigley	3,000
Colfax, speaker	2,000
Scofield and Kelley, of Penn., each	2,000
Elliot, of Massachusetts	3,000
Daws, of Mass	2,000
Fowler, of Tennessee	2,000
Boutwell, of Massachusetts	2,000
Bingham and Garfield, of Ohio, each	2,000

'Indorsed: Oakes Ames, January 30th, 1868.'

Does the reader know any of these names? There is Wilson, of Massachusetts, candidate for Vice-President on the Grant ticket. He is down for 2,000 shares or $200,000 worth. Colfax, then Speaker of the House, and now Vice-Posident, obtains 2,000 shares. The present Speaker, Mr. Blaine, of Maine, who rendered himself so officious in accusing Charles Sumner—he is credited with 3,000. Boutwell, Grant's Secretary of the Treasury, got 2,000, and our virtuous members, Garfield and Bingham, from Ohio, also received 2,000 each. Then General Kelley, of Penn., was not forgotten; nor was Mr. Daws, of Mass., or Patterson, of N. H.—Every one of these representatives to Washington was then a Republican.—There is not a Democrat on the list. Now these men may deny this, but the manner in which it has been brought about satisfies us that it is true. Oh, what thievery will be unmasked when we have Horace Greeley President and an honest Secretary of the Treasury! No wonder Morton, Cameron and the rest of them are fighting like grim death to prevent it. The alternative would probably be, to most of them, by a change of Administration, an early flight from the country or confinement in some of the National prisons.—Cin. Enquirer.

A young woman once married a man by the name of Dust, against the wish of her parents. After a short time they began to quarrel, and she attempts to return to her father's house, but he refused to receive her, saying:

'Dust thou art, and unto Dust thou shalt return.' And she got up and 'dusted, then.

When was Rome built? asked a school committeeman of the first class in ancient history

In the night, answered a bright little girl,

In the night! exclaimed the astonished examiner. How do you make that out, sir?

Why I thought everybody knew that Rome wasn't built in a day.

Political Notes.

In the town of Orange, New Jersey 175 Republicans have organized a Liberal club.

In Texas the election will run through four days, the 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th of November.

There are 500 Greeley Republicans in Auburn, the home of Mr. Seward. Not bad for the 'loveliest villiage of the plain.

The St. Louis Press, a Grant paper, says that every negro has as much brains as 2,000 ordinary Dutchmen put together.

Eight hundred and fourteen voters of Titusville, Pennsylvania, signed a call for the organization of a Greeley club.

The Fort Smith, Kansas, Monitor prints a list of more than one hundred Republicans of that town who are supporting Greeley.

The Galveston Bulletin, a Grant paper says: 'The Grant party might as well call a coroner to hold an inquest on its remains in Texas.

The Presidential stables cost $40,000, but are so arranged that Greeley can turn the building into an industrial school for orphan children.

The great army of tax gatherers is for Grant. This is an important straw The great army of tax payers if for Greeley. Another straw.

The whole colored population of the United States is 5 220, 489. Estimating the number of voters at one-fifth, we find the aggregate colored vote to be 1,044 099.

Senator Henry G. Davis, of West Virginia, states positively that Governor Jacob is a Greeley man, and that the State is sure for Greeley by 10,000 to 42,000 majority in Nov.

General William Birney, of Florida son of James G. Birney, the first candidate of the Abolitionists for the Presidency, has written a letter repudiating Grant and declaring for Harace Greeley.

Henry Wilson holds shares in the Union Pacific Railroad which were made out and sent to him by mail at the time when the road wanted a favorable vote of Congress. He paid for the shares by voting 'aye.'

The Pittsburg Post has a standing offer to name five Republicans who will vote for Greeley for every Democrat who will vote for Grant, and ten Republicans who will vote for Buckalew for every Democrat who will vote for Hartranft.

The New York Tribune has advices from Ohio on which is based a claim of 10,000 Liberal majority in October, with ten of the twenty Congressmen sure, and an even chance in five closely contested districts. The present delegation in Congress, under the old apportionment, is 14 Republicans and 5 Democrats.

The Louisville sideshow cost the Grantites not less than $100 000. The net results of the investment thus far are a black eye for Blanton Duncan, a coffin for John Quincy Adams, the persistent boring of Charles O'Conor, and a general disgust throughout the whole Bourbon fraternity. The only ones hurt are the parties who paid the money—'and yet they are not happy!'—St Louis Republican.

Gev. Vance represents the sentiment of the Southern people correctly when he declares that they regard the status of the negro as settled finally and forever. The negroes are free and invested with the right of suffrage, and notwithstanding all that has come and gone, they and their former masters will get on peacefully and prosperously together if, in consequence of Mr. Greeley's election, the carpet baggers are expelled from the south.

The cost of carrying Maine for the Administration, says the Bangor correspondent of the New York Sun, will exceed $200,000, besides the money contributed by private individuals; but the office-holders have observed that it is a simple question of life or death, and so the money has flowed like water.' He adds, 'on the other hand, the Liberals have scarcely had money enough to pay the gas and stationary bills of their committee rooms.

A gentleman residing at East St. Louis, and who lately held the office of postmaster at a town of Illinois, had a circular addressed to him a day or two since from the Grant and Wilson headquarters, Chicago, assessing him forty-eight dollars toward the expenses of the present campaign. The circular states that the contest is a close one in Illinois, and expensive. It states further that money is specially wanted to secure German speakers and documents in German for circulation.

B. C. and A. D.

I talked with a male man here about patriotism. He claimed he had a commission all through the war, and he talked awful big. On inquiring I found that he got five per cent. for selling salt mackeral by the barrel, and that was the commission he held during the war. I was at his house. He had two sprouts—James and George. He got them to read his history for me. James read first and he read B. C. 1802, and A. D. 1861.

James you read very well but tell me what B. C. stands for?

His face brightened up, and he exclaimed Butter Crackers.

No, no, says I. Come here, Georgie, and tell your brother what B. C. itself stands for.

He replied Buckwheat cakes.

No, that is wrong.

Then I asked James, what does A. D stand for? and he said 'Apple dumplings. So asking Georgie he said it was for aunt Dinah.

Says I to the fond parent, You ought to teach your boys what those letters stand for, and he offered to bet me a basket of lagar beer that the boys were right. I'd have lost.

AUNT POLLY QUIMBY'S BURGLAR

Oh my, but didn't the wind blow! When I went around the house that night, locking doors and windows before going to bed, there was just a breath of a breeze sighing about—nothing more; but by the time I had fairly poped my head into the pillow, the gale was going it like mad. When I first came to this Western country I used to be surprised at the quick unceremonious way storms had of coming on to people—half the time it seemed to me out of a clear innocent sky.

In my old home I prided myself upon reading the signs of the skies; but here, goodness me! when I thougt it would snow, it was sure to rain, and when I could have taken a solemn oath that the clouds were going to pour why whisk they'd go, and the sun would shine out as though it was in high glee at having fooled me. so I gave up being a weather-prophet, and took it just as it came.

That night every thing out of doors seemed to be in commotion. The loose shingles on the house clattered up and down, the windows shook and the blinds rattled and half the time it seemed to me that the bed on which I lay would be blown through the side of the house. I know I'm a foolish old woman, but at the thought, I couldn't help sitting my ruffled nightcap straight and smothing back my hair, because if I should go, why there was Deacon Altees house right opposite, and—but Lord bless me what am I saying?

Well naturaly I was lonesome enough without child or chick to speak to, but I did very well until somehow I got it into my head that burglars always choose just such nights to do their mischief in. After that I started at every sound, and as there were thumps and clatters on all sides, and in every direction, it isn't to be supposed that I got much rest.

I didn't stop to reason that there was very little in my poor little house to tempt evil doers. I knew I had $40,80 laid away in my poor departed Jason's old wooden chest, and I felt that to lose that it would be a terrible thing to me.

The house was a cottage with a hall running the length of the two rooms—an "L" being built beyond. My room was at the back opening into the hall and the front room adjoining. So my eyes went from one room to the other, lingering I must say with more dread upon the one leading to the hall.

If I should be robbed of that forty dollars and eighty cents——" I said to myself. Just then a blind went whack, and springing up in bed, I began to say the prayer my mother learned me—

"Now I lay me down to sleep." though it looked a great deal more like sitting up to sleep than lying down.

"What an old fool you are, Polly Quimby!" I begun to say aloud trying to get up courage at the sound of my own voice.

At that moment I was sure I heard a step in the little hall, and before I had time to move from my place the door latch lifted and the door swung back, and there he stood the very object I had been dreading, Mr. Burglar himself.

"Good evening ma'am, he said in such a polite way, that I found myself in the notion of bowing back and saying good evening too.

He was a middle aged man, with mustache and whiskers, and he had the brightest eyes that I ever saw in a person's head. The hair on his temples was quite gray. All in all he looked like a respectable Christian gentleman, and not a midnight thief.

'Quite a windy evening, ma'am, he went on, as he stopped into the room "You must be lonely here all by your self.

Somehow, this touched my temper—I forgot who was speaking and answered as tart as could be.

"I prefer to choose my company, sir!"

He laughed and shrugged his shoulders.

"Do you indeed! So do I. In this case I have my preference, not you,"

Then he sat down leisurely in my rocking chair, and streached out his feet as though he intended to stay awhile.

"will you be so kind sir as to go about your business? What do you think of yourself sir, to be intruding upon the privacy of my room, at this hour of the night sir?"

He leaned his head back against my bright worsted tidy and laughed fit to kill himself.

'No harm is intended you, my charming woman," he said. I swear it—no harm is intended you.

And saying this he laughed louder and longer than ever.

'do you come into my house to make game of me before my very eyes?" I asked, my temper pretty well stirred up. "if you were a gentleman——"

This was too much for him.

"A gentleman? Oh aw—that's too good! If I professed to be a gentleman, you'd stand a good chance of getting your throat cut without as much as 'by your leaf ma'am,' to begin with! A gentleman? With all my faults thank heaven that is not one of them."

'You need not have gone on that to prove it," I said tartly.

'Well you are a smart old damsel, arren't you, turning his big eyes upon me, and twisting up his mouth in a comical way which I shall never forget. "I swear you'd be pretty good looking, if you didnt wear such a wide ruffle on your night-cap. Jolly isn't it a lunker. big enough for a grave yard fence!',

"Sir," I said looking very savage

"Ma'am," he said imitating my voice to perfection.

"Oh, if I were only out of this bed, sir!' I begun.

"And pray madam what is there to hinder you from getting out I'd like to know?"

"do you intend to insult me, you good-for-nothing creature! Oh, if the wind would only blow you away!"

'If one goes the other is sure to go too.' he said stolidly.

"If brother Joe would only waken I said.

He cocked his eye knowingly.

"You want to make me believe that he is in this house somewhere eh? My dear madam you are as transparent as air! Had he been under this roof, you would have screamed blue murder long before this time."

"Oh, oh you varmint!" I groaned in pure agony of spirit. What do you want.'

"Well ma'am since that's a fair honest question, I will attempt to answer it. To begin with, my financial affairs are in a complicated condition. Money I have but little of—credit I have none; so I am forced to levy a trifling tax upon my friends in this and other neighborhoods to extricate me from this disastrous condition. As soon as I collect a certain amount. I intend leaving this country for France or Italy, never perhaps to return. Do not shed tears over this madam, for wherever my footsteps tend, your image—ruffled nightcap and all—will remain forever imprinted upon my heart."

"You old goose!" I said.

"Please don't interrupt me ma'am, I have but a few moments longer to stay, and I must to business at once. I have learned that you have deposited in a trunk in an adjoining closit, forty dollars and eighty cents. The forty forty dollars I would like to borrow of you for an indefinite length of time.—The eighty cents I do not care anything about. You can retain that as a trifling evidence of my generosity, in this great emergency of my life."

"You are a robber, a thief then," I said spitefully.

'Either at your service, madam," rising and making a bow for all the world like a French dancing-master.—'Now the money if you please.'

He wasen't joking now. there was a determined look in his eyes and around his mouth.

"He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord.' he said speaking just like a preacher.

"And he that steels of the poor, what of him?'

'My Bible does not dispose of his case, especially, madam.'

"And you came here to rob me—a poor woman.'

'I came to borrow of you for an uncertain length of time.

I saw it was useless to waste words with him, besides I didn't altogether like the look of his eyes. I closed my lips tightly together resolving that I would not speak again.

'If you've no objections ma'am I'll look around a bit." he said taking up the lamp as he spoke. 'If I hear any noise from you, my dear, or if I see that in any way you are becoming nervous, I shall be obliged to quiet you with the use of——"

He held up a small vial.

'Chloroform!' I gasped.

'At your service madam.'

'It would be the death of me I moaned.

'I should be sorry to bring such a loss to the world, but believe me all that lays in your own hands This is the door that leads into the closet, where the trunk is, I believe.' he said making straight for the closet where my forty dollars were put away for safe keeping,

I didn't say a word. To tell the truth the chloroform had scared me nearly out of my wits. He turned the key in the door (I had always kept it locked), and glanced into the closet. It was large and the trunk was at the farther end of it Let me say here that the closet or storeroom was in the "L" part of the house fully a foot lower than my room. Mr. Burglar was not acquainted with this fact. Glancing towards me with his sharp eyes to see if I was quiet he took a step forward, and went sprawling on all fours. I don't know to this day how he saved the lamp, as he did but it was not broken in the fall and burned as brightly as ever. My wits came to me here—I sprang as lightly as a cat out of bed and before he could get upon his feet, I had the door of the closet closed and locked upon him. He grew lamblike in a moment.

'You've done it now haven't you, my charming creature? I swear I'm in love with you from this hour to the end of time You've come a splendid dodge. You've got me tight and fast. What's the use of money now? I'll take the eighty cents and you may have the forty dollars, if you will let me out.'

'No sir. I am going to call in the neighbors.' I said.

'Going with that night cap on? You'll make a fortune, But don't hurry, that's a dear. Lets have a litle friendly talk. Say I'll give you a hundred dollars if you'll let me out.'

'Yes and leave you free to scare some other woman nearly to death—no sir!"

"Well then I'll give you two hundred.'

'No sir.'

"Name your price then, dear girl. I suppose every woman has her price—they say every man has!'

'No it wouldn't be right. I said hesitatingly.

I heard him chuckle.

'First step toward it. she begins to talk of what's right."'

I thought of my poor girl out to work by the week, and so anxious to get an education, and I'm sure it isn't to be wondered at if I did begin to think about setting a price, but I said not a word.

"Look here I'll put five hundred dollars in good sound gold under the door and you can count it as I push it through piece by piece if you'll only let me out of this accursed hole, I'm smothering.'

'Try some chloroform.' I whispered through the key hole.

Curse the chloroform! Will you let me out?

I had a light by this time and had slipped into a callico-wrapper, and my slippers.

If I got the money how was I to let him out of the closet? I wondered. I shouldn't dare to meet him; He'd rob me again and perhaps murder me.—But I said 'I'll take the gold' resolving to get out of it some way, just for the sake of my poor Rebecca, who so much wanted to go to school.

'Your heart is in the right place' he said, and the next moment a big round gold piece came through the wide crack under the door.

I couldn't withhold an exclamation of delight.

It's right now isn't it?' he sneered. 'There's nothing like gilding over our sins a little. Bah! All this world's alike. Here goes another and another. Count fast my pious damsel. I dare say there's no confessional in your Church.'

'Is there in yours?'

'Well if there was, gold gets into that sometimes, they say. Hold fast there, you've got the last clinker; now let me free.'

'Wait a minute.'

'But I wont wait. I swear I wont.'

'Can you help yourself?' I asked cooly.

'Well, no not much, but I'm smothering in here. Can't you take pity on a poor fellow?'

'Sit down flat on the floor I said.

I heard him plump down as obedient as a schoolboy.

'What next?'

I turned to the kitchen door to see if the lock was all right. Then I turned the key with a sharp click, which sounded to me like the report of a pistol.

'There!' I cried and sprang into the kitchen locking the door behind me.

He came out of his prison swearing like a trooper.

'Sharp old Satan, she's locked her self up somewhere,' trying the kitchen door as he spoke. 'Good night, madam De'il—good night! You've got the best of this. You have robed me. Good-night—get down and say your prayers'

And I did. What is more I cried like a baby over my money thinking what it would bring to us.

I never saw the strange burglar again, and in a few weeks Rebecca was comfortably established at school. No one ever knew where the money came from. An uncle died about that time, and some of my neighbors shrewdly suspected that he had left us something but I had nothing to say on the subject.

About six months after my adventure, brother Joe came to me, and said that he had been stopped in the street by a strange man, that morning and that he had begged him to say to Madam Quimby that the frill on her night-cap was just a little too wide! So say i[illegible] be passed on. What did it mean! asked Joe.

Nothing only he was crazy; I answered quickly but my face was as red as a blaze.

SENATORIAL CONVENTION!

The delegates of Steuben and DeKalb Counties met in Convention last Tuesday at the Court House, in Auburn, and organized by selecting A. Patterson, Esq., of Clear Lake, as Chairman, and T. C. Mays, of DeKalb as Secretary.

W. G. McConnell, Esq., of Angola, presented the name of W. G. Croxton, in a neat little speech as a suitable person for that office, and there being no other names proposed, Wm. G. Croxton was unanimously nominated as a candidate for Joint Senator.

Resolved, That these proceedings be published in the Auburn COURIER, Ligonier Banner, Fort Wayne Sentinel and Indiana State Sentinel.

A. PATTERSON, Chairman.
T. C. MAYS, Sec'y.

Indiana Sure for Hendricks.

From every indication there is little doubt of the triumph of our State ticket. We were informed by the State Central Committee that the advices from all sections is most encouraging. The Grant men are importing large numbers of negres from Kentucky and are determined to perpetrate every species of fraud to carry the election, but they are without hope. Morton is going over his old track again, and is trying to carry the Legislature now that there are no hopes for the State. He has visited this section twice, and is working with the energy of dispair. Let every man who wants an honest administration, go to work with a will and there are no fears but that these political satraps will be retired effectually.

Let the Grantites rejoice! They have secured the active service of another Communist ajitater, in Wendell Philips. In a speech a few days ago he said he hoped Grant would continue to be President, until every white man over forty years of age who lives south of Mason and Dixon's Line has been forever put under the ground. 'This atrocious sentiment of hate was loudly applauded by his Grant audience. And the above with J B. Hoover and the Rads they may count on a large increase of Sh—ysters in their stock.

The following is one of Ben. Butler's spicy letters on Grant:

"BAY VUE, NEAR LANESVILLE, MASS.
August 25, 1867.

"MY DEAR SIR. I have read your letter to Mr. Smith on the proposed nomination of Grant with much interest. Its criticisms on Grant are just; but what will you do? You can not get it, or anything else concerning Mr. Grant that is not laudatory, published; and why? Because both sides are courting him for the Presidency, and so the truth must be told. We are, I fear, to try the experiment again that we did with Johnson; that is, nominate a man for supposed availability, without knowing his principles or fitness. Grant's election will be a misfortune, because it will put in a man without head or heart, indifferent to human suffering, and impotent to govern. I am, yours, truly,

BENJ. F. BUTLER.

"W. JONES, Neenah, Wis."

It appears that Ben, nevertheless, is supporting the man he declares to be "without head or heart, indifferent to human suffering, and impotent to govern."

An Immense Fraud

Thirteen Men Call Themselves A Convention!

Thirteen of the Moreau followers, met at Indianapolis last Thursday to nominate a State ticket in opposition to Hendricks and to help Morton. A miserable fraud by the name of McConnell living at Ligonier, claimed to represent this district. According to accounts he could represents more debts of his contracting than any other man in it. Hi Iddings furnished the money it is said, to carry the carcass of this political carrion to the capitol.

Well, we were in the city at the time, and found only thirteen dead beats there to compose this Convention.

There was J. G. Smith, of Wells county, we knew him personally, and can say with all kindness to him that he has failed in everything he undertook. He published a paper at Bluffton for a number of years, and just managed to live, being too lazy to do much work. He bought a little boat called the 'Sarah E Nie," at Fort Wayne, and started down the Wabash for Texas. He failed, of course, and is now back at Bluffton trying to disorganize the Democracy. He was nominated for Superintendent of Public Instruction!

Another fellow, Worcester, of Muncie, we knew. A dead beat of the lowest order, owes everybody, loafs around saloons, gambles, and does all kinds of naughty things, yet they nominate him for Reporter for Supreme Court!

T. J. Foster, another fraud seems to have wormed himself into the good graces of the Convention, and he was put off with State Elector. The citizens of Monroeville, Ind., clubbed together, raised him a bonus and started him in the printing business in that town. He was burnt out, went to Ft. Wayne without a cent, and the Democrats again came to his relief, started him again, and two months after he abandoned his friends, and is now going for Grant, Morton & Co., to get some of the spoils. He has eaten his own words, about the State ticket, and stands convicted in his own paper of being a liar and a villian.

And these are the kind of men that composed this august assemblage! a drunken worthless set paid by Morton to defeat the State ticket. Where is there a Democrat with the least manhood that would give them his vote, not one we trust in the State.

A. P. Edgerton was nominated for Governor, without his consent, and will most positively decline running with such a set of scalawags.

What a Republican says of Hendricks.

In his excellent speech at Indianapolis, last week Sept. 11th, Hon. B. Gratz Brown said:

A distinguished statesman, worthy of high position from his pure private character, his extensive knowledge of public affairs, his briliant tallent and wise forecast, is presented for the gubernatorial office. A gentleman of pure record and admirable fitness, is named for the second place on the ticket. With the latter, I have not a personal acquaintance but with your distinguished leader Mr. Hendricks, I had the pleasure of serving in the Senate of the United States, and can bear my testimony to the fact, that few if any there won a more enviable reputation for fairness, clearness, vigor of speech and action, purity in the discharge of his high office, and unswerving devotion to the general interest of of his country. Although the acknowledged leader of a great party that differed widely from the Administration of Mr. Lincoln in the conduct of the war, yet whenever the question came upon the voting of supplies, or any essential requisite to maintaining the honor of the nation in the great contest in which it was involved, he could never hesitate, but sustained the flag of the Union by his vote and counsel. And now that war is ended and we are returned upon the policies of peace now that "just laws and public virtue," not arbitrary personal government, is the creed to be enforced, I can truly say that of all our public men of any party, I know of none who may be more safely entrusted with the executive office of the great State of Indiana. His eminent service in the past outside of all polite al consideration, justifies it, and the influence which such a decision at this time will have on national affairs demands it. Remember that every vote cast against the State ticket, and every vote withheld from it, in just so far is a corresponding endorsment and direct encouragement to the venture of President Grant in extorting another Presidential term from the people of the United States.—Whatever therefor, may have been the hostilities of the past, and whatever lingering prejudice may embarrass the present, cast them from you my friends and go forward to October, and its decision, resolute to pronounce for reconcilliation and reform!

Financial Follies.

The Republican platform of 1868, condemned the administration of Andrew Johnson for its extravagance,—We be'ieve that Grant's administration despite its boasted economy, has been more extravagant than Johnson's. All the figures quoted in this article are taken from official reports. Anyone who doubts these can easily verify them.—The Indiana department cost in 1866. $3,295,000; in 1867 there was a sudden rise, and in 1871 the cost was 7 426,000, an increase of 125 per cent over the expenditures which the Convention of 1868 declared to be extravagant. Again, since 1866, the ratio of the cost of assessing and collecting the Internal Revenue has increased 326 per cent. In a speech in the House, January 16th, 1871 Hon. H. L. Dawes (Grant) pointed to the astounding fact that the estimate for Grants administration that year was 49,632,587, more than the annual cost of Johnson's administration, indicted for extravagance by the Convintion that nominated Grant; commenting on this fact Mr. Dawes said. "The expenditures of the nation are unjustifiable, and without proper regard to economy, or to the necessity of the case. This speech can be found in the "Congressional Globe" by anyone who choses to to look for it. Let us now compare the reduction of expenses under the selfsame law; the army expenses were reduced under Johnson, 188,000, 000 in one year, and under Grant only 34,000,000 in two years. The navy expenses were reduced under Johnson, 23,000,000 in three years and under Grant, only 569,757, in two years. Now it is on the public debt which the party of state is trying to play its strongest card. The official report of the Secretary of the Treasury, elected August 1st 1872, declared that the reduction of the debt from Grant's inauguration to that date had been including cash in the Treasury, 337,404,603,57. The same report shows that the cash in the Treasury was 85.358,044,39—The actual reduction, then, in three years and five months, of Grant's administration has been the difference between these two suns or 252,046,559. 18- This is an average monthly reduction of 5,147,477. A glance at the official report of Hon. Hugh McCulloch Secretary of the Treasury, submitted in December, 1868, will show anyone that the actual reduction of the public debt in three years and seven months of Johnson, from April 1st 1865, to November 1st 1868, was 470,256,650. this is an average monthly reduction of 10 936,201. In other words the "profligate Johnson" rebuked for extravagance by the Convention that nominated Grant reduced the public debt 4,781,724 a month, and 57,344,688, a year faster than the "economical Grant."

At the risk of much repetition, we again call attention to the fact that these figures are not 'cooked up" for the occasion, but that they are taken from official reports of the Treasury Department. They will be found there in black and white. They prove beyond cavil, that the present administration has been grossly extravagant, and we defy anyone in the face of these facts to deny the assertion.

Busy Importing votes.

We have information says the Indianapolis Sentinel, from various points of the Ohio River, and on the railroads leading thence, that the Grantites are busy importing negroes from Kentucky to be used as voters at the coming election. and we are informed by good authority that negroes are being brought into this vicinity, in quite large numbers, all of whom expect to vote here at the October election and repeat as often as they can. This is one of the means by which the Grantites intend to debauch the ballot-box. and importing voters will not be confined to a supply of colored brethren, from Kentucky, but Illinois, as it has been heretofore, will be laid under contribution as there is no election in that State until the Presidential election. As we have already said importing is only one of the many corrupt agencies by which the Grantites propose to carry the State in October The old election swindles such as a ballot-box stuffings, false counting, changed returns, and tissue paper ballots, a dozen looking no thicker than one ordinary ballot will be brought into requisition to defeat the will of the people.

We warn the Liberals and Democrats in every election precinct to be on the lookout for election frauds, for unscrupulous partisans, are making a desperate struggle to retain their hold upon power. We get our information from heretofore Radicals who have been cognizant of the election frauds, by which the will of the people have been defeated in the elections of the past sixteen years, but are now anxious to have a fair vote. When the people make up their minds that election frauds must cease, cost what it may, then we may look for an approximation to fair and free election, but not until the honest voters say that election swindlers shall be punished on the spot will election frauds cease entirely, for the men who instigate the frauds understand full well, that it is only by fraud that they can retain their hold upon power.

GREELEY

AT PITTSBURG!

A Sensible Speech!

FELLOW CITIZENS: The wise King says there is a time for peace. The city of Pittsburg has recently witnessed a rehearsal of the pomp and pageantry, the blazonry and circumstance of civil war. A very large number of men were collected at vast expense, with the single purpose of rekindling the bitterness and hatred, the animosity and antipathies, the fears and exultations of civil war for the advantage of a political party. I take you to witness that the greater portion of the journals of Pittsburg, as well as the orators on this occasion, have been trying their best to make us, the people, hate each other for the sake of partisan advantage.

A stranger would imagine, who was reading the journals of Pittsburg for the last few days, that we were still at war, and that their purpose was to revive and exasperate the hatred and animosity of civil war. In order to intensify and invigorate their side of the conflict they talk about rebels and traitors.

Fellow-citizens, are we to be done with this? We demanded, of our adversaries in the great civil war that they surrender their arms and go to their homes. They surrendered them. We demanded that they enfranchise the blacks, and the blacks are enfranchised. None but white men now stand disfranchised on the soil of our country.

We demand that they stipulate that the emancipated slaves shal not be paid for, and that the Rebel debt shall never be paid by the Government or by the States, and they assented to that. So far that I can see every demand made on the part of the loyal States and the loyal people has been fully complied with.

On the part of those lately in rebellion every thing has been done that we asked; every thing has been conceded. And still they tell us, 'Why, we want to repent.' Have they not brought forth words meet for repentance? and this coming together in solemn convention of the represtatives of the Southern people have given their assent to the platform of the Cincinnati Convention, which was the most intense, the most complete Republican platform that had ever been presented by any National Convention.

All this being done, we are told by these gentlemen who met here, all this is mockery; all this is fraud; you don't mean any thing by it, and the cry goes on, 'Rebels and traitors! Denunciation proscription, the same as ever.

Four years ago, in the Republican National Convention, it was declared that this proscription should speedily cease. Four years have passed, and and still it is maintained that there are this day thousand of people of Arkansas alone prohibited—the most intelligent of that State—forbidden to exercise the right of suffrage; forbidden exclusively by the party that meets here and shouts for Grant. Nobody else asks for proscription but them. No one doubts, no other party requires, that any human being should stand proscribed on our soil for a rebellion that ceased seven and a half years ago No party, no men of any party, doubts this.

The very party that held a great military parade in order to farther and farther separate and divide the hearts of American people from each other—they hold essential to their triumph that hatred should continue; that distrust, suspicion and alienation, should continue. Do what you will do what you may, they are determined not to be satisfied.

Now fellow-citizens, it is not enough that those who fought against the Union should be proscribed. Those of us who stood for it are equally denounced if we do not happen to agree with them in our present politics. Here is one who is charged for being a secessionist. Could that be true fellow citizens? look facts in the face.

I know that the Southern people that the great majority, would have voted as they did that winter—not for secession, but for clinging to the Union. And now, to-day if the Nation were to be imperiled, and there were just two methods of saving it; to trust to the chances of civil war, or to the chances of a free fair vote of the Southern people, I would very greatly prefer the latter chances rather than the former. For fellow-sitizens they do greatly misunderstand and malign this American people when they assume that in cold blood before there had been any clash of arms the people in the South anymore than people in the North, desired disunion. In its inception in its origin, the great masses of those who consented to the secession movement, meant nothing by it only to back down the North, and make us consent to the extention of slavery. That was their purpose and that purpose. I tried my best to defeat.

Well the war is ended. And I think it ought to be ended. We had a great a terrible, a bloody, a destructive civil war. Our success was perfect. The defeat of the adversary was more complete than any defeat recorded in history. They have suffered much. They have conceded all. Cannot we afford to be magnanimous at least? They see fellow-citizen that the Southern people may vote. Some of them may; but the instant they vote, the cry is raised. "See how these fellows vote." They cry, "You must vote the other way." Is this an election? It is only the fashion of war in another aspect.

Fellow citizens you belong to one of the great hives of American industry I plead here for peace and reconciliation—for the interest especially of this busy prosperous, energetic people.—How I have sympathised with Pittsburg. How I have rejoiced in her prosperity! How I have admired her magnificent growth. You surely do know, no place on this continent has been dearer to me than Pittsburg.—There is no spot in whose prosperity I have more hartily rejoiced, and this is because I believed her prosperity was firmly linked and bound together with the prosperity of the whole country.

Now I appeal to her business men I appeal to her merchants, I appeal to her manufacturers, to stop this war.—It has gone on long enough. You cannot afford to teach part of your countrymen to hate you—to feel that your success, your greatness, is identical to your humiliation.

People of Pittsburg, I ask you to take a generous part in this work of reconciliation. You are countrymen to each other. I ask you to take the hand held out to you by our Southern brethren in the adoption of the Cincinnati platform by those who were our enemies. I ask you to grasp that hand and say, "Brothers we differed we fought. The war is ended, let us again be countrymen, and forget that we have been enemies." Friends and fellow citizens I bid you good night

The Grant Soldiers met at Pittsburg last week. They called it a soldiers re-union, until the people saw that none but Grant soldiers need apply. Senator Wilson, who never struck a blow at the armed foe in the field was there—for votes.

Senator Schurz is now in Pennsylvania, making speeches and votes for Buckalew.

The Fort Wayne Sentinel says, that the Grant Tanners marched up Calhoun-st., to the tune of the 'Dead March.' Fact! and we can demonstrate it to the satisfaction of all.

Half Fare.

The Eel River road will issue tickets from this point at half fare over the I. P. & C. R. R. to Indianapolis, during the State Fair. This is now the shortest line to the capitol, and only one change of cars making it some better than the Muncie route.

Nick Essley is building a large brick house in South Auburn. He will be a resident of our place whether an elder or not.

S. Lauferty, Esq., left last Monday for the east, where he intends purchasing the largest stock of Ready Made Clothing ever brought to this market. He means business.

Wood.—We want some wood immediately, and those intend paying their subscription in this article will please bring it in.

We are in receipt of some sheet music from the Benham Brothers, at Indianapolis, entitled 'Hendricks' Triumphant March' and 'Tom Brown's Grand March.' The titles are expressive.

CENTRAL COMMITTEE MEETING,

SATURDAY, SEPT. 28th, 1872.

The great spirit of Hate and Revenge, the only issue upon which the Grant party stands to announce their "speakers they picture a cannon and call attention to the great "War Governor." Let us keep up this spirit of the war, they say, for it is our only hope. Peace will defeat us!

S. S. Pic-nic.

A Sunday-school pic-nic will be held at North Benton Grove in Smithfield township, on the first Saturday in October, composed of the Fairfield Center, Barker's Disciple, Albright and the North Benton Union Schools. A general attendance is requested.

The Press admits by not denying our county has had the burden of twenty thousand dollars to pay off, since the Democracy came into power, the legacy of the Republican party. And yet it asks the people of the county to vote against honest officials. Out upon such knavery.

HON JOHN R. COFFROTH

Of Lafayette, one of the most tallented lawyers in the State will address the people at Spencerville this (Thursday) afternoon, on the political issues of the day. Those that can attend will be pleased with him as a speaker.

Old professional jurors around again.—Last Saturday we went into court and found a jury composed of men who had waited patiently all week that they might be called to fill up the jury box. We would like to give the names but some of them might thrash us and that would make us feel bad.

By request of Prof. McIntosh and assistant teachers Charles H. Elson, formerly of Wooster, Ohio, delivered a very interesting and instructive lecture before the students of High School, of this place, on last Friday afternoon, upon the subject of Moral and Physical Culture The lecture was well delivered and its sentiments we would pronounce Ne plus ultra.

The editor of the Whitley Commercial is just out denying that Henry Wilson is a Know Nothing. He has not reed Pike's letter yet, or he must have an unusal amount of brazenness to attempt to mislead the people in this matter. Brother Johny should waken up, and learn from his exchanges that it wont do to deny this fact in face of the evidence before the people.

The Press brings no proof to sustain its assertion that Grant did not receive a present of $105,000 after his election, and we are, therefore, correct. We have asked them for the proof, and they have failed to give it. It is generally known that he did actually receive such a present, and we have seen no denial with facts to substitute it. The Press can make assertions but it cannot sustain itself in them.

MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the stockholders of the Building, Loan and Savings Association will be held on Thursday Evening, Sept. 26,

at the Court House, at which time the monthly installments will be sold to the highest bidder.

J. B. Casebeer, Pres't.

EEL RIVER ROAD.

We are pleased to state that work has again been resumed on the Eel River road at the present western terminus from Denver to Logansport. A large force, with our friend Mansfield included, has been put to work and it is to be completed in 60 days. D. L. Quirk & Co. are doing the work and that alone insures success.

In speaking of Maj. Saylors speech last week, we used no word disrespectful to the speaker. In the remarks make by the Press relative to Mr. Wier's speech last week, it calls him an "inflated squirt," Which paper is the most fair and honorable to its opponents in this particular. Mr Wier is a Liberal Republican, and it makes our neighbor awful sick to see so good a man leave them, and so it throws dirt.—Let 'em wince!

The October Number of Lippincott's Magazine opens with a highly interesting article discriptive of the route from Lake Superior to Puget Sound. This article is bueatifully illustrated, and abounds in novel and value information relative to the character, resources, and capabilities of the country throug which the North Pacific Railway will pass. There are also many other articles of an amusing and instructive character. Specimen number 25 cents. J. B. Lippincott & Co., 715 Market-st., Philadelphia, Pa.

For Sale.

The handsome residence of Mrs. Mary Mott. The house contains thirteen rooms and is particularly desirable for a boarding house. The price is twenty seven hundred dollars. If not sold soon one half of the house will be to let. Inquire at the residence on Cedar street. 4t

So rapidly does health decline when attacked by kidney bladder and glandar diseases, mental and physical debility, diabetes, female irregularities and maladies of the urino-genital organs, that no time should be lost in partaking of an occasional dose of Smolander's Buchu, which will drive the above complaints out of the system, and a restoration to health will surely ensue.

GRAND

Rally!

HON. J. B.

Grinnell

Ex-Senator from Iowa, will address the People at

BUTLER, IND'A.

Next Friday

SEPTEMBER 27, '72.

In the Afternoon.

MR. GRINNELL!

is a Liberal Republican and has been a great light in the Republican party for year. He one of those that the Grant talk about although he has not asked for office since he was a Senator to Congress. Let the People of every party turn out and hear Iowa's Greatest Chieftain.

Sore Heads,

GRAND

RALLY!

AT AUBURN,

ON

OCTOBER 4th 1872.

Hon. BAYLESS W.

HANNA

The official that made Ham Conner, the Chairman of the Republican party in this State, shell out

EIGHTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS!

and our Candidate for

Attorney General!

AND

HON. W. W.

CONNERS

LIBERAL REPUBLICAN

From Hamilton County, will address the People on the political issues of the day. Let there be a Grand Rally from all points to hear these distinguished speakers. Remember the dates.

SCHURZ AT FORT WAYNE.

Last Saturday was a grand day in the history of Fort Wayne. Carl Schurz spoke in the afternoon in English to a crowd of twenty thousand people, and the torchlight procession at night was the largest we ever saw, about three thousand in line. It was a perfect ovation for the honest Senator that dared to refuse a bribe from Grant on the San Domingo scheme.

Mr. Schurz also spoke in the evening, at the Rink, in German, and to judge from the expression of that German audience it was received with telling effect. He is one of the finest speakers in the country, and no one that listens to him but what feels that he is earnest and honest in what he says. The procession and illumination at night were the grandest ever known in that city.

Mr. Hamil, of Waterloo, a Liberal Republican has made several good speeches in the county. From his standpoint, heretofore, he has had ample opportunity to note the corruptions of the Grant party even in our own county, and he stands forth to-day and warns the people of the frauds and swindling of this rotten organization. The Press seems to be worried in the fact that he has taken a stand for honesty.

For the Courier.

Bro. Mays. Permit me through the columns of the Courier to return the thank of the members of the St. Johns Reform church, to the citizens of Auburn for their assistance in repairing their church building. May God, the giver of all good and perfect gifts, bless them in basket and store, in life and death.

Respectfully,

W. B. Sandoe, Pastor.

Last Sunday evening the M. E. Church at Corunna was crowded with people, to witness a marriage ceremony. The parties appeared at about 8 o'clock, and in a few moments were pronounced 'man and wife, when they returned the residence of Mr. Toppings', the bride's father, and partook of the pleasure always resulting from such occasions. The bride's attire was neat and tasty, and from this we can say that Samuel has secured, by his good behavor, industry, &c, a woman, worthy of any man.

The Press says that the best of feeling prevailed at Saylor's meeting at Newville. Was the speaker insulted by having a Greeley man calling for three cheers for Greeley, as Col. DeLong did for his party when Long spoke? We believe not. Our friends have more respect for an opponent than that. They have some claim to common decency, and we believe that there are many Grantites in this county that condemn the course of DeLong, though the Press does endorse it. This vindictiveness, and hate and jealousy seems to be the component part of its creed.

Painful.—We are grieved to learn that the sensitive souls of some of our Greeley friends are troubled about the picture of the cannon, on the bills for Senator Morton's meeting next Monday. They are assured that it has no signification whatever, relating to them, and that if it had, the 'gun isn't loaded;' therefore it will not be necessary for them to visit Canada until after the election.—Press.

It is only necessary to state that this "cannon" was made at the Press office to assure all that it is perfectly harmless.—We never saw anything yet come from that office that was "loaded.'

Meeting at Corunna.

Next Monday evening, Sept. 30, S. M. Hench, Esq., of Fort Wayne, and Joseph Woodhull, of Angola, will address the people at Corunna. Let there be a rousing meeting from all surrounding points.

A Debt of Twenty Thousand Dollars has been removed in DeKalb County since the Democracy came into power, and today the county is out of debt. Is there a farmer or taxpayer, no matter of what party but what must rejoice over this acheivement. That party has been honest in its administration and now comes before us for a new lease and contrasting the present with the former administration, it will be to the pecuniary interest of the farmer and mechanic and taxpayer to give it to them. If you want to see your county prosper, vote for the Democratic ticket.

Greeley Campaign Music, with a picture of Greeley and Brow, mailed, post paid on receipt of marked price.

Good-bye, Ulysses, Song and chorus, 35; He always Wears an Old White Hat, song and chorus 35c; The Farmer goes Chopping on his Way, song and chorus, 35c; Greeley and Brown's Gallop to the White House, 40c; Greeley's Grand March, 40c; Greeley's favorite Polka, 40c. Send 30c for the last number of Peterson's Musical Monthly, and you will get eight or nine pieces of new music. Address, J. L. Peters, 590 Broadway, N. Y.

PROSCRIPTION.

We have received a communication from Mr. Hamil, of Waterloo, a Liberal Republican, showing how the Grant party of this county intends to proscribe and persecute him if he attempts to make speeches for the Liberal cause in this county. They have manufactured certain letters with which they have tried to blackmail him, but he has stood the test, and is not to be bullied from his course.—The Press is very anxious to have his character tested by Democrats, but while Mr. Hamil was with them he was all right. The fact is, Mr. Hamil's reputation for veracity stands about as high as that of the editors of the Press, especially in the 'Democratic authority case," only Mr. Hamil has come out from the corrupting influences of these Grant men and consequently is entitled to more credit than his late associates.

We propose to stick to Mr. Hamil for his independence. If he has done wrong in the past, he has now given us a tangible evidence of his repentance, and like Tom Brown he says, "by drinking whisky in the past I have offended my brother I will drink no more forever. But we don't want Hamil to go off, like Tom Brown did to Rome City, and indulge in a drunken spree of three days, and then come back and talk scripture to the people. Hamil, if you play off on us that way, we will regard you as totally depraved. We propose to stand by the side of all these Liberal Republicans and they are legion, in this county, because they have had the manliness to step out from under the party lash, and are now proscribed and persecuted because they would not go for party against the people. Let them get out their letters to black mail with, they cannot compel freemen to vote as they shall dictate.

If you want the worth of your money be treated by gentlemanly clerks, and not be asked for goods three times more than they are worth, go to the Red Front clothing hall, No. 5. Keystone block, For Wayne.

Everybody that goes to Fort Wayne should not fail to call at the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone block, and see the largest stock of clothing in the city. It has all been bought for cash before the late advance of wool.

Senator Morton!

ON THE War Path!

He still Insists Upon Talking War! War! War!!

The Great Statesman, profound thinker, and terrific orator, the gorgeous Oliver P. regaled himself and the denizens of Waterloo with his Great War Speech! Six years ago and again in '68 did this Demosthenes, rain down the same chain lightning and now he is a fighting those terrible battles over again.

"When I was Governor" is a familiar phrase with O. P. Julian says says that Morton was not wounded in an actual engagement in the field!

Oliver Pels still telling the people that Horace Greeley will pay the rebel debt and pension rebel soldiers! Yes, and not only that, but he will increase our National army to two hundred thousand men whose duty it shall be to go down south and dig up every dead rebel and put $1,00 in gold in the coffin and bury it again! The one is just as probable as the other He spoke of Horace Greeley's efforts to prevent the war, but did not say anything about Lincoln's views on the subjects. It would not have done, as that would have exposed Morton's little game.

He went into an argument about Jeff Davis and several other subjects that happened years ago, but did not allude to a single vital issue of the day with any show of argument. It seemed to be his mission to work up all the hate and prejudice he could that sprung out of the late war, and he appealed to soldiers to remember the rebels of the south, the mass of whom had no responsibility in the war.

The party of Hate and prejudice want the spirit of the war aroused in a time when there is no war, and then they appeal to the issues of seven years ago to help them in their time of trouble now.

But it will not avail. Morton is frightened, and is laboring with might and main to save himself regardless of the fate of State. He talks now about "When I was Governor," and makes a personal appeal to the soldiers. But its no go. He could only keep about one third of the crowd together at Waterloo, while the other part was on the streets. In fact this speech helped the Liberal cause here and we would be glad if he should get a little scared so as to come back again Let him come to Auburn and we will be satisfied. We met one Republican that was disgusted with his arguments, and he said though he intended to vote for Grant he did not see why Morton, the great light of the Grant party, still harps on the war.

Morton ought not to be frightened about losing his seat as he is about the best hand to keep his seat we have seen in the canvass. Put Indiana down against this war spirit in October!

NOTICE.

Whereas my wife Lydia Ann Grube has left my bed and board without just cause or provocation. All persons are hereby notified that I will not be responsible for any debt of her contracting from and after this date, nor be in any manner responsible for her maintainance.

Semptember 23d, 1872.

Everybody that goes to Fort Wayne should not fail to call at the Red Front Clothing Hall, No. 5 Keystone block, and see the largest stock of clothing, in the city. It has all been bought for cash before the late advance of wool.

When you go to Fort Wayne to buy clothing ask for one of our price list before you purchase your goods, and get posted on prices and not be cheated by outsiders. No. 5 Keystone block.

Lots of people that have never been in Fort Wayne and are not acquainted can find the Red Front clothing hall, No. 5, Keystone block. Any woman or child can find this place, and you will save from 20 to 25 cents on each dollar.

Durhams for Sale!

The undersigned offers at private sale, Fifteen thorough-bred Durham Bulls; twelve of which are calves, two yearlings, and one two year old. The sire of all is my Duke of Wabash county, and he was sired by Duncan's Duke of Airdre: his dam, Louan 7th, which Mr. Jeremiah Duncan, of Paris, Bourton County, Ky., told me was the best milker he ever owned, and had been breeding Durhams for forty years. A full sister to my Duke Louan 19th was sold at Duncan's sale for $1,225. Several of Duncan's Louan's were purchased by McMillen, of Xenia O., and were re-sold at McMillen's great sale at the following prices. $475, $800, 3,000 $1,750, $2.625, $1,650, the lower priced ones being old ones, one being over 30 years. Some of my cows, the dams of stock offered, are Louans and Fashions bred by Mr. Duncan, of Ky. Some are of the Duchess milker family, which are excellent milkers.

I propose showing a sample of my stock at the Wabash and Huntington county fairs and shall take pleasure in showing them to all who call on me at home, near Liberty Mills, Wabash county, Ind.

Why Irishmen go for Greeley.

The New York Metropolitan Record (Catholic) is enthusiastically for Greeley and even goes so far as to propose a short catechism, from which we make the following extracts.

Who was the unflinching friend of Irish independence in the dark days of '48? Horace Greeley.

Who gave his time and money to help them? Greeley.

Who raised his voice in behalf of Irish patriots in British prisons? Greeley.

Who came to the rescue of Ireland when famine was sore in the land?—Greeley.

Who has ever been the avowed enemy of bigotry and intolerance? Greeley.

Housekeeper's Guide.

A party who proposes to establish a new housekeeper's guide, send to the Boston Commercial Bulletin the following extarcts from the forthcoming work.

Plain sauce—an interview with a Saratoga hotel clerk.

To make a good jam—ask any horse car conductor.

To boil a tongue—drink scalding coffee.

To make a good broil—leave a letter from one of your sweethearts where your wife can find it.

How to make an Indian loaf—give him a gallon of whiskey.

How to make good puffs—send the publisher fifty cents a line for them.

A plain loaf—a visit to the prarie.

How to make pi—jostle the printer's elbow.

To 'bone' a turkey—take it when the poulterer is not looking.

To corn beef—feed your cattle at a brewery.

How to select a foul—ask the umpire of a base ball match.

How to dress beats—a horse whip is a good thing to dress beats with, especially if he be a dead beat.

HUMOROUS.

A smart thing—A mustard plaster.

The children's kingdom—Lapland.

The rock that topers split on—quartz

You can't marry amiss if you marry a widow.

Carpets bought by the yard are worn out by the foot.

Cool proceeding—An ice man eloping with a nice girl.

A hindrance to marriage—Goverment tax on matches.

A sure way to make an impression—Fall down in the mud.

Never undertake to fasten a door with a lock from your own head.

Don't take too much interest in the affairs of your neighbors. Six per cent. is enough.

Grover & Baker's
Sewing
Machine
IS THE BEST!

WHY?

1st. Because it runs easy and still, and does not tire a lady of delicate health.

2d. Because it has the largest and latest improved shuttle of any Family Sewing Machine made.

3d. Because it has the capacity of sewing heavier thread and heavier goods than any other machine in use.

4th. Becaus it has a larger space under the needle arm, affording the operator greater facilities for quilting, working bulky goods, or applying patent attachments.

5th. Because it is the simplest and most perfect machine in the market, giving a lady no trouble to learn to operate it successfully, and not liable to get out of order.

6th. Because we are responsible to every person that purchases a machine of us, and guarantee every one we put out to be of No. 1 material, and that it will do its work as well as any other sewing machine made.

IT
Puffs. Ruffles. Plaits. Braids. Tucks. Fells. Hems. Frills. Quilts. Cords. Gathers.

It makes the Stitch alike on both sides, and does not rip nor ravel.

Our Tea Trade is continually on the increase. We now sell two or three chests a day. Our large purchases of two hundred chests at a time direct from the importers, is the reason we can undersell all others, as there is no intermediate profits of the jobber, speculator and wholesale house to eat it up. Our Teas go direct into the consumers' hands, at a small profit. No charge for trying any quality.

VOLLMER'S Elixir of PYROPHOSPHATE OF IRON AND PERUVIAN BARK.
In this preparation are combined the valuable properties and virtues of Peruvian Bark, with Phosphorous and Iron, in the shape of Pyrophosphate of Iron. This Elixir will be found of great advantage in Dyspepsia, Indigestion, weak and delicate Stomachs, and generally in weak and delicate states of the system. The ingredients in this Elixir are skillfully blended into a delightful Cordial, making it the most agreeable and palatable combination to the taste, in use.
ar. 30, '70.

FOUTZ'S
CELEBRATED
Horse and Cattle Powders.
This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly re-invigorate broken down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.
It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, GLANDERS, YELLOW WATER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUNDER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetite—gives a smooth and glossy skin—and transforms the miserable skeleton into a fine-looking and spirited horse.
To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.
In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which everyone should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey and a little care taken in examination of routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q R. R." running from Chicago, through Galesburg to Burlington, and the "I., B. & W. Route," running from Indianapolis, through Bloomington to Burlington, have achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading passenger routes to the west. At Burlington they connect with the B. & M. R. R. and from the great Burlington route, which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories and passenger starting from DeKalb county, on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the Burlington route.

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

THE OLD, OLD HOME.

When I long for sainted memories,
Like angel troops they come.
If I fold my arms to ponder
On the old, old home;
The heart has many passages
Through which the feelings roam,
But its middle isle is sacred
To the thoughts of old, old home.

Where infancy was sheltered
Like rose buds from the blast,
Where girlhood's brief elysiam,
In joyousness was passed;
To that sweet spot forever,
As to some hollowed dome.
Life's pilgrim bends her vision—
'Tis her old, old home.

A father sat how proudly,
By his hearthstone's rays,
And told his children stories
Of his early manhood days;
And one soft eye was beaming
From child to child 'twould roam;
Thus her mother counts her treasures,
In the old, old home.

The birthday gifts and festivals,
The blended vesper hymn
(Some dear one who was swelling it
Is with the seraphim.)
The fond good nights at bed time,
How quiet sleep would come,
And hold us all together
In the old, old home.

Like a wreath of scented flowers
Closed intertwined each heart,
But time and change in concert
Have glown the wreath apart,
But dear and sainted memories
Like angles ever dome,
If I fold my eyes and ponder
On the old, old home.

Horace Greeley!

—AT—

CINCINNATI!

In response to repeated calls from an immense assemblage of the people in front of the Burnet House, on Friday night last, Mr. Greeley said:

CITIZENS OF OHIO: I am here a guest, at the invitation of the Common Council of Cincinnati. It is there desire, as it was my wish, that I should while their guest, abstain from any remarks which might seem to serve a partisan purpose. And I should have chosen, had I been left at liberty, so to speak, that none of any party could possibly have taken objection. But there has been made an attack upon me since I came here which I will trust to the hospitality and generosity of my entertainers to enable me to permit me to repel here and now.

Last evening at Pittsburgh, in the course of some off-hand remark to a vast assemblage like this, I took pains to explain the circumstances—the extraordinarily unprecedented circumstances—under which I was impelled in the winter of 1860—61 to offer in good faith to submit the whole question of Union or disunion to a free, fair and unconstrained vote of the Southern people, after due deliberation and discussion. It was my belief then, and is now, that if that people had been allowed such free and fair opportunity, they would have decided, as you have decided, that the Union shall be maintained. (Cheers.)

Those remarks which I made last evening have been misrepresented—have been, I think, perverted into an expression of a present belief, a present conviction, that any State has the right to resolve this Union at its own good pleasure. Fellow citizens, I utterly repudiate and condemn that sentiment. (Cheers.) I do not believe that one State, or that ten States, has a right to dissolve our Union. (Cheers That Union is founded on a constitution which is a charter, or government —not a mere league. It does not contemplate a confederacy merely, but a union; not a government of limited and defined power but of unlimited duration. I believe that the Union was not only destined, but was intended to be perpetual. I believe our great civil war—if there ever was any reasonable doubt as to the nature of that Union—has settled that doubt for ever (cheers); that slavery is dead, and that the Union abides now forever.

Such is the sum and substance of the verdict pronounced through the issues of our great contest. There is no longer a question, there can never again arise the question as to the perpetuity of the Union.

The apple of discord, the only thing that ever made any American hostile to his own country and Constitution, has utterly perished. Henceforth, the American Union abides forever, grounded in the affections, in the necessities, and in the fervent devotion of the whole American people. If there ever again shall arise that question in this Union, it will be presented, not from the Southern sections of this country. But no such question will again arise. As perpetual as the hills, as solid as the everlasting rocks, the Union of the States abides, and must abide forever. (Cheers) One sentiment, one desire, animates the American heart, and that is that the Union of the States must and shall be preserved.—(Cheers.)

Now, my fellow citizens, if I may be allowed, let me say a few words more generally with regard to your position your tasts and your prosperity.

Cincinnati may be regarded as very nearly the industrial and commercial ceter of our present population. What the future may bring forth we can not tell. But to day this city is nearly in the middle of the great commercial movement and the industrial activity of the American people.

These hills, smiling in their summer abundance, look lovingly on each other from the north to the south. This mighty river, which leaves them with its gentle currents, is a persuasion to union and reconciliation. We are to be forevermore one people. Let us, then, be a harmonious people, united in heart as well as in biography and in political associations. Let us resolve to cultivate the graces and the charities of our fellow citizenship. Let us resolve that from this city shall go forth an influence to the North and to the South which shall bind all people together in the cords of sweeter and a stronger affection, than they have ever yet known. (Cheers.)

Fellow-citizens I rejoice to stand in your city, which has been honored by the presence of the Cincinnati Convention, from which went forth the noblest platform of principles, ever presented to the American people. (Cheers.) Those principles recommend themselves to my judgement; they are dear to my heart. If I could do any thing to give accendency and perpetuity, complete, to those principles I would gladly do it. If the success of this platform is my success, or if its success were my defeat, I should rejoice alike at its success or any defeat. I believe that platform represents the best thought, the best purposes the best aspirations of the American people. As such I accept them. As such I am proud to be even in any capacity identified with their presentation.

It was my fortune to be presented as a candidate by that Convention.—That honor was confered upon me and I thankfully and hartily accepted it.—And I thank you my fellow-citizens for the cordiality, or the unanimity, for the majestic strength in which you have responded to it.

As one of your number I take my place in your ranks which has been assigned me, and I will endeavor to bear your banner with honor, with truth and with justice wherever fortune may lead, and wherever a good Providence may enable me to carry it.

And so fellow-citizens unable to make myself heard I will relieve your attention, and ask Governor Randolph to speak to you in my stead. (Loud cheering.)

A Swindle in Charcoal.

A Hartford paper recalls the fact that several years ago a charcoal pedler in the city had a New Foundland dog, which he learned to jump into his basket and lie low while he filled in the charcoal. When the peddler carried the baskets, very full into the cellar, the purchaser, looking out of the window and checking the basket, was quite satisfied. The dog, well trained, walked out with his master as if nothing had happened. The daughter of this old charcoal peddler has spent several summers at Saratoga with two large 'solitaries' on her person.

Life of a London Cabby.

A London cab-driver describes his personal existence thus:

I got on this box at eight o'clock this morning. I shall get off at half past eleven to-night. I have had about half an hour for my meals. By the time I get at home it will be nearly one. Am I then to tumble into bed like a brute? I want to wash myself, and I must have a bit o' food, howlever paltry. Then when I get to bed I'm almost too tired to sleep. American Flag.

One Sergeant Bates, who earns his living by carrying the American flag on a nine foot pole, proposes to do so some more, this time in England.

Three years ago he carried it through the Southern States 'without insult or injury,' and was so delighted with this tremendous achievement that he is now about starting, on a wager, to 'carry the flag of the United States in the daytime and on foot, said flag to be of large size and displayed from a nine foot flag staff, from the dividing line between Scotland and England to the Mayor's Hall in the city of London, without molestation or insult to himself or the flag. We trust that our English brethern will not take this speculative patriot for a fair sample of his countrymen.

A Snake Story.

A correspondent of the London 'Times' tells this story:

I happened to know a lady and gentleman against whom a complaint was recently made because of the snakes they kept, and I should like to give a short account of my first visit to them:

Mr. M., after we had talked to him for a little while, asked if I had any fear of snakes, and after a timid 'No, not very,' he produced out of the cupboard a large boa constrictor, a python, and several small snakes, which at once made themselves at home on the writing tables among pens, ink, &c.

I was first a good deal startled, especially when the two large snakes coiled round my friend, and began to notice me with their black eyes and forked tongues; but soon, finding how tame they were, I ceased to feel frightened. After a short time Mr. M. expressed a wish to call Mrs. M., and left me with the boa deposited on an arm chair. I felt a little queer when the animal gradually began to come near, but the entrance of my host and hostess, followed by two charming little children put me at my ease again.

After the first interchange of civilities, she and the children went at once to the boa, and calling it by the most endearing names, allowed it to entwine itself most gracefully about them. I sat talking for a long time, lost in wonder at the picture before me. Two beautiful girls, with their charming mother, sat before me with a boa constructor twinking playfully 'round the lady's waist, expecting to be petted, and made much of like a kitten.

The children, over and over again, took its head in their hands and kissed its mouth, pushing aside its forked tongue in doing so.

The animal seemed much pleased, but kept turning its head continually towards me with a curious gaze, until I allowed it to nestle for a moment upon my sleeve.—Nothing could be prettier than to see this splendid serpent coiled around Mrs. M. as she moved about the room, and when she stood to pour out coffee.

It was long before I could make up my mind to end the visit, and I returned soon after with a friend to see my snake-taming acquaintance.

About a year ago Mr. and Mrs. M. were away for six weeks, and left the boa in charge of a keeper at Zoo. The poor reptile moped, slept and refused to be comforted, but when his master and mistress appeared, he sprang upon them with delight. The children are entirely devoted to their 'darling Cleo' as they call the snake, and they smiled when I asked if they were ever frightened by it.

OUR LITTLE WOMEN AND MEN.

Sitting on rustic benches,
Conning their lessons o'er;
Some so short their bare brown feet
Can scarcely reach the floor.
Busy with book and pencil,
These are who'll rule the State—
Our little women and men.

Under the shaddy maples
They are busy as bees.
All the noontime keeping house,
Keeping house under the trees;
Then again at their lessons,
Puzzling o'er two times ten,
Yes, these are our future rulers—
Our little women and men.

Little worn frocks and aprons,
And hats with half a rim,
Little eager, sunbrowned faces,
With dimple in cheek and chin;
Saucy and full of mischief,
Scolded again and again,
Never they mind the scoldings—
Our little women and men.

All the great of the nation
Were little once like these,
Now some of them rule the land,
And some of them rule the seas;
They'll win who toil the hardest,
With sword, book or pen;
There waits a golden harvest
For our little women and men.

A SOUTHERNOR'S OPINION.

—For the Henry County Register.

TO MY FELLOW CITIZENS:—As one of the delegates to the Baltimore Convention, whose deliberation resulted in the adoption of the nominees and platform of the 'Cincinnati Convention,' a brief statement of the motives, which impelled me to pursue the course I did may not be amiss, and I trust may not be egotisticle. To those whom and with those whom my life has been passed from early boyhood to the afternoon of existance, it is entirely unnecessary to say that I could have had any selfish personal ends to observe. Office never had many attractions for me and though not ungrateful to those who have honored me with their confidence and whose partial friendship desires to confer on me a place of honor and trust, I can truthfully say the shadows of existence lengthen, the few questoionable charms that officeholding ever thad, proportionably diminished. The good of my country and the best interests of my fellow citizens, were the guiding star of my conduct, and these shall ever be the controlling incentives with me.

The delegates to the Baltimore Convention recognised the fact, and eagerly acted upon it, that the great the paramount want of the country was substantial peace—peace in fact in truth and in practice. Not the deceptive words that were not much longer lived than the sound which followed their utterence, by the personage now at the head of the Government, but that sort of peace that will give tangible evidence of its existance whenever it is practiced by the building up of the waste places in our land, and the restoration of harmony. The golden opportuny of attaining this desireable end, was in easy reach of the Convention by adopting the wise conciliatory cousre it did, and with a unanimity of sentiment unparaleled in the history of Conventions Greeley and Brown as the standard bearers, pledged to peace and reform, which cannot fail to bring innumerable blessings in their wake, and restore the Government to something like its former integrity. These men are a fit ting pair. Greeley was the first to raise the flag of universal amnesty and Brown was the first to raise the standard of reform.

In all this broad land there is no one whose history is better known than that of Horace Greeley. It runs through nearly half a century, but it is free from the stains of dishonesty. There it stands bold, fearless, earnest, zealous, intensified by the labor of nearly fifty years, unblotted by any charge of corruption, unblamed by the faintest suspicion of double dealing. Such a man and such a character all men are bound to admire and respect. There is no mistaking such a man, when he gives uttereuce to a sentiment we know that he means what the words imply.

When he says "I want peace, I want universal amnesty for past political offenses; I want the taxes wrung from the laboring community appropriated to the purpose for which they was created; I want no thieves in office, and will have none; to them I will say.—Rogues to the rear, make room for honest men." We are bouned to believe just what he says, and that his acts when in power would, correspond with the voluntary declarations he has made as a private citizen.

We are not trying Greeley on his anti-war record. Those issues which then possessed vitality are now dead, and have for years been consigned to the tomb. There let them remain.—We could not resurrect them if we would, and I for one would not if I could.

'Oh! But Greeley was such an intence abolitionist,' cries some zealous 'straight out' Democrat Well, what if he was? That has nothing to do with the present contest. Abolitionism is an accomplished fact, and cannot now be an issu. But there is more things than I have space to enumerate that Mr. Greeley wishes to abolish and I think that most of you desire to aid him in the good work. He wants to abolish the accepting of gigantic gifts by high officials, which is only a thin veil for the coarsest and grossest bribery. He wants to abolish stealing by officials, and so do you. He wants above all things to abolish the rule of the bayonet, and with it the oppressive tyranny that have weighed down the South for years, and well nigh crushed the energy of her sons. These are a few of the things Mr. Greeley wants today to abolish, and I hope my fellow Democrats who want to do the very same thing will not be slow to give him aid and comfort. He wants to lift the yoke from the neck of the Southern people and I trust my Democratic friends will aid to place him in a position where he can remove the yoke ef factually.

Amnesty is not a song of yesterda with Greeley. He sang it loud and clear, when it cost a Northern man something to even hum that tune in low notes.—But he knew he was wright, and faltered not in his course. There is where he exhibited nerve and true pluck.—The tracks made by the toil worn Confederate soldiers who first surrendered in Virginia, had not been obliterated by the invention of a shower of rain, true to the instinct of humanity, and the presence that marked the gifted statesman, proclaimed the doctrine of universal unconditional amnesty, which without irreverence may be said to have been 'glad tidings of great joy' to many of us. Standing at the edge of the bloody chasm anxious to fill it up, to consign to forgetfulness as far as may be and bridge over with the timbers of fellowship, and good neighborhood; extending to us the hand of forgetfulness for what is unpleasant in the past; friendship and fraternity for the present; cheer, hope courage and resolution for the future—the Convention would have been criminally culpritable and untrue to the intereit of those they represented, had they ignored these voluntary overtures, or failed to have siezed the hand thus extended to those on the Southern side of the chasm. The olive branch thus tendered was accepted, not in the mean, cringing spirit of cravens; but in the open manly, generous, patriotic spirit in which it was offered. This is not the time to closely sift the recoeds of the past, and search with lynx eyes for the expression of some sentiments and opinions, inimical to the South," uttered more than a century ago by Mr. Greeley in the pressure and hurry of preparing articles for the press, in heat of fierce political contests. It is not what the man was twenty or thirty years ago, that we should scrutinize, but what is the sentiments he now entertains, the principle by which he promises to be governed when President, on the matters that concern us, and which, when honestly canvassed will be found to come fully up to the requirements of the times. Tried by this standard, weighed by these ballances. Mr. Greeley occupies a position worthy of all confidence. No man ever impugned his integrity or the rectitude of his motives. His escutcheon is untarnished, by even the breath of suspicion, after having passed through fiery ordeals of temptation, from which nothing but the purest gold could inerge unscathed.

In rallying around the standard of the great Liberal Conservatives, Mr Greeley and Brown the Southern people show and demonstrate, to the world that they accept the results of the war in all their details, in as good faith and in as shivalrous a spirit as that displayed by the Military Chieftain, when he and his faint, but still unconquered followers submitted with such lofty and heroic grace, to the fortunes of war and the limitless resources of their adversary, when they furled forever near the historic apple tree at Appomattox Court house the banners which they had so long borne and had so often waved in proud and exulting triumph over many battle fields where every neck of ground had been fiercly contested, for it was "Greek against Greek" These men lost none of their glory and renown, when they succomed to the inevitable, at Appomattox.—It was no blot on their fame and Democrats sacrifice no principle of political integrity, when they march arm in arm with Liberal Republicans, to overturn the most corrupt and despotic party, that ever held the reins of this Government. This may be a new departure but it is one that should be promptly made, if we intend to even preserve the semblance of republican institutions.

No Democart, ever stultifies himself or goes back on his record, by giving his earnest enthusiastic support to the Liberal movement. It is no disbanding of the party. The party organization is preserved firm and intact in all the States. Mr. Greeley wants the Government honestly administered, and in the direct interest of the whole people. So do all Democrats. Mr Greeley promises to punish all defaulters and official rogues. Democrats want the same thing done. Mr. Greeley wants the bayonet returned to the armories and barracks, or employed in the protection of our frontier. All Democrets pray for the same thing.—Mr. Greeley wants to put a stop to prossecution by prejured informers, under the Ku-Klux law of Congress.—To this all good men of whatever name or party will respond a harty, AMEN. In a word my counerymen there is not an asperation you feel for good government administered by honest officials, there is not a wish you entertain for the restoration of harmony friendship and fraternity, between the lately enstranged sections that does not meet with an honest cordial and native response from the clear head comprehensing intellect and benignant heart of Horace Greeley.

As one of your representatives to the Baltimore Convention and in difference to opinions of those with whom I have spent my life, in political accord and party harmony, but who may now differ with me as to the correct policy to be pursued in the present emergency. I have given you some of the reasons, crudelity it is true, that conduced to shape my course in the Convention, and that will govern me in the election.

Knowing that I discharged my trust honestly as one of your delegates, and satisfactorily, also I hope I will not trespass no farther than to thank the Democratic Convention for the honor confered upon your obedient servant.

A. C. GORDON.

Henry Wilson alias Jeremiah Colbath comes before the American public in the popular and funny character of the Artful Dodger. Wilson a few years go was a Know Nothing. This has been distinctly proved by a speech he made, by a letter he rote, and by the testimony of men who have met him as a member at the Philadelphia Know-Nothing Convention, of 1855. But Henry Wilson come out West and dened that he was ever a Know-Nothing. Then a letter was written under his frank, to the Germans of Brooklyn over his name in which a general denial of the fact was also entered. For some time Henry Wilson allowed the public to believe that he had written this letter of denial. But the proof of his Know-Nothingism, having become stronger until he now says that he didn't write the letter of deinal.—Here we have a candidate who is a Know-Nothing and a man who lies about his own lies.

A Greeley and Brown soldiers' club consisting of honerably discharged soldiers, has been organized in Albany. The organization starts out with 200 members.

The Pennsylvania Radicals concede the election of Buckalew, Democratic and Liberal Republican for Governor but the Cameron party are trying to save the Legislature by trading two votes for one; two radical votes for Buckalew for one Democratic vote for a Cameron Senator or Representative.

What Vermont Has Taught.

An inteligent correspondent of the New York World applies the, persentage of Liberal gains in Verment to the Central States and find that it yields a Liberal majority in Pennsylvania of 15,698; in Indiana, of 12,379, and New York, 64,584. The percentage in Maine, of course, is greater, and gives promise of larger majorities for the Liberal tickets in all the above States.

Honest Old Horace.

By invitation of prominent citizens, Horace Greeley attended the Exposition in the city of Cincinnati. Everywhere along the route the old Philosopher was received with the wildest enthusiasm. He made a number of eloquent speeches, notable at Harrisburg Pittsburgh, and Cincinnati. From the latter point he proceeded to Columbus Louisville, Indianapolis, and Cleveland addressing immense audiences in each of the above cities. His utterance give great satisfaction and will accomplish much good.

Mr. Wendell Phillips, in his late speech at Boston Mass., said.

'The reason why I support the Republcian party is to my utter surprise, to my unuterable surprise, to my indescribable delight, to my relief, I have at last found a party that is willing to execute all the laws that is given them. It is for that reason that I say, "Long live Ulysses Grant! May he continue to be President of the United States until every white man over forty years of age, who lives south of Mason's and Dixons Line may be forever put into the ground.

Young Man!

Remember in selecting your position in the present political contest, that you may choose between honesty and reform on one side, and corruption anp official debauchery on the other. It ought to be a matter of pride with every young man in the land to cast his first vote on the right side, and for those candidates whose election would contribute most largely to the welfare and prosperity of the country. Greeley and Brown are pledged to honesty and reform, while Grant's re-election cannot inspire the remotest hope of reforming the public service or relieving the country from the grasp of the monopolists and the rapatious plunderers of the people.

Pennsylvania.

General Banks, who has been speaking in Pennsylvania, gives the most encouraging accounts of the political prospects in that State. It is confidently expected that Buckalew will be elected by 30,000 majority. Colonel Forney estimates that the accession of Governor Curtin assures the Liberals a majority of 25,000. Even old Simon Cameron openly admits the doubtfulness of the contest, and that means all that Forney claims for Buckalew. Indiana must not be behind Pennsylvania in a rousing majority for Thomas A Hendricks.

Rally for Hendricks!

It has been the policy of the Grant party to set all their big dogs and little dogs to barking at the heels of Tom Hendricks. From the day of his nomination the whole kennel has been turned loose wich instructions to howl at Hendricks, and so it will continue until the day of election.

Morton is said to have paid out of the corruption fund which he brought to this State and controls, $50,000, for the purpose of getting up an opposition straight out ticket, and by that means work his defeat.

Thomas A. Hendricks stands preeminent as a statesman and a christian gentleman. He commands the unqualified respect of the people of the whole nation. Yet a man like O. P. Morton, whose character is a stench in the nostrils of decent people, has pursued Mr. Hendricks over the State like an infuriated fiend for the purpose of defeating him.

Democrats and Liberals! we call upon you to rally to the polsl on the 8th of October, and vindicate a pure man from the attacks of the infamous Morton and his followers. Elect Hendricks triumphantly in October and the November battle will be won.

Liberal Republicans.

The whole administration press has teemed with abuse of Liberal Republicans from the day of the Cincinnati Convention until now. 'Soreheads,' 'Bolters,' 'Dupes,' 'Ku-Klux,' and every conceivable epithet calculated to wound and insult, has been hurled in their faces. The leading men of the nation—Greeley, Sumner, Schurz, Trumbull, Fenton, Tipton, Palmer, Koerner, Cassius M. Clay, Galusha A. Grow, Julian, Moorhead, Blair, of Michigan—and hundreds of others, the purest and best men of the Republican party—have been caricatured, vilified slandered, maligned and insulted, until people blushed over the conduct of the Grant press.

Now, then, let our liberal friends stand by the Liberal State and county tickets at the October election. Vindicate Cravens, Osborn, Harper and Bowen, and at the November election the Liberal Democrats will stand by Greeley and Reconciliation, and vindicate him from the lies and slanders and all the assaults of the Grant Press and the unprincipled and corrupt demagogues.

Democrats and Liberal Republicans arouse for action, and victory is sure for you.

Victory Rests With you!

Democrats and Liberals of Indiana:—Victory is within your grasp

Will you seize it?

Will you labor as you should to win it?

The prospect of carrying both Indiana and Pennsylvania, at the October election could not be better, and our friends in Ohio are more than sanguine of redeeming the old Buckeye State.

Arouse, and prepare for action—for the greatest political battle that has ever been fought since governments were organized—a battle of right against might—of the people against their oppressors—a battle for constitutional government against those who disregard the constitution and the laws of the land, and who are aiming to establish a centralized power.

Arouse from your lethargy!

Awake to the reality of the situation.

Devote at least ten days to the cause of your country.

Brave men—Democrats and liberal Republicans! Buckle on your armor! Let us make unitedly one grand struggle for civil liberty for honesty, and for reform! All the chances are in our favor; we must succeed if we do our duty.

Mr Greeley has acquired a reputation in this campaign, or rather has developed an aptitude, as a public speaker which few supposed he possessed.—As a man ready on all occasions to talk, and to talk well, he has no superiors and few equals in the country.—He can deliver one day an agricultural address in Indiana County Penn., the next make a political speech in Pittsburg, and the third make an address before the great Mechanical and Manufactoring Exposition in Cincinnati.—He is equally at home in any department of intellectual effort.

Brick Pomeroy's Democrat is now gratuitously circulated by Grant's collar-men as an electioneering document. To what base uses we come and how strangely the bedfellows these days accommodate themselves.

In Indiana, says the Cincinnati Enquire, there is being waged this year, a political contest that is unexampled, in the history of elections in that State so distinguished for fierce political convultions. It is in a large degree a contest between the forces of corruption, and imperial power and those of honesty and fair dealing. That morally rotten monster Morton, sits upon his throne at Indianapolis, and draws upon the Administration at Washington, means without stent to bribe and corrupt the voters. Never before were such quantities of money known to be employed in an election in a single State. There is no doubt but that the sum runs into millions of dollars. How that money is obtained we can easily conjecture, for back of Morton is the Treasury of the United States. It is probable the tens of millions of dollars in different States that have been taken from it that causes the discrepancies in the Secretary's report to the extent of millions in regard to the amount of the debt of the country. The whole relience of Morton and other desperate Grant managers rest upon the money and the frauds it may produce in the elections. When such exertions are made by a party to retain power as we see going on in Indiana, it should greatly stimulate the efforts of all honest men to prevent that result. We believe it will. Despite all of Morton's money we have not the slightest doubt that the corruptionists, will be scattered and overwhelmed in the election. and that both Mr. Hendricks and Mr. Greeley. will be successful by large majorities in October and November.

TURN OUT!

Edgerton Declines,

Saturday's New York World contained the following authentic statement.

Letters have been recieved from Indiana conveying the news that pools were sold at Indianapolis on Monday last at two to one that Hendricks would recieve 5,000 majority, and afterwards greater odds were offered but no takers. Another importent fact connected with Indiana politics is that A. P. Edgerton who was nominated on the 19th by the Straight-outers against Hendricks is at present in this city, and temporarily stopping at the St. Nicholas Hotel. He expressly repudiates all connection to the movement, and says that under no considerations wil he premit his name to be used, but, on the contrary he intends not only to vote for Mr. Hendricks, but will do every thing in his power to insure his election. This dodge of nominating Mr. Edgerton was Mortons last card, and it signally fails by the gentleman's prompt declination.

Two or three of the other nominees of Mercan's convention heavy also declined.

The Credit Mobilier Scandal Again.

Colonel McComb, whose sworn testimony, lately made public, implicated certain leading Senators and Representatives, in Congress, in a case of shameful bribery, has been interviewed, and makes the following astounding statement viz: That he can 'produce a letter not yet printed or proffered in the testimony' which would 'make the present unfortunate disclosure seconda ry only.'

That is, that he can if necessary, produce a letter which he withheld from his testimony before the Commissioner of the Court, that for the magnitude of its scandall of Senators and Members of Congress, for the acceptance of bribes would throw into the shade the scandal, already made public.

He says that the letter which he can produce would "extend the area of implication, anddraw in other names, of persons not suspected of collusion in any gainful matter." That is piling on the agony of humiliation every right-minded citizen must have endured at the disclosure first made public, and which implicated leading public men into bribery—recieving pay for their votes. The first list was bad enough. Let us restate it:

Blaine of Maine	3,000
Patterson of New Hamshire	3,000
Wilson of Massachusetts	2,000
Painter, (Rep) for Quigley	3,000
S. Colfax, Speaker	2,000
Scofield, and Kelley, of Penn.	4,000
Eliot of Massachusetts	3,000
Dawes of Massachusetts	2,000
Fowler of Tennessee	2,000
Boutwell of Massachusetts	2,000
Bingham and Garfield of O	4,000

To the above the withheld letter of Colonel McComb states would add other names of persons not suspected of collusion in any gainful matter. Who are they? That don't mean John Sherman, nor Logan, nor Morton nor Orth, for they are suspected. Who then are they?

The Cincinnati Gazette is one of its honest moods—it gets into such once in a while—in an article depricating the way Senatorial candidates manipulate Republican legislative bodies, said, not long ago.

"And then what can be expected of legislators who sell their votes for money or patronage? By the latter the Senate of the United States is now controlled, and hence the corruption for which that body has became noted. The most profligate scheme pass the Senate without serious difficulty, and Members can hold their seats unquestioned whose characters are notoriously disreputable.

Few citizens then thought that such Senators as Wilson and Patterson, and such Representatives as Colfax, Boutwell and Garfield had been contributing to corrupt the Legislative Department of the Government, and make it a common scandal on account of its rottenness.

How long is this to last? Have the people no longer any sense of manhood, pride or duty? And they dead to all memories of the past, and all hopes of the future? Must the American Republic become the shame of history for its rottenness and corruption and the indifference of the citizen to his country's dishonor? When is reform and honest government to be commenced?

Vote for Hendricks if you are in favor of honesty and reform.

Curtin to the Front.

[From the New York Tribune.]

The determination of the liberals to disregard party preference in their nominations has nowhere been more significantly expressed than in Pennsylvania. Their nomination of Andrew G. Curtin, "The Soldiers' Friend," as Delegate-at-Large to the Constitutional Convention, is just such an illustration of that spirit as we might expect.

It is a choice of great wisdom and its acceptance by Ex-Governor Curtin must be an assurance of the success of the ticket. Nowhere has the tyranny and corruption of this Administration been more severely felt than in Pennsylvania; and to no man in that State could the eyes of the people be more readily turned for relief and comfort than to Andrew G. Curtin, the blameless patriot and gratefully-remembered War Governor.

With Buckalew at the State ticket and Curtin leading the delegates to the Constitutional Convention, the Liberals have completed a list of nominations which will command the respect of the whole country, and will never know defeat. "Andy Curtin," as the Pennsylvanians love to call their favorite Governor, is a tower of strength to any party; all of the embassies which have gone over the seas to beg and implore his adhesion to the Grant combination, have returned emptyhanded. He could natually go nowhere else than the Libral camp.

The address of the Pennsylvania Liberals, which is signed by some of the best names in Pennsylvania politics, is a stirring document—Taken with the nomination of Curtin, it alarms the souls of the Grant leaders. Even The Press, a devoted Grant organ, which publishes the document in full is compelled to say that the selection of Curtin by the Liberals aggravates the misfortunes of the Republicans; and that the Liberal Address is signed by men of the Republican party can not afford to loose. Its brief biographical sketches of the signers of the address are like lamentations over lost riches. If we needed any testimony to the dignity and strength of the Liberal movement in Pennsylvania, we should find it in the comments of the Press, the editor of which knows the men to whose value he so reluctantly testifies.

And now, citizens of "the State prayer-founded!" you have the tickets and the men that make them, before you. On one side stand foremost Simon Cameron and J. F. Hartranft; on the other Charles R. Buckalew and Andrew G. Curtin. Choose ye now whom you will honor and trust.

A Happy State.

Maine is one of the best States in the Union for the exercise of the political virtues that shine with so much splendor under the Grant Administration. For example: Frenchman's Bay, a Customhouse District, records the following transaction for one year

Entire imports	$398
Entire exports	000

Such heavy transactions must of course, need an immense number of officials to see that they are properly performed, and an ample pay-roll to satisfy the parties for their laborious services. Yet we have the following insignificant showing.

	Salary.
N. K. Sawyer, Collector	$1,310 10
Moses Hale, Special Deputy	1,200 00
D. P Mareyes, Deputy	730 00
John U. Hill, Deputy	600 00
H. D Coombs, Deputy	600 00
Samuel Dutton, Jr.	600 00
W. B. Peters, Inspector	1,095 00
S. A. Holden, Inspector	500 00
S. M. McFarland	300 00
Total	$ 6,935 10

And Main continues happy under Grant!

The sudden, and, we may say, the shocking death of General William Harrow will be read with painful interest by the people of Indiana, without distinction of party, for he had served the State and his country honorbly and gallantly, both as a soldier. General Harrow was a candidate for Elector on the Greeley and Brown ticket, and on his way from New Albany to Jeffersonville to fill an appointment for public speaking, riding in a caboose on the railroad, the car was thrown off the track, caused by a broken rail. General Harrow was thrown out of the car and then the car on him receiving injuries from which he died in a few hours. General Harrow lived in Mont Vernon, Posey county, and he was a lawyer of fine practice. The warm hearted, impulsive and genial qualities of the deceased made him a pleasant companion and attached to him many devoted friends.

Liberals and Democrats, remember that there is less than a week's work previous to the State election. Keep the ball rolling as it has been going for the past few weeks, and we shall be able to announce to you on the morning of the 9th of October the cheering news of a glorious Liberal and Democratic victory.

OFFICIAL PAPER of the COUNTY

Local and Miscellaneous.

WHEAT is nearly all up and looks nice and green.

THE days and nights are now of about equal length.

NEARLY all vegetables are beyond the reach of frost.

Packages of 12 ounces may now be sent through the mails for the moderate sum of six cents.

THE Odd Fellows building looks discourageing.

THERE is some talk of an amateur minstrel troupe.

Many of our friends sympathize with the Odd Fellows in their great loss.

FROST, Jack Frost, has come. How perceptibly short the days are growing.

Everybody come to Auburn, next Friday.

Davenport & Co., have got into their new store room

Remember that Smith & Hare have a large stock of groceries.

THE Ranier hotel changed hands last Tuesday.

Now is the time to can your peaches.

DRY cordwood pretty scarce in this place.

Peaches are very scarce in this market just at present.

Go to Butler next Monday and hear Senator Trumbull.

F. D. RYAN, Esq., has added a fine span of bay horses to his livery.

Go to Smith & Hare's for a good article in the grocery line.

A large force at work cleaning away the rubbish, to build the O. F. hall again.

Hon, JOHN R. COFFROTH, addressed a large meeting at Spencerville last Thurrday.

The steam saw mill, of Messrs. Hollipeter & Clark has been repaired, and the log yard arranged in a convenient manner.

The dance on last Tuesday evening was largely attended, and all seemed to enjoy it.

We hope the 'rooster' that stole two knives from this office, will slip and cut his finger with one, and cut his toe off with the other. Time.

Several new hands have been to work on the new brick block, and it is expected to be ready for the plaster in about twenty days.

REMEMBER the Grand Rally here next Friday. Three eminent speakers will be present, and we want to see a large crowd in attendance.

M. V. B. SPENCER,

of Fort Wayne, will speak at Franklin Center, Friday evening, Oct. 4, 1872. Let everybody turn out.

Capt. CHARLES HERTIG, will address the Germans one mile north of Sedan to-night, Thursday evening, in English and German.

Meeting at Jackson Center.

M. L. Graff, Esq., and Dr. Metcalf, of Fort Wayne will address the people at Jackson Center, next Friday evening, October 4th.

Let everybody give a few days to the good of their country by coming out to hear the various speakers announced, to speak in our county before election. Come out and hear the truth.

We would suggest to the brethern of the Press that the next session of our editorial association be held at Laporte, say, Thursday Nov. 14th. This will bring it the next week after the election which we think desirable. What say the brethern of the Press.

POSTPONED.

The appointment for Hon. John B. Stoll at Butler is withdrawn owing to his being at Wabash next Saturday night.—When he promised us to be present he did not know of this Wabash appointment, but as the State Committee have appointed him there he must go. Perhaps he will be at Butler next Monday.

Farmers are interested in advertisement headed Durhams for Sale.

Come to Auburn next Friday without fail.

Pinchin and Peterson and Pulubus held a camp meeting in Stafford last week, and went through their usual role of misrepresenting. It is represented as being a sick affair, as one would naturally judge from the speakers in attendance.

Peterson says we charged $25 for Sheriff's Proclamation We have not got that for along. Wait until our Bill is presented. He, however, so we learn, actually tried to get a poor woman in this town to deed her property to him as a fee for little professional services! How's that for economy?

JNO. L. DAVIS, has the right for this county to manufacture a new patent top for chimneys, obviating all the annoyance from these pesky things on windy and other days. It is the best thing out, and will effectually cure these refactory institutions.

WILL H. KERNAN, Esq. lately the accomplished city editor, of the Fort Wayne Sentinel, has accepted a similar position on the Indianapolis Sentinel. With as good a paper as the Sentinel and as spicy and clever a writer as Mr. K. it ought to have numerous friends in every locality.

GEN. CARTER,

speaks to-night (Wednesday) at Waterloo Mr. Carter spoke at Laporte, last Monday and being present we pronounce him the finest sperker we have yet heard. Mr Carter is from Lousiana, and enters largely into the condition of things in the south Let all turn out, for he abuses no one, and deals fairly in everything.

We called upon our friend Wadsworth of the Argus, while in Laporte last Monday, and found him still the same genial clever and accomplished gentleman, full of good sense and sound judgement. We thank him for special favors.

We also gave Messrs. Powell and Major, of the Herald a brief call. They are the best of fellows, accomplished and dignified in their business relations, and such as we would like to have for our neighbors.

THE Press says that Mr. Shutt went to the mountains for safety when the war broke out. The editor of the Press, it seems, cannot even write a short item without basing it upon falsehood. It fact unless he has a lie to work on he can't work at all. Mr. Shutt left this county for the west in 1859, before the prospect of a war. The same paper states that he made a "stake" of $100,000. If the editor it so certain of the correctness of this figure he had better go down to Spencerville and see where this money, brought from a distance, is invested. The people down there will tell him whether most of his "great wealth" is invested outside of the county.

For a specimen of Tammany advertising, see the Sheriff's election proclamation in the COURIER. The printer has spread it over almost an entire column. Other counties get along by paying for about one fourth as much space.—Press.

We happened to be at Laporte this week and found that the Herald, Republican, put it the same space we did. But we don't propose to charge them with making out 'Tammany bills' until they do it. Now the Press is quite virtuous in pretensions, let's see what it has done.

In June '71, an advertisement of 'Notice to Trustee," 2½ squares, the Press charges $6.25 while COURIER only presents a 'Tammany bill' $4 50. How does it do for a thief to hollow stop thief? You ought to be ashamed of yourselves.

COUNTY FINANCES,

When Auditor McIntyre succeeded Auditor Griswold, Republican, there was a debt of $10,001 04 hanging over the county. During the first year this was reduced, as the report of Auditor for June 1st, '71 will show, to 3,305 06. From 1871 to 1872 there was paid in interest on county orders issued during Republican rule, 8,000-00. The debt of 1872, as reported by the Auditor, was $1,269 09

By examination of the figures we find that the County debt has been reduced.

In 1871	$6,635 95
In 1872	10,095 37
Total in 2 years	16,731 35

How do our tax-payeas like that? And yet a few scalawags will prowl around over the county and prate about finances, when they really know nothing about them. Let an honest examination of the records be made and all will be convinced that we have an honest county administration.

At Corunna.

MR. EDITOR:

The Grant meeting at Corunna, on last Saturday evening proved to be rather a drive on the Tanners, of Waterloo. Early in the day it was announced that Messrs. Baxter, Leckhart, Morlan, Renoehl, Peterson, Best and others would discuss the political issues of the campaign. The Grantites were indeed aroused. About ten in number, posted themselves on the Railroad bridge, patiently awaiting the arrival of the speakers, who in due time made their appearance, with torches in hand, all told fifteen in number. At about nine o'clock the great gun from Fairfield called the meeting to order, and Mr. Lockhart was introduced, who at once took the stand, and delivered, with pride, a poem out of Greeley's History of the War, occasionally refering to Baxter for information. Next was Mr. Best, who made quite an interesting speech, charging the Democratic party with the extravagance of President Johnson's Administration, the income tax, etc., appealing to the audience whether they did not remember the time when F. Willis was after them every other day for license money, etc. Next came the Fairfield orator reading some letters written to himself, or some one else, touching the personal character of parties in Waterloo. Upon the whole the meeting was a fair represcntation of the Grant meetings all over the county, a failure.

GRAND Rally!

THE GREAT STATESMAN!

The Champion of Right!

THE HON.

LYMAN TRUMBULL

Of Illinois, and

V. B. DENSLOW!

The best Speaker in the Campaign will Positively be at

BUTLER, IND.

On Monday

OCTOBER 7th, 1872.

Owing to the fact that Judge Trumbull desires to leave for Chicago on the 2 o'clock train, everybody should be present as early as possible so as to commence the speaking in good time Say 12 o'clock, noon.

Mr. Trumbull made the best speech of the season at Laporte, last Monday, and every voter in DeKalb County and adjoining counties should be present. Let us show this champion of right and justice that his efforts are appreciated by the people. Circulate the news, then, that Senator Trumbull will be at Butler, next Monday.

Democrats of DeKalb County.

Can the Democrats of DeKalb County afford to jeopardise the success of the State ticket? Can you afford to risk the chances of having O. P. Morton misrepresent your State and every principle of honest manhood in the United States Senate another six years? Can you afford to have our noble State give its voice in favor of the doctrine of hate and disunion, proclaimed by Morton and his imitators? Can you afford to render a verdict in favor of his base charges against your chosen and time honored leader, Thomas A. Hendricks, whom he called a political dead-beat from every stump in Indiana? Can you afford to swallow all the base charges made by him against you as Democrats? If you cannot, then prove your manhood and integrity by defeating these slanders at the ballot box on the 8th of Oct. next. Remember there are Democrats enough in the State, and have been for years to carry the State, in an honest, fair election—vindicate this and yourselvss at the polls on Tuesday next. Democrats to the rescue, fill the breach with your incorruptible ballots; let the voice of Indiana be heard in tones that cannot be misunderstood—in favor of the great principles of peace and reconciliation.

Liberal Republicans.

We hold the balance of power in the State of Indiana—our action on Tuesday next determine the weal or woe of the great movement we inaugerated at Cincinnati in May 1st. The hopes of the county are in your hands. our great leader trusts to our activity and industry to rescue by our verdict at the polls, the unparalelled cause. How are we to do this? I answer in one way only and that is to vote for Thomas A. Hendricks and the ballance of the State ticket, in no other way can we vindicate ourselves. The path of duty is plain shall we prove ourselves equal to our professions and meet the expectation of our friends. Our former political associates pour out the vitals of wrath upon our heads. They have no respect for any who differ from them, and hence are entitled to no respect themselves. They deny that we are honest in purpose, and hence have no right to claim or be respected as honest themselves. Every vote we give their candidate, will be counted throughout the country as a vote for Gen Grant. Don't hesitate what course to pursue, the path of duty, and justice lies one way—the opposite one leads to failure and disgrace—this one to honor and victory.

LIB. REP.

Great Calaminty!

The Boast of Auburn in Ruins!

Total Demolition of the New Odd Fellows' Hall!

ENSLEY'S BLOCK SERIOUSLY DAMAGED.

A DISASTROUS STORM.

The beautiful temple of Friendship, Love and Truth, the Odd Fellows' Hall, which had been brought under so many difficulties to a point almost of completion, as far as the outward edifice is concerned, and which had began to be looked upon as the most interesting feature of our town, from its beauty and elegance is now but a heap of rubbish. Last Saturday night, a terrible gale sprung up from the south-west and came down upon the building, whose wall, was now ready for the roof, and succumbing to the fury of the tempest fell to the ground with a great crash, completely demolishing all the timbers and woodwork, and damaging the M. E. Church on the east to the extent of several hundred dollars. This occurred between three and four o'clock Sunday morning. The scene in the morning was most gloomy and desolate. For several rods on either side great heaps of broken stone, brick and crushed timbers lay in profusion, little of which indicated that it could be used again.

The middle walls of Ensley's block, were also badly damaged especially the one next the Hall. Had this block been completed one story higher, the other building would have been saved, but the brick work has been tardily prosecuted and the result is the dread calminity.

The M. E. Church on the east is badly damaged the whole of the west side being forced in by the crushing weight of the wall, there being nothing left of the windows, sash, shutters, &c. Our Methodist friends have been at great expense in getting this edifice in good shape, and repairing the parsonage, so, that they can but illy meet this great loss and it will be to the credit of all to lend them a helping hand.

This leaves the Lodge of Odd Fellows' in this place worse than bankrupt. They had gathered together every means, both by contributions from their own membership and by borrowing, to create a fund to erect this fine building, and without this great calamnity would have had to financier excellently well to have kept their heads above water, but now they have gone down, and unless the brethern throughout the State come to their relief they perish as a lodge.

We desire to say in this connection, although they will not approve of us doing so, that when the news of the Chicago's great calamnity reached them, the appeal for relief was not unheeded. We doubt whether it ever has been coming from that source.

There are a large number of lodges in this State and a small sum donated from each would be but a recognition of the great principles of Friendship, Love and Truth, which hold this great army of humanity in one common brotherhood. No appeal is necessary. A simple and truthful statement of their condition can not fail to bring a prompt and tangible response from all who may be so informed.

DEBATE AT NEW ERA.

H. C. Peterson and J. D. Leighty challenged S. S. Shutt and D. D. Moody to a joint discussion at New Era, which took place last Saturday night. When the meeting was called to order, Peterson proposed a violation of the arrangement, and wanted Hoffman to take Leighty's place, as Leighty could not make a speech After some words this point was conceded to them. Mr. Moody then asked that Mr. Peterson open the debate. To this he demurred and claimed that he would not concede a single point. The prospects now were that there would be no debate, and had it not been for the magnanimity of Mr. Shutt, this would have been the result. This gentlemen then stated that he had already conceded one point to them, and requested that Mr. Peterson open the debate. No, sir, he was not there to be brow beat, and showed conclusively that he had not one speck of manliness about him. Finally Mr. Shutt told them that as a large crowd had been gathered together he would not disappoint them and told the opposite party that they could have everything they wanted, which was loudly applauded. Mr. Hoffman opened the debate. You know Hoffman? Bunkerhill Hoffman, we mean. You could have seen him in all his glory in one of the best spread, buzzard declamations you ever saw. They were not there for argument but for oratory, and he gave it to them until everybody was chuch full, and himself pumped so dry that he had hard work to fill his time. 45 minutes.

Mr. Shutt followed and knocked his opponent's, Bunkerhill, oratory into a cocked hat, and presented his arguments in a masterly, in a fair, candid and honest manner, decidedly the best speech of the evening.

Mr Peterson, attorney at law, and the great Grant leader in this place, then assumed a position which he graces about as well as a rooster on an out-house. Of all the frivilous, twaddle, egotistical balderdash, and incorrect statements we ever heard, was most unelegantly, and uncrupulously gushed forth by this champion office seeker. He seemed to appreciate his standing with his party, and like Uriah Heep, he was very humble, and seemed ready to lick the ground in obedience to commands. A more contemptible effort could not be imagined. In the start he showed a want of generosity, but in his speech, brains was about the only thing that was lacking. No wonder he don't like Horace Greeley, because Greeley is a man of generous impulses and brains, two things necessary to appreciate the great philosopher.

Mr. Moody followed by saying, that he thought the buzzard would represent the last orator, especially in its peculiar characteristic of pouncing down upon putrid carcasses, foul with stench and corruption and there feasting to its hearts content.—Mr. Moody brought proof from the ablest men in the Republican party, to show up the corruptions and rottenness of the Grant administration sufficient to convince the most doubting. Mr. Peterson stated here as he has in several other places in the county, that we have charged $25 dollars for the election notice in another column. If he can show that we have charged such a price against the county, we will surrender the point. It is a lie maliciously circulated to help them in their hour of need. But truth is mighty and will prevail. As Peterson does not possess any of the latter commodity, he will find himself somewhat Petered out at the election. Our friends should go to work and defeat a ticket, by a large majority, that will place such unscrupulous men thereon. Charging us with an offence we have not committed. He says our rates require that price, and on this he asserts that we have charged the county to such an extent. They are compelled to anticipate fraud, on our side, but say nothing about the great fraud that has been perpetrated upon the county while they were in power. Of such is the Grant party. We have never made a charge against the county more than a fair, reasonable compensation, and we don't expect to. We charge DeKalb Co like we do an individual and we believe our citizens do not object to paying a fair and reasonable price. They will please wait until we make such a charge as they claim before they peddle it over the county, through their boss donkey.

The Finance Question.

Rev. W. W. Curry who desires to be the Hon. Secretary of State, proclaims that the only issue in this campaign is a financial one, and that the Republican party is the only one capable of dealing with two such questions because it contains all the financirl brains of the country. He asserts also that the old Democratic party was noted for its want of financial ability in the past, and that it maintains the same position now also that that portion of the Republican party now cooperating with it is in the same proverty stricken condition. To prove his assertion in regard to the Democratic party he contrasts certain Democratic and Republican counties in the State, and affirms that it invariably costs more to run the Democratic than the Republican counties, and that Democratic counties are more heavily taxed that Republican.—Among those cited was the Democratic county of Allen, and the Republican county of Wayne, had to test the truthfulness of his assertion we have made a few comparisons, between the same. In the year of 1866 as shown by the report of the Auditor of State, Allen county was taxed, for county purposes, the sum of $108,376,-32; Wayne county was taxed the same year, for the same purpose $148,530.47, an excess of over $41,000.000 paid by Wayne county over Allen. Again contrast Allen with Tippecanoe which is a strong Republican county of about an averge population and valuation, and we find as before Allen county tax $108,376,34 while Tippecanoe for the same year is taxed $250,454,50, exceeding Allen county by over $1 2,000,00, or more than double the amount of tax paid in one year by a Republican county than by a Democratic.—We have made comparisons between the same counties in other years and find as a result, that the Republican counties above named have been more heavily taxed than the Democratic county of Allen. So the proof fails and the baseless assumptions of the Rev. gentleman falls to the ground—Desperate must be the cause, indeed, that could induce a minister to make figures tell such stories. He claims also that there is more integrity in the Republican party than in the Democratic party. Let us see: The people of DeKalb county were so unfortunate a few years ago as to have their treasury robbed of about $20,000, 00 while it was under the control and watchful care of a brigadier Republican. Whether it was a misfortune to the treaserer or not, time will show—certainly it was to the people, for though he is no doubt legally liable, the money has not been forthcoming, and when suit was brought against him and his Republican bondsman they exemplified their integrity by resorting to every quibble and technicality of law to escape liability, and so far have been successful. If there is any good reason why bondsmen should not be liable for the default of their principal why go through the useless form of taking a bond at all, if they do intend to be bound according to its condition. Why not stand by their bond and pay it like honest men? Certainly the people of DeKalb county can understand what the Radical idea of financial ability and integrity means when they are called upon to pay out of their hard earnings for the defalcation of a defaulting Radical county treasurer. If they are honest let them pay into the treasury the $20,000,00 stolen from the people, and until they do this, let them stop talking about honesty and financial ability, unless they mean that ability that robs the people of their money, and than honesty, that refuses to pay their bond.

MARRIAGES.

PICKER—JONES—At Corunna on Sunday evening, Sept. 28th, 1862, by Rev. B. J. Kissel, Mr. G. H. Picker and Miss. Lucy Jones.

George has our thanks for his remembrance of the printer. May the happy pair find pleasure and enjoyment throughout the days of a long and contented life, with numerous little P.'s to gladden the threshold of a happy and joyous home

DEATHS.

HARE—Winnie Bell, daughter of C. S. and Emma E. Hare, died Sept. 30th, 1872, aged three years 11 months and 16 days.

The day is ended, ere I sink to sleep,
My weary spirit seeks repose in thine
Father, forgive my footsteps and keep
This little life of mine.

With loving kindness curtain thou my bed
And cool in rest my burning pilgrim feet,
Thy pardon be the pillow for my head
So shall my sleep be sweet.

At peace with all the world dear lord and Thee
No fears my soul's unwavering faith can shake
All's well whichever side the grave for me
The morning light may break.

The parents of the deceased desire through this medium to return thanks to the citizens for their kindness and assistance during her sickness. Also to the Physicians for their earnest efforts to save Winnie.

SPOONER—Infant daughter of Mary and Jeared Spooner, aged 4 months and 8 days,

Dear little Blanchie
Gone from our home,
Gone up to heaven
Where flowers forever bloom.

Dear little Blanchie
Gone like a flower,
That bloomed and faded
In one short hour.

Four short months God spared her
To gladden our heart,
But now he has taken her
Where friends never part.

SADIE A. MUNTZ.

SHEFFER—On Sept. 25th, 1872, Milton E. Sheffer, son of John and Martha Sheffer, died of flux. Aged 10 months and 12 days.

Yes, it is well with the child
As the angel came down and smiled,
And whispers this world is too sinful for thee
Come to heaven and live with me.

CAMPBELL—Butler, Ind., Sept. 27th, 1872, after an illness of 5 days, Arvilla Blanche, Daughter of J. A. and M. A. Campbell, aged 2 years and 13 days.

Durhams for Sale!

The undersigned offers at private sale, Fifteen through-bred Durham Bulls; twelve of which are calves, two yearlings, and one two year old. The sire of all is my Duke of Wabash county, and he was sired by Duncan's Duke of Airdre: his dam, Louan 7th, which Mr. Jeremiah Duncan, of Paris, Bourbon County, Ky., told me was the best milker he ever owned, and had been breeding Durhams for Forty Years. A full sister to my Duke Louan 19th was sold at Duncan's sale for $1,275. Several of Duncan's Louan's were purchased by McMillen, of Xen'a' O., and were re-sold at McMillen's great sale at the following prices. $475, $600, 3,000 $1,750, $2,625, $1,650, the lower priced ones being old ones, one being over 30 years. Some of my cows, the dams of stock offered, are Louans and Fashions bred by Mr. Duncan, of Ky. Some are of the Duchess milker family, which are excellent milkers.

I propose showing a sample of my stock at the Wabash and Huntington county fair and shall take pleasure in showing them to all who call on me at home, near Liberty Mills, Wabash county, Ind.

What Causes Hard Times.

Too many spend money and too few earn it.

Too much money is spent wastfully and [illegible] and too little saved and made productive and accumulative by those who need it.

We buy too much abroad that we ought to produce at home.

We buy too much that we cannot and do not pay for cash down—too much of what we buy being what we do not actually need.

We [illegible] wasteful, know too little how to [illegible] and have too little disposition to [illegible].

We are too speculative, unscrupulous and actually dishonest in our efforts to make money.

Too many of us prefer idleness to industry, and too few of us know how to work and derive pleasure and profit from our labor.

We spend too much time learning what is not useful, and too little informing ourselves upon the best methods of promoting our material prosperity.

We know too much of politics, spend too much time and money as politicians, and know too little about political economy and the science of a stable and economical, successful public policy.

Our actions are governed too much by passion, prejudice and partisan feeling, and not enough by a broad, intelligent, liberal and patriotic conception of the duties which American citizenship involves.

We are too superficial and impatient, and lack the clear purpose and persistent, patient application necessary to permanent success.

We depend too much upon our 'sharpness,' and rediness to take advantage of circumstances, and not enough upon earnest, honest labor.

We talk and read too much and think and act too little.

We spread ourselves over too great a surface and thus fail to dig deep enough in one place for the nuggets that will surely enrich us.

We lack in that higher morality which frowns down venality and elevates and encourages purity of life, probity of conduct and a scrupulous regard for a good and honorable name.

We do not teach our children that they must, nor how to, earn their own living, and are too willing to commit them to a life of easy unscrupulousness, depending on their skill as make-shifts rather than upon their solid acquirements as men and women.

We roll about like stones that gather no moss, enriching carrying corporations and speculating capitalists, and defrauding ourselves of the substantial profits of our own industry.

We are devotees of show rather than substance, and pay homage to the glitter of a 'success' which is but a rope covering filth, rottenness and corruption, social commercial and political.

We build too many churches and cultivate the Christain virtues and spirit too little; we have too many schools and too few real teachers; we have too many false theories and too few true ones; we are too undivided in certain directions and not enough so in others. We adhere too closely to what we ought to depart from, and refuse to take hold of that to which we ought to cling.

In short, we are too much what we ought not, and not enough what we ought to be!

Frand Dowley, of Tipton, Ind., while riding on top of a freight car, near Kokomo, the other day, was struck by the timber of a bridge and fatally injured.

The farmers of Alabama plough through about four feet of caterpillars before they reach the earth. These Southern farmers always were shiftless; a moderate smart Yankee would raise his crops on top of the caterpillars and have gunano.

A singularly painful circumstance attends the death of a Monroe gentleman, which occurred last week. Last winter he made an agreement with his wife to the effect that should she kindle the fire mornings for six months he would do it for the same length of time. She had just completed her part of the contract when he died. It is a very sad affair.

A most important bit of news, not however surprising to our readers, is that the Internationals have decided to move headquarters to New York. We would respectfully suggest the lease of the Moffatt mansion, for the sake of the local atmosphere History seems likely to be repeated in that quarter.

There [illegible] fields for enjoyable blackguarding on the interesting political question as to how ——— would have voted if he had'nt died. Certain of our exchanges are very much exercised as to how Mr. Lincoln's vote would have been cast in the present emergency. As soon as that is satisfactorily decided we may expect a discussion on the late G. Washington, and his predecessor, Adam. But that question is in for a long run.

A Horse Case.

Down in Maine the intercourse between Judges and witnesses seems now and then to be of that pleasant colloquial sort that might be emulated with advantage elsewhere.

Judge T—, for example, who held a late term of the Supreme Court at Saco, besides being learned in matters legal, is also an excellent judge of horse-flesh. On the trial of a horse case, one of the parties who was a witness, Grace by name, not being so clear in his testimony as the Judge though desirable, was asked by him to describe the animal more minutely.

Why, Judge, all you Saco fellers know that air hoss. 'Twas the Bill Littlefield hoss that [illegible] used to drive, was the minute, clear, and ready reply, in a patronizing tone.

Saco feller on the bench smiled audibly till the Sheriff 'fellow' called Order in the Court.

'Mein Gott, mein Gott! and dey say we plondered dem!!!'

Smith and Jones were at the menagerie and the conversation turned on Darwin's theory.

Look at that monkey, said Smith; and think of its being an undeveloped human, sir!

Human, said Jones, contemptuously; Its no more human than I am.

Our Tea Trade is continually on the increase. We now sell two or three chests a day. Our large purchases of two hundred chests at a time direct from the importers, is the reason we can undersell all others, as there is no intermediate profits of the jobber, speculator and wholesale house to eat it up. Our Teas go direct into the consumers' hands, at a small profit. No charge for trying any quality.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which everyone should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey and a little care taken in examination of routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R." running from Chicago, through Galesburg to Burlington, and the "I., B. & W. Route," running from Indianapolis, through Bloomington to Burlington, have achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading passenger routes to the west. At Burlington they connect with the B. & M. R. R. and from the great Burlington route, which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories and passenger starting from DeKalb county, on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the Burlington route.

All who wish particular information, and a large map, showing correctly the Great West, and all its railroad connections, can obtain them, and any other knowledge, by addressing General Passenger Agent B & M. R. R. R., Burlington, Iowa.

W. W. WORTHINGTON, Supt.

Time is Passing.

Time is running in his Chariot,
Rapidly his wheels go 'round;
Though they leave no dust behind them,
Though they leave no rumbling sound,
Swiftly they bear us onward,
Soon our journey will be o'er,
Soon our feet will press the meadows
Of the vast eternal shore.

Flying months and years remind us
Of the world we are passing to;
Let us leave the good behind us,
In this world we're passing through,
Which shall be the seeds of kindness,
Watered by celestial dew,
And shall bear good fruit for others—
Fruits of joy, and peace and love—
Years long after we are sleeping
In the [illegible] land above.
Men are born and men are dying,
Thousands came, not one to stay;
Time is swift, his wheels are flying,
Never ceasing, night or day,
For the laughter, nor the crying,
For the stricken, or the gay
Gushing down the God-defying—
They who laugh at death's delay—
And for sorrow, sin, and sighing,
Bearing gentle souls away.

Plans and schemes of men and nations,
Hearts and homes and homesteads free,
Granite walls and art's creations,
All the eye delights to see,
All the ear delights in hearing—
Crumble, tumble, fall and fade,
Oh! we need a world more cheering,
Free from grave and cypress shade;
Thanks to God! that world we're nearing,
In the eternal sapphires laid.

The Five Pound Note.

BY HELEN E. THORNTON.

My dear, what do you think, said the wife of the Rev. Mr. Vivian, almost in tears, Jane, whom we thought so much of is a thief!

Impossible, my love, was the husbands answer.

It seems incredible, I know, replied Mrs Vivian, excitedly. But there is no doubt of it!

No doubt of it!

Yes. You remember giving me, as usual, the marriage fee after Lord and Lady Howard's wedding, don't you?

Yes, he nodded.

Well, my dear, I was tired and sleepy, for we came home very late, and instead of locking up the money as I ought to have done, I pinned it, by one corner, to the pin cushion on my table. Yesterday morning, when I came to look for it, it was gone. I have searched everywhere, but cannot find it. Now nobody had been in the room but ourselves and Jane.

By this time Mr. Vivian himself began to look almost as serious as his wife.

You are sure, he said, that nobody else has been in the chamber?

Why, my dear, Jane is the only servant who ever does go there No burglar could get in.

You have looked everywhere. Through all my drawers, in the pocket of the dress I wore, on the floor, under the bed, in every possible place. Jane had been doing her chamber work as usual, while we were at breakfast, and is the only person who could have stolen it.

Have you spoken to Jane yet?

No. I thought I had better consult you first. Had'nt we better have her trunk searched secretly? If we let her know she is suspected, she will find some way to hide the note.

I am glad you have not spoken to her. It is no little matter to take away a girl's character.

But the proof, my dear.

The proof looks strong, but is not conclusive. Suppose that after discharging Jane, and so destroying her character, you should discover some day that she was innocent. I think I will take a look at the room myself.

It's realy a wast of time, my dear, I have looked everywhere. Still, hesitatingly, it is but right to give the poor girl every chance.

An hour's search only confirmed Mrs Vivian's story. The note was nowhere to be found. Mr. Vivian had been so thorough in his examination, that he had even looked under the lining of his wife's dress.

Sometimes, he said, money slips out of a pocket, and gets between the lining and the silk. I know of a case where a diamond ring was lost in that way for several weeks

But no note was concealed beneath the lining. Mr. Vivian desisted at last.

I cannot believe it, he said. I will not give up my faith in Jane.

But who else could have done it? I would not believe it, either. Let us go up stairs and search her room. She is busy in the kitchen, and will not know it at all.

No, my dear If we search her room it is due to her to tell her first of our intention. Let us do nothing under-handed.

Then shall I call her?

I suppose there is nothing else to be done, said Mrs. Vivian, wearily, but as if he only half assented to the proposition.

Mrs. Vivian moved towards the door but before she had reached it her husband started to his feet.

Stop! he said I have it.

His face lightened up.

I have it, he said. My dear, have you never seen mice about? They generally infest every house.

Mrs. Vivian laughed. Why my dear are you crazy? Mice don't eat bank notes.

But have you ever seen mice in this room?

I have heard them at night occasionally but I have never seen them. But what can they have to do with the money?

I am certain now. I have searched everywhere in any event; but now I feel sure the mice have done it. Don't look so incredulous, my dear. A mouse would'nt eat a bank-note; she would rather have a piece of cheese; but she might think the note would make a very nice nest for her little ones. We must have the carpet taken up.

Oh, Mr. Vivian, what you mean? Take up the carpet and have the room cleaned again, and everthing turned upside down, and—

But dear, I will begin at the most likely place by the hearth, say. I will take out the tacks myself, and very carefully: there shall be no dust made, I assure you. Perhaps we shall not have to look very far.

Mrs Vivian knew, when her husband spoke in this mild yet decided manner, that there was nothing to do but to yield gracefully. She went therefore to the closet, and brought out a hammer. Mr. Vivian, clergyman as he was, did not disdain to get on his hands and knees and began to draw the tacks. He had loosened the carpet for about a yard; he cried suddenly, Ah, here is a mouse hole, at any rate.

Mrs. Vivian by this time began to catch the infection of his excitement. She leaned over him breathlessly.

I will feel down this hole said her husband. The handle of the hammer is thin and this iron at the end will catch the note if it is there. He, there's a rustle gentle now. Bless my soul, if this isn't the very note.

Sure enough there it was. A bank of England five pound. A bit of one corner was gone about a quarter of an inch, but otherwise the note was perfect.

Mrs. Vivian burst into tears.

To think, she said, at last, that I was so near discharging Jane unjustly. I never again will believe my own eyes.

My dear, answered Mr. Vivian, we were both to blame. We ought to have had more faith in Jane. It will teach, I hope, never to be hasty in forming opinions. Especially should be careful not to condemn others without, at least, more ample evidence.

How to Keep Cool.

Stew around as much as you can before breakfast. Find fault with you wife. Upbraid the help, and jaw the children.

Don't permit yourself to be suited with the morning meal.

If you ride down town in the street car, fret all you can because it chances to be crowded. If you walk, see if you can't beat the car down town.

On reaching your place of business, fume around because some trifling thing hasn't been attended to.

Make it warm as you can for your partner, and he will probably reciprocate by making it warm for you.

Run out every half hour and get a drink.

Along about the middle of the day run around after delinquent creditors; the worse cases the better.

Swear a little.

Growl about the heat.

Take another drink.

Work yourself into a lather trying to get a full day's work out of your workmen.

Wipe your face vigorously with your pocket-handkerchief every two or three minutes.

Get into a dispute on politics

Write dunning letters.

Drop around to the gas office and dispute your gas bill.

Go home to a cold dinner and have your wife make it hot.

Keep up a quarrel with all your neighbors.

Hope, growl, swear and drink until bed time, and spend the night fighting musquitoes to save the expense of a musquito bar.

If by following the above rules faithfully you are unable to keep cool, your' case is hopeless.

The Original Crow Eater.

Old Tompkins was a farmer in the mountain region, who during the summer turned his house into a hotel for the accomodation of city people seeking refuge from the heat and dust. On one occasion the old fellow's boarders found fault with the food.

You city folks are mighty particular, said the old chap. Now, for my part, I can eat anything.

Can you eat crow? demanded one of the grumblers.

Of course I kin, replied Tompkins—jist as lief as not—most anything. 'Taint bad eating nohow.

The boarders conspired, a crow was shot, plucked and prepared for the table. While it was being cooked one of the conspirators obtained access to the kitchen, and contrived to base the bird with a copious dressing of Scotch snuff.

The game was served up, and all hands assembled to see the old man carry out his boast. Knife and fork in hand he seated himself, boldly carved a morsel and thrust it between his capacious jaws. A small tear gathered in each eye, and a subdued titter ran around the expectant crowd, but the old man was game.

Crow, of course I kin eat crow, said Mr Tompkins, and with a gulp the dainty morsel disappeared. Another bit was raised—a smaller one this time—and passed slowly into his mouth. The titter became more audible.

Crow, said the old man with a gasp, sartin I kin eat crow, and half choked another morsel down.

The laughing grew more decided. Crow, exclaimed the old man, rising in disgust and thrusting his plate away, I kin eat crow, but I'm blamed if I hanker arter it!

Does not Daniel Kitch claim a monopoly for supplying the county poor farm with hay, potatoes, &c., instead of letting the same to the lowest bidder?

DE WITT CLINTON.

An Account of his Duel with John Swartwout.

If you wish to know what manner of the young man De Witt Clinton was, you have only to read the official report of the duel which he fought in 1802, with John Swartwout, at Weehawken. Clinton was then opposing Aaron Burr, and Swartwout accused him of being actuated in his opposition only by personal and selfish motives.

He is a liar, a scoundrel, and a villian, exclaimed Clinton.

A challenge followed and the duel was fought. I suppose that it was the most remarkable affair of the kind that ever occurred—out of Ireland. The first fire doing no harm to either antagonist, one of the seconds asked Swartwout:

Are you satisfied sir?

I am not, said he, with more bluntness than courtesy.

They fired a second time without any effect

Are you satisfied, sir? asked the second.

No! thundered Swartwout.

The men fired the third time, without effect, when the same gentleman again politely asked Mr. Swartwout if he was satisfied.

I am not, was the reply; neither shall be until that apology is made which I have demanded. Until then, sir, I must proceed.

Swartwout's second then presented a paper containing the apology demanded, for Clinton's signature, saying:

We can not spend our time in conversation; this paper must be signed or proceed.

I will not sign any paper on the subject, said Clinton, with firmness and dignity, I have no animosity against Mr. S. I will willingly shake hands and agree to meet on the score of former friendship.

The fourth fire then took place, when Clinton's ball struck his obstinate antagonist in the left leg below the knee.

Are you satisfied, sir? the wounded man was again asked.

Standing firmly at his post, he answered and said: It is useless to repeat. My determination is fixed, and I beg we may proceed.

While the surgeon was extracting the ball from the side of Mr. Swartwout's leg Clinton again declared he had no animosity against Swartwout, and that he was sorry for what had passed, and he was ready to go forward, shake hands and bury the circumstances in oblivion. Swartwout, however, standing erect at his place insisted upon the written apology. A 5th time was fired, and Clinton's ball struck his antagonist in the same leg, a little below the former wound.

Are you satisfied, sir? asked the second.

I am not, sir! replied Swartwout, proceed.

Clinton then left his station, threw down his pistol, and declared that he would not fight any more.

Whereupon Swartwout, turning to his second asked what he should do; when he replied:

There is nothing further for you now, but to have your wounds dressed.

So the combat ended, and both parties returned in their barges to the city.

Such was Clinton at thirty-three when he had already been a member of the Legislature, and was about to enter the Senate of the United States. He was brave to rashness, and ambitious beyond measure; but he lived up to the standard of his day, and acquitted himself of every trust with honor and distinction.

Eight Children at a Birth.

On the 21st of August, Mrs. Timothy Bredlee, of Trumbull county, Ohio, gave birth to eight children, three boys and five girls. They are all living and are healthy but quite small Mr. Bradlee was married six years ago to Eunice Mowery, who weighed two hundred and seventy-three pounds on the day of her marriage. She has given birth to two pair of twins and now eight more, making twelve children in six years. Mrs. Bradlee was a triplet, her mother and father both being twins and her grandmother the mother of five pair of twins.

Care of Horses' Feet.

Few men who handle horses give proper attention to their feet and legs. Especially is this the case on farms. Much time is spent of a morning in rubbing, brushing and smothing the hair on the sides and hips, but at no time are the feet examined and properly cared for. Now be it known that the feet of a horse require more care than the body. They need ten times as much, for in one respect they are almost the entire horse. All the grooming that can be done won't avail anything if the horse is forced to stand where his feet be filthy. In this case the feet will become disordered, and then the legs will get badly out of fix; and with bad feet and bad legs there is not much else of the horse fit for anything. Stable prisons generally are legs of horses, and unless these buildings can afford a dry room, where a horse can walk around, lie down, or roll over, they are not half so healthy and comfortable to the horse as the pasture, and that should be avoided by all good hostlers in the country.

The Grantites concede the election of Hendricks and the State ticket, but hope to elect a majority in the Legislature. Friends in close or doubtful legislative districts, look out for imported votes and other election frauds.

A youthful warrior—A baby in arms.

The Widow's Wager.

Widow Deane sat at the front window of her little parlor one morning, busy with some kind of fancy work which showed off her plump well shaped hands with the wedding ring sparkling on the left one, to the best advantage.—She was a very pretty widow, and no one was better acquainted with the fact than she was. Her snug fitting dress set off as plump and trim a figure as any in Downsborough and no where in the whole neighborhood could you find a brighter pair of brown eyes, or a more kissable charming face. I wonder why young widows are so charming? No matter how plain they are before their husbands "go the way of all flesh," straightway after that event takes place and they come out in black dresses and the other etceteras of a mourning toilet, they are voted so pretty! It is strange that such should be the case, but it seems to be the effect which widow hood has on them.

Widow Deane heard steps coming down the road, and leaned out to see who was going by, just as a man came opposite her gate.

"Is that you Mr. Fields?" she called out cherrily. Good-morning; pleasant weather isn't it after the shower last night?

"Beautiful," stammered Mr. Fields, blushing up as delightfully as a woman could have done and appearing as awkward as an over grown schoolboy, on his first morning at school.

"Won't you come in?" asked the widow, smiling very sweetly as she brushed back her curls which would presist in falling about her rosy face in the most charmgng confusion as she leaned out of the window.

"I—I can't this morning," stammered Mr. Fields. "I'd like to—," with a look of admiration into the widows pretty face, "but I'm rather in a hurry you see."

"Come in this evening then, urged the widow, "can't you? It's real lonesome. I wish you would now really Mr. Fields,"

"I—I will,' answered Mr. Fields.—"I'll bring my chess-board and men along, if you've no objections. Mrs. Deane."

"I should be delighted to have you," answered the widow, smilingly, I'm sure I can beat you."

"I shouldn't wonder," answered Mr. Fields. "I—I'm no match for women,' he added with a very rosy face, and wondering how he was ever so bold enough to say it.

"Oh you naughty man! exclaimed the widow. 'I shall beat you just to pay for that! See if I don't."

"I dare say," responded Mr. Fields as he bowed good morning. "What a charming creature she is," he thought as he passed on. I'd be perfectly happy if she was Mrs. Fields." Here he blushed at the thought of any woman's being Mrs. Fields. "I do believe she loves me but I wouldn't dare to ask her for anything. Every time I think of such a thing my heart thumps just like a trip-hammer against my ribs. I—I wish the women had there rights Then they would have to do their share of popping the question and the like. What if Marthy Jones or Miss Spooner or some of them old maids should take it into their heads to ask a fellow to have them? Of course they would! Good gracious! I'd never dare to tell them no! and I'd sooner be in the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico, than to have any of them.

Mr. Fields broke out in a cold prespitatson all over at the bare idea of such a thing.

"What a funny man!" said the pretty little widow to herself with a soft little laugh, as Mr. Fields went on down the road. I'm sure he'd like to ask me to be Mrs. Feilds, if he dared but he hasn't spunk enough. How he does blush when I look at him! I came near laughing in his face he looked so confused. I like him ever so much and I don't think I'd answered him, no, if he'd asked me a certain question but I don't believe he'd muster up courage enough so ask it. I don't see why he should be so bashful! I'm sure I'm not at all dignified, and distant.

The widow looked more charming than ever when she sat in the parlor waiting for Mr. Fields that evening she had on a neat brown dress of just the precise shade to show off her clear complexion, and the little knot of blue ribbon at her throat was the least bit coquettish in its appearence. Her curls were tied up with a ribbon of the same pretty color, and the white rosebud which she fastened over her pink ear made her look as youthful as she did the day she married Archie Deane six years before. She sighed softly as she looked at the plain wedding ring on her finger. Archie had been dead three years and over.

A step on the path announced that some one was coming. Pretty soon some one knocked. She went to the door and admitted Mr. Fields.

'I thought it was you,' she said taking his hat. "Take that easy chair Mr. Fields. I'm ever so glad you come over, I got so lonesome,' and a little sigh gave emphasis to the words.

Mr. Fields sighed too. He got lonesome sometimes in his bachelor quarters—but he wouldn't dare to say so for the world, with the widow's bright eyes looking him full in the face.

The widow sat down and chatted away in her lively fashion. Mr. Fields kept watching her, when he could do so without her seeing him. Once she looked up suddenly and caught his eyes fixed on her face, and then he turned as red as the tea roses in the window, and just the faintest tinge of carnation came into her face. It made her look ever so much prettier, Mr. Fields thought. He almost wished she'd look up again and catch him watching her, if she'd blush that way. Innocent man he never dreamed that the widow was as well aware of his admiring glances as he was.

"Oh! our game of chess," cried the widow, suddenly, "I came near forgetting all about it. Did you bring your men and board, Mr. Fields?"

"I put them on the center table,' answered Mr. Fields.

The widow fluttered about and got the chess board and men, and drew her chair up opposite Mr. Fields.

"I promised to beat you she said arranging the board on a little stand between them. "I'm going to do so if I possibly can Mr. Fields,' with an arch glance into his face. Mr. Fields happened to be admiring her brown curls as she looked up, and the fact that she detected him in the act so disconcerted him that he knocked over the chess men she had arranged and then he had to help her set them up again and their hands came in contact on the board; somehow the touch of the widows plump white hand made him thrill all over with a delightful sensation and he wondered if the accidental touch of her fingers affected him so delightfully, what it must be to hold that hand in his? Poor Mr. Fields! He was very deeply in love but he didn't dare to say so.

At length the board was arranged, and they were ready to open the game.

"Oh!" cried the widow suddenly.—"Wouldn't it be nice to have a wager? It would make the game so much more interesting! Don't you think so Mr. Fields?"

Mr. Fields didn't know but it would.

I'll tell you what said the widow, blushing like a guilty flower pink, and looking every bit as sweet, Mr. Fields thought; "I read a story not long ago of two persons playing on a wager, and the stake was a kiss! Now I'll kiss you if you beat and if I beat you shall kiss me! Isn't that fair?"

"Yes," stammered Mr. Fields, but,—but I'm afraid you'll beat.'

"Why then you'll have to kiss me—that's all," laughed the widow, "If you beat I'd just as lief kiss you as not. As likely as not you'll beat!"

"Well, I—I'll take the wager,' said Mr. Fields, in desperation.

And so the game commenced. If ever he played to win it was then.—There was something very facinating about kissing the widow; but he didn't believe he could muster up courage enough to do so, if he won the game. He much prefered that she should kiss him. He could stand it to be kissed with considerable fortitude, but to kiss was rather more than he could think of with composure. He never had kissed a woman that he could remember and he was sure that he would make some awful mistakes if he tried to. But from the first the game went against him. His pawns were captured right and left, and then his bishops were taken from him. Then his king got in check and he had to sacrifice his queen to get him out, and then by one masterly move the widow planted a knight directly in front of his king's block, and left him in check with her castle, and cried out, "Checkmate!" her eyes sparkling with mischief

Something that was almost a groan broke from Mr. Field's lips. How was he ever going to pay his wager? It made him shiver to think of it

"I'm waiting for you to pay your debts,' said the widow smiling bewitchingly into the bachelor's face.

"I—I wish I'd won the game," stammered Mr. Fields bursting out in a cold sweat.

'Why then I'd have had to kiss you' said the widow coquetishly,

"I—I know that cried Mr. Fields, That's why I wish I'd got the game!

'What a selfish man!' laughed the widow. "I didn't think you was so selfish, Mr. Fields, upon my word I didn't!"

"I—I ain't selfish," cried the poor man, driven to desperation, "but—but I dassent!"

"What an excuse!" cried the widow "I wont accept it. You don't want to kiss me. That's the reason! but I'm going to insist on your paying your debts like a man Mr. Fields. I should like to know why you are afraid of me. I know better! You'll have to get up some other excuse before I let you off. I wouldn't have been afraid to kiss you if you'd won the game, I'm sure.'

"I—I wish you'd kiss me and call it square!" said Mr. Fields feeling that he was being cornered pretty closely.

'I would if it wasn't for encouraging you in your selfishness, answered the widow with an arch smile into her face which set the blood tingling clear to his toes, and made him feel almost bold enough to pay his wager.

I'll dare you!" cried the bachelor—"if you'll kiss me, I—I'll kiss you!"

"Done!" cried the widow and kissed Mr. Fields plump on the mouth before he could say Jack Robinson! "Now you can't back out,' cried she as rosy as the pinks in the garden again.

"I—I won't!" cried Mr. Fields and caught her and kissed her on the cherry lips. And then suddenly grown bold and courageous, he kissed her three or four times for interest, I suppose on the debt he had contracted, and somehow every kiss seemed to give him additional courage, for before he left her he managed to squeeze her hand in a decidedly lover like way and the widow didn't seem to object, but rather returned the gentle pressure.

After that there was a little silence,—but for some reason Mr. Fields wasn't so bashful as he had been. He began to think it was best to follow up the advantage he gained over his timidity, and so he by and by, after a good deal of self encouragement to do the deed, managed to scare up bravery enough to kiss the widow again, and she didn't seem at all put out about it he thought. And then—Mr Fields couldn't tell how for the life of him—he actually asked the widow to be Mrs. Fields. He felt great wonder, after the deed was done how he ever got bold enough to ask a woman to marry him, and she did not answer him no!

I rather think the widow did her full share in making the proposal; but since they are as happy as two turtle doves it dosen't make much difference who furnished the necessary courage to ask the important question. He isn't as bashful as he used to be. The widow, or rather Mrs Fields is curing him of that.

Josh Billings on Oats.

All you have to do to raise oats is to plow the land deep, then manure it well, then sprinkle the oats all over the ground, one in a place, then worry up the ground with a drag all over, then set up nites to keep the chickins and woodchucks out of them, then kradle them with a cradle, then rake them together with a rake, then bind them with a band then stack them with a stack, then thrash them with a flail, then clean them with a mill, then sharpen both ends of them with a knife, then stow them away in a granery, then spend wet days and Sundays trapping for rats and mice, It ain't nothing but play to raise oats—try it.

A Fool for Luck.

John the fool of the New York Sun, was made rich in spite of himself at Long Branch, and this is the way it was done:

"Just as I was the hungriest, Longfellow and Harry Bassett were brought out and they went around the corner like two Colt's revolvers. All the nice young men around men stood up and bowed and scraped and held up one finger as if they were stopping an omnibus. They all yelled; "A hundred to eighty on Harry Bassett." They all appeard to be so very polite, then I held up my finger too, and I smiled bowed back to all of them. I never saw such a polite lot of young men before You would have thought I was the Grand Duke Alexes. I kept up the bowing just as long as they did, and pretty soon the race was over, and I confess I was agreeably surprised to see about four hundred young men file up and each one chuck a $100 bill into my lap. Then I thought that lot of young men just about the nicest lot of yobng men I had ever met. There I sat with $40,000 in my lap, and, much to my astonishment, I found out that all the time I was pointing my finger and bowing back to 'em, darned if I wasn't taking every darned bet that was made, and durned if I know it. I only had eight dollars in my pocket, and if I had lost I'd slept in an oyster bed that night sure"

Something About Yourself.

Supposing your age to be fifteen years or thereabouts, I can figure you up to a dot. You have 160 bones and 500 muscles; your blood weighs 25 pounds; your heart is five inches in length and the three inches in diameter it beats 70 times a minute, 4,200 times per hour, 100,800 times per day, and 26,725,200 per year. At each beat a little over two ounces of blood is thrown out of it; and each day it receives and discharges over seven tons of that wonder full fluid. Your lungs will contain a gallon of air, and you inhale 24,000 gallons a day. The aggregate surface of the air cells of your lungs, supposing them to be spread out, exceed 20,000 square inches. The weight of your brain is three pounds; when you are a man it will weigh about eight ounces more. Your nerves exceeded 10,000,000 in number.

Your skin is composed of three layers, and varies from one-fourth to one-eighth of an inch in thickness. The area of your skin is about 1,700 square inches, and you are subjected to an atmospheric presure of fifteen pounds to the square inch. Each square inch of your skin contains 3,500 sweating tubes, or prespiratory pores, each of which may be likened to a drain tile one-fourth of an inch long, making the aggregate length of the entire surface of your body of 201,366 feet or a tile ditch for draining the body almost forty miles long.

Grant's Speech at Philadelphia.

"Gentlemen and Merchants of Philadelphia. You have heard much better speeches to-night than I could make were I so inclined. I am very glad to see you, and am pleased to hear that you have been to hear such fine speeches, and how you have been engaged to night."

Mr Greeley's trip through Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Indiana, has been a perfect ovation. Crowds meet him at all the stations, and greet the future President with hearty cheers. His frequent speeches are judicious and have the happiest effect.

State Election.

[illegible] have indicate that things have gone pretty much all over the country. The news from Pennsylvania is good—for Republicans, Hartranft being elected by only about 35,000 [illegible], we thought Buckalew would win on the same figures.

Ohio has not kicked out of the traces any, but gives her usual Western Reserve Majorities.

Indiana is close, so close that we can feel the effect of the election without the least difficulty. Both sides claim their Governor as elected. It is rumored that Voorhees and Niblack are defeated for Congress, and Neff Democrat of the ninth district elected. The Legislature is reported Republican by a small majority.

"And flowers to wither at the north wind's breath,
"And stars to set, and all thou hast all seasons
"For thine own, Oh, death!"

Of this we are reminded as the yellow leaf loosened from the twig falls to the ground fit emblem of morality. Around us we see the sad ravages of autumn's sickle, and wherever we look, winter's grim visage is thrust upon our vision. Summer, happy, joyous summer has gone and with it "many a throng of happy dreams." Its hours have been harbingers of peace and plenty; they have brought to us sorrow, perhaps, but we have forgotten our grief, and beautiful like the golden hues of a rainbow has driven away the dark clouds of our sadness. On its wings our deeds are laden, and be they good or bad they can never haunt us only by their remembrance. If we have wasted past hours, we may make amends by faithfully improving the future, and dealing with its moments so that we will not be again chastened with regret.

Some very scrupulous people with enlarged ideas, may feel disposed to look upon Mrs. Fair, as a good kind of a woman for society in general, but speaking for ourselves we now publicly express the opinion, that California law is a farce.—Enquirer.

GENERAL GRANT.

His Well Known Temperance Proclivities.

[From the Washington Capital.]

It is a question upon which many seem to be exercised, whether General Grant drinks; whether the President of the United States tipples; whether the Chief Magistrate of this Republic ever gets tight—indulges in a superfluity of exciting potables and loses himself under their influence. We suppose not. It is questionable whether the personage in question ever took a drop of intoxicating liquor in his life. Stories do get about wonderfully. The world is strangely given to defamation. There are people so base and heartless as to affirm that the Hon. Henry Wilson was a Know-Nothing; but Henry has vindicated himself nobly—nobly—and somebody feels streaked about it. We have no doubt that 50,000 persons of the highest respectability, holding offices of trust and profit in the United States—or wanting to hold them—would make a solemn affidavit that they never saw General Grant drunk in their lives. For a moderate compensation, we agree to find fifty orthodox clergyman in regular standing for forty years, who would depose that General Grant has all his life been a teetotaler, hopeful, pious, and a paying member of a Christian church; that he prays in his family daily, and brings up his household in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

General Grant has for a long period been subjected to fits, which infirmity has been the cause of much reproach and misconstruction. He was severely afflicted in that way in the army, so much so that it was thought best to dispose of his Captaincy. They followed him to his retirement near St. Louis, where they interfered seriously with his pursuit of the wood and watermelon trade, in which he embarked; and at Galena, where, the same effect [illegible] on the hide and leather business, to which his energies were devoted. He was, it has been said, severely affected in the same way on the 6th day of April, 1862, at a place called Shiloh, where about one o'clock in the afternoon, he was compelled to retire on board the steamer Tigress for rest and recuperation.

It is surprising how this notion that General Grant is a hard drinker has got abroad and deceived mankind. Wendell Philips was a victim to this [illegible] in the Anti-Slavery Standard, of January 1, 1869, he said "New rumors reach us from Washington, coming from different and trustworthy sources, that General Grant has been [illegible] drunk in the streets of that city within a few weeks." Now Wendell is better informed. He sees that it was only a recurrence of the old malady—fits. Ex-President Johnson was misled in the same way. He said that Grant had been in his room at the White House "so drunk that he could not stand straight on his legs." Theodore Tilton, not knowing the General's idiosyncrasy, saw him walking along the streets one Sunday, coming from church—at least while others were coming—and pronounced him "fuddled." And Susan B. Anthony, in the Revolution said "General Grant is drunk half the time, and has been seen steadying himself in another's arms on Pennsylvania avenue," but as Susan now goes for Grant, it is probable that she has had the matter explained. Some suppose that these fits are wearing off; that they do not occur as frequently as they did once [illegible]. It is to be hoped that such is the case. People who are thus affected, however, we are told, at length come to know when they are coming on, and go to bed until they are over, which is a serious advantage.

We say these things from a sense of justice to the President. In this city, where he is thoroughly known, it would be very unsafe for the publisher of a newspaper to suggest that General Grant was addicted to any thing stronger than weak tea and mild lemonade. It would be a great misfortune to the country to have a Chief Magistrate in the habit of getting tight, and it gives pleasure to remark that, so far as we are informed, the President is as loose in his habits as his most zealous supporters could desire.

We are aware how tender the conscience of the Republican party is upon the subject of beverages. We remember very distinctly how, after the great shock, as to his constitution which the late President Buchanan received at the beginning of term, it came to be noised about that he did now and then himself with drinks stronger than water; and we remember how horrified the conductors of the Republican press and the tenants of the Republican party were at the circumstance. The public dangers from a drunken President was enlarged upon with an unction and an amplification that was highly creditable—giving assurance that, under no circumstances whatever, could the Republican party be brought to support a man who indulged in tonics of any discription.

The constitutional diathesis of the late President Johnson was a little like that of his successor; it may be that fits run with Presidential qualifications. But he was unfortunate in having no one, like ourselves to give the true explanation. How—especially after he broke with the Republican party—the conscientious journals and orators of that party did pounce upon him! The picture they drew of the perils of a drunken Chief Magistrate were heart-rending. If we should say such things of General Grant we do not know what would happen. Happily we comprehend the case, and it rejoices us to be able to explain it to the rest of mankind.

We feel that we can speak positively upon the subject. If General Grant were a drunkard, the Republican party would not support him. It is a great party, a virtuous party, a conscientious party, an honest and honorable party, a temperant and continent party, a pious party. The idea that is would support a man addicted to rioting and drunkingenness, or to chambering and wantonness, is preposterous. Its members all lead pious and holy lives, and their candidates are all pure and immaculate. It stands to reason.

PENDLETON'S FIRST SPEECH.

I thank you for this friendly reception. I know how far to appreciate it as a personal compliment, and how far I ought to attribute it to the cause in which we are all engaged. I am so often and so greatly indebted to my friends and neighbors for personal kindness, that I can never repay the obligation. I must hope that the simple "I thank you" will convey all the feelings of my heart.

It is wonderful what effect absence from home produces on the mind and on the heart. Three thousand miles of intervening ocean, makes us love our [illegible] whole country better, and feel a closer relationship to all our countrymen. They seem to abate the bitterness of strife, and make us feel that all our people are actuated by a patriotic spirit, however widely they may differ in methods. In this spirit I would speak to you to-night. I would not willingly do injustice to General Grant or his Cabinet, or his adherents. Many of them I know; some of them I admire. All of them I would treat with that consideration which fair dealing and honest discussion demand. When I speak of him or them, I intend rather to speak of the tendency and significance of their opinions and the system of administration which they approve and enforce than of their personal characteristics and particular actions.

When I left home in June this Liberal movement seemed to have just commenced. To borrow the figures of another it was then the easy movement and gentle whisper of a coming tide in a calm sea. To-day it is the dashing surf and deep toned roar of an incoming ocean.

What does this mean? Why this liberal movement? Why have Republicans left the organization which they built up and loved? Why are Democrats—not isolated men—but the party with all its pursursive authority of its recommendation and all the power of its discipline supporting Horace Greeley. Surely there is striking reasons for this wonderful phenomenon.

I have read the speeches of Horace Greeley on his Western trip. I read carefully also the speeches made at Cincinnati on Saturday. They were from the leading men of the Republican party. They were brought here to follow Mr. Greeley, to counteract the influence of his visit, and if possible to destroy both by comparison, and contrast, the force of his speeches Cabinet officers and Military generals and civil generals were present. The highest in rank, the highest in their own estimation the highest in the estimation of their party, were there.—Mr. Delano General Butler, and Governor Hawley, were put forward to present the best shape, the best phase, of the policy of the Republican party and its effect upon the country.

They have a double and perplexing office to preform. They must at once and at the same time laud the popularity, and power and success of the party to win your sympathy and admiration and show that it has failed in its work—fallen short of its promises—and must be continued in power in order to accomplish it.

Strip these speeches of their verbiage and what are they? I condense them. They tell us the Republican party has had the entire confidence of the people; it has been in power twelve years, of war! years of peace! They tell us the rebels were conquered by force of arms in battle; the Democrats sympathized with the rebels and were conquered by ballots at the polls; it has had absolute power in the Federal and in the State Government; in Congress it had two thirds majority; in the Presidency it has had the men of its choice, in the Judiciary it has found or it has made a majority of the Judges. Seven years have elapsed since the war. Seven years of peace. Seven years of Republicanism. Seven years of absolute party ascendency. Four years of General Grant's Presidency. This has been its opportunity. Behold its works.

Fellow citizens what has been accomplished? What claim to public gratitude? What title to longer power.

Read these speeches farther.

We promised you peace but there is no peace. We promised you concord but there is no concord. We promised you a more perfect Union, but there is no hearty Union. We promised you freedom throughout the land but there can be no freedom; there must be persecution; there must be disfranchisement; the South is still rebelious; the habeas corpus must be suspended; the elections must be supervised; the reconstructed governments must be sustained; the whites are disloyal and must be subjected; the negroes are loyal and must be put over them.

This is their own testimony. Yes, gentlemen, after twelve years of power, after seven years of peace, this is their testimony of their own success—this is their claim as they themselves state it to a renewal of power. And they are right. This is their claim—their only claim. They state it properly and fully. They have exercised absolute power—President Congress, Judiciary; they have done their best. And they have so far beggared the people of the South so far exasperated the races so far despoiled the owners of property and the children of industry, so far upturned the foundation of civil order and prosperous labor, that they need the power of war, the presence of an army, the suspension of habeas corpus, disfranchisement of the strong, proscription of the timid, to carry one single State of the South; and to justify themselves in your eyes, and obtain your support, they do not hesitate to invoke the bitterness of hate, and to influence the passions and animosities of flagrant war.

Read these speeches for yourselves. This is their interpretation; their philosophy; no man can deny it.

Read them more closely. They furnish incontestable proof that this Administration has done more than all others to degrade the public service, and to debauch the public morals.

The President has recieved money and houses and other presents of large value, from aspirants for public offices, and has appointed those same men to office. I do not say that he done it corruptly. I only say that he has done it.

The President has appointed his family and relations to high offices to an extent without parallel in our history. I do not say because they were his relatives, but I do say they had no other visible qualification.

The President has surrounded himself with a ring of military secretaries—without law, and in violation of law—and sycophantic adherents, whose influence in appointments and jobs has been a scandal and a by word.

The President has treated his high office as if it had been created, and ought to be administered for his own personal benefit, the rewards of his merits, or his industry, and that neither his political advertisers nor the people at large have any interest in it.

The legitimate results of this conduct are apparent on every hand.

Corruption pervades every department of the Government. Defalcations are as common as the days. Neglect of duty is made universal by the example of the President. Absence from their posts is the rule amongst the highest officers.

The Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of the Interior the Postmaster-General the Attorney-General—five of the seven members of the Cabinet—are announced to take an active part in the pending canvass in Ohio. Every exertion of every employer of every office, is called into requisition to re-elect the President. The expenditures of every office are made with reference to the same result. Every slavery paid by the Government, from the money collected by taxation is made to contribute for this purpose. The work in the Navy yards; the contract for supplies; the mails of the country; the surplus millions in the Treasury, are used to the same end; and so universal is the demoralization that every officer is believed to be influenced in his exertion by the desire to retain office rather than by any other conviction of public duty or sentiment of personal fidelity.

I do not say that Mr. Delano nor Mr. Boutwell nor Mr. Cresswell, are not sincere in their opinions they express on the stump in Ohio, but I do say that if they expressed different opinions, or were silent they could not hold office an hour. They work for their chief. They hold his offices at the price of their personal allegiance. They are the tenants of his property, and the rent they pay is service in his re-election.

Our constitutional government is personal Government in its worst form and necessarily inevitable, follows centralization. By usurpation, by absorption, by open and shameless graspings, by secret and stealthy outstreachings, the Federal Government is drawning to itself all the power of the States and by that mysterious process, by which the power steals from the many, to the few, the President is drawing all power from Congress to himself.

I am no alarmist—I do not magnify the evil to myself—I would nor exaggerate it in speaking to you, but out of this seething mass of corruption, demoralization, trading in office, neglect of duty, personal government, military rings rises a figure shadowy and vague now, portentious of dire calamity.

Wise men of all parties have seen this state of affairs—good men of all parties fear it—candid men of all parties have admitted it.

It was this conviction of an all pervading corruption, and of its dangers, which startled the heart and conscience of the people and gave rise to the Cincinnati Convention. It is this conviction which has dwarfed antagonism, and softened asperities, and hushed even the voices of prejudices in the presence of the country's peril. It is this conviction which has dwarfed antagonism, and softened asperites, and hushed the voices even of prejudices, in the presence of th's country's peril. It is this conviction which underlies the wonderful combination of men of many minds and differing creeds, in this supreme struggle for reconciliation and purification.

The Convention met at Cincinnati. It was composed solely of Republicans—representative men, [illegible] ing in numbers, united in their purposes, divided as to men.

It declared as essential to the preservation of the republic, that there should be impartial suffrage, and universal amnesty, equal rights and equal protection to all classes and all races of our people, local government, limitations of executive power, the supremacy of the Constitution over martial law and military power.

It declared that the reconciliation of all our people purity of purpose, in public service, must proceed all other reforms, and are our supreme necessity, and waving all other questions it invited all who agreed on these to a hearty and zealous co-operation.

* * * * * *

Heroic, patriotic party! worthy its founders! [illegible] degenerated in the hands of their sons!! it has proven itself great in the triumphs of its wisdom and its power. Greater still in its unflinching constancy amid dangers and defeats, greatest of all when in this sublime self-abnegation of sacrificed every selfish aspiration, every human weakness, to the hope of averting calamity from our country I do not know that the effort will succeed, but it was an act worthy the faith of a martyr, worthy the courage of a devotee, worthy the favor of God.

Gentlemen, the significance of this mighty movement is—we have been told—reconciliation and purification. It is this and it is more. It is we have been told—a pure Administration constitutional legislation. It is this, and it is more. Its highest significance, its cheafest value is, that beneath the struggles of parties, and animating them, too there is in the American heart a love of country, a spirit of patriotism, which rises in the presence of the country peril, and speaks to stillness every aspiration except for its safety.

That spirit is abroad now; that spirit call and consolidates its force now; it appeals to you all Democrats and Republicans alike. While it appeals to your patriotism it promises safety to your material interests; to commerce, protection abroad and freedom from oppression at home, to manufactures, stability in legislation; to agriculture, exemtion from the weight of an unequaled taxation; to capital, freedom from gouvernmental interference, and subjection to the laws of trade; to labor, the free enjoyments of the results of its industry—and to all laborers, merchants, manufacturers capitalists, bankers, professional men, the rich rewards to be gathered in the field of industry throughout a reunited and peaceful county.

Local and Miscellaneous.

Fresh oysters are becoming plenty.

The Methodist church is being repaired.

Another dance is talked of about the first of next month.

The Corunna Greeley club was here on last Friday.

A large crowd from this place attended the rally, at Butler, last Monday.

A nice shirt is certainly desirable. Go and see the fine stock at Lauferty's.

Mr. Totte[illegible]'s store room is being repaired and will soon show a tasty appearance.

We delay our paper one day this week in order to give our readers the election news.

Mr. Roth is very busy this week hauling Mr. Lauferty's large stock of clothing from the depot.

Lauferty wants you to come in and see his all wool casimere suits for twelve dollars.

If you want a good hat or cap go and see the new stock brought on by Lauferty this week.

Go to Smith & Hare have got a large stock of groceries, which they are selling very cheap.

The best temperance lecture ever delivered in this place, was heard last Sunday evening, at the M. E. church.

The Ensly and Snyder block is being pushed forward rapidly and a few days more will see the brick work finished.

We were pleased to see the two Miss [illegible], from Corunna, last Friday afternoon. Come some more, girls.

Cold weather is coming on and you will be wise if you go to Lauferty's and buy a new suit of clothes for winter.

Next Saturday is observed by the Jews as a day of atonement, and in consequence Mr. Lauferty will close his store on that day.

The Principal will address the Auburn school, Friday Oct. 18, 'Blessing of Labor.' Friends and patrons are invited to be present.

Corn is excellent, potatoes first class crop, vegetables never better; who does not recognize the benefit of Horace's rule?

We have no other way to apologize for our small amount of reading matter, only that we had two tramp printers subing this week.

A team of horses caused considerable excitement in town last Friday, by running away. They were stopped before doing much damage.

The debris of the Odd Fellows' Hall calamity has been cleared away and if the necessary funds can be raised it will be built up again this fall.

A horse fell dead on our streets last [illegible] disease said to be the cause. [illegible] property of J. [illegible], who can handly afford to loose so good an animal.

Bill, the barber over John [illegible], has been unable to work for several days on account of a boil on his wrist. He's alright now, and will continue to do first-class work in his line.

The stone necessary for the paving of the gutter along Main street, opposite the Court House, have been delivered some time, but the work has not yet been commenced. Perhaps it is destined for a winter's job.

Work on the large brick hotel is going forward rapidly and ere many days Auburn can boast of the best hotel, in every particular, in this part of the State. Mr. Swi[illegible] the [illegible] is generally given credit for.

We wish Bill and Fattie would let us see the contents of that express package they got last Sunday morning. O, my! how good they did feel in about a half an hour after they received it. Your [illegible] boys, or else you would have divided with Mart.

When you go to Fort Wayne to buy clothing ask for one of our price lists before you purchase your goods, and get posted on prices and not be cheated by outsiders. No. 5 Keystone block.

Clothing.—S. Lauferty, [illegible] returned from the east is now receiving the advance shipments of that mammoth stock of ready made clothing, which he recently purchased, and is now ready to show up as nice styles in this line as you may want. The stock is large and fashionable, and all are invited to call and examine for themselves.

Now that the county election is over, everybody should get ready for the fair at Waterloo. The prospects are good for a fine exhibition of all articles and animals. Several fine horses will be there, among them one that makes his mile away down in the Twenties. Get ready and be ready to attend from first to last.

We have beaten Chicago at last. A prominent citizen of that burg, on a visit to our town yesterday, was astonished with the building enterprises going on here. "You beat the [illegible]" and out I said he. "There is occasionally an unobstructed block there, but your streets here are so crowded with brick, stone, lumber and trash that it is a wonder to me that the whole town don't break their necks tonight."

A party of 'youngsters' went to a neighboring town, the other Sunday, and while there a couple of ladies captured their bottle. They were very considerate, however, so much so that they left half of the contents remaining in the bottle, and last week returned it by express C. O. D. The boys requested us not to mention the ladies names until further investigation was had of the affair. "Naughty girls."

The positive cure of kidney, bladder and glandular diseases, mental and physical debility, diabetes, gravel and female irregularities, as well as complaints of the urino-genital organs in either sex, can be effected by the aid of Smolander's Buchu. It acts at once on the nervous system and is a diaphoretic, deobstruent, alterative, diuretic solvent and tonic. It excites general action of the dormant state of the system, and all the avenues of health are restored by its occasional use.

Red Front.—The drug store of Davenport & Co. having been removed to the corner building opposite the court house, Messrs. Martin & Sons now occupy the whole of the building, and as an improvement have painted the windows red to designate their popular establishment. They have consequently received a large invoice of groceries, hardware such as nails, glass, shelf hardware, willow-ware, baskets of all kinds, wooden ware, &c. They keep an assortment of everything in their line, and will sell cheap for cash. Call and see them.

Our County Ticket.—We have succeeded in electing our county ticket excepting Treasurer and Sheriff notwithstanding our Radical friends counted on 130 majority on their whole ticket. Taking advantage of the disaffection among Democrats, they tried every means to succeed. Morton gave orders to elect their candidate for Representative, but they failed badly.—Mr. Shu[illegible], our candidate, run ahead of his ticket. We are sorry to lose Kelly and Maxwell, but we know that they were beaten by their own party and not by the Radicals, although they will evidently claim it as a great victory.

There are many among us suffering from derangement of the Liver and Bowels, Fever and Ague, Bilious Fevers and diseases arising from a torpid or imperfect action of the Liver. To all such we would recommend the use of "Liver Stimulant and Cathartic," which is advertised in our columns. It has been used with wonderful success in sections where these diseases prevail, and we feel confident it will prove a blessing to many a household. As a medicine to be kept in the family, to be used in place of pills, it has no equal.

It is for sale by all our druggists and dealers in medicine.—Nashua Telegraph.

FAIR NEXT WEEK.

The first annual fair of the Northeastern Indiana Agricultural society will commence on next Tuesday at Waterloo, and continue four days. The prospects for a favorable opening are flattering, and it will only need the attendance that it merits to make it a grand success. The entries for exhibition will be greater than at first expected, and no pains will be spared to put everything in order. There will be some fine stock on the ground, and a number of horses from other States will be present. Let everybody make arrangements to attend, and thus encourage the good work. See premium list which can be had on application.

THE PRINCE OF HUMBUGS COMING.

P. T. Barnum's Last Sensation.

Saturday, Oct. 21st, will be an eventful day for Fort Wayne. P. T. Barnum's mammoth exposition, with the whole material universe and its bestowments, for its offerings, will come sweeping down like the great tidal wave now turning in favor of the Liberal cause which is manifest all over the country. Only think of 100,000 curiosities, 500 animals birds reptiles and marine monsters, 1,000 men and horses, a procession the like of which the world has never seen, 100 first-class artists, five colossal tents covering five acres and capable of holding 20,000 people; all transported by three massive trains of cars extending a full mile, and all this to be seen for only 50 cents. Free admission to all who buy Barnum's book. Did anybody ever hear of such a thing since the world began? No wonder people will go a hundred miles to see Barnum and his big show. We are positively assured by Mr Barnum himself that his gigantic exhibition will never divide under any circumstance whatever.

For Sale.

The handsome residence of Mrs. Mary Mott. The house contains thirteen rooms and is particularly desirable for a boarding house. The price is twenty seven hundred dollars. If not sold soon one half of the house will be to let. Inquire at the residence on Cedar street. 4t

To-morrow a grand party will be given at Hamilton, Ind.

A bower dance will be run during the fair next week, at Waterloo.

We take the following from the Ada, O., Record, as the expression of an opinion held by an outsider, who has been visiting our place:

Mr. Editor:—This is the county seat of DeKalb county, Indiana. For years it appeared to be in a state of decline in consequence of the failure of the Eel River Railroad, being completed some twenty years ago, while the neighboring towns Waterloo [illegible] the Southern [illegible] a change has taken place for the better that will make it one of the most thriving and pleasant places in that section of the State.

The location of the Ft. Wayne, Jackson and Saginaw Railroad through it and which has been in operation some two years, also the completion of the Detroit and Eel River Railroad to within a short distance, and the almost certainty of the Baltimore & Ohio extension to Chicago being located through it has given the town an impetus wholly unexpected to one who had not seen the place for the last six years.

It has now over twenty business stores five or more factories, including a scroll factory, conducted by Case & Mock, and a woolen factory by Gross & Co., consisting of twelve looms and two hundred and twenty spindles. I noticed that of the three dry goods stores, our Ada friends, Wood & Williams, were doing a thriving business in that line, although they have been there but a few months, knowing them to be men of good business tact and upright character they will without doubt do well.

There are in this place some ten or more Lawyers and Physicians, the latter I found to be gentlemen, fully up with the progress of Medical Science which cannot be said of this profession in every town of the age and population of this, without finding some of the old calomel and dover, castor oil and turpentine style of practice.

With regard to some of the business houses there is room for improvement, and I was pleased to learn that progress in this respect would be made in due time. The town for years, being in a state of doubtful existence as to the permanency of the county seat, made little progress and therefore no effort to put on that style compatable with the times, and hence it will take a little time to make the required change in the old business districts.

Many nice brick and frame residences have already been erected in the old portion of the town, that relieves the great contrast that otherwise would have appeared with the new, bright and clean portion of the town recently built. The population is now about double what it was two or three years ago, being near two thousand.

The court house presents a very good appearance, being of brick covered with tile and having a large tower that is easily ascended and the town and country viewed from its veranda. While there I was told it was court week, otherwise it is doubtful whether I would have known it, so few the attendance, and so little the excitement consequent on occasions of this kind. I was told there was little business done in this line in the county, which speaks well for the law abiding character of the people.

The jail is an old frame that contrasts badly with the house of justice. There were within its cells one or two prisoners awaiting trial, who to relieve the tediousness of restraint, kept shouting "hurrah for Grant!" If the keeper of the jail had been a Grant man I think he would have had them stop that noise. I was informed the commissioners intend erecting a new jail of more respectable appearance. The people of the county are not burdened with heavy taxes, judging from the per cent. of levy taken from the Auditor's book, being $1.25 on the $100 for the town of Auburn, and $1.37 the average for the county; nearly four times less than here.

The surrounding country presents a fine appearance with beautiful farms and fine buildings that tells of wealth and affluence. The soil is a black, sandy or gravelly loam and must be very productive, else the bank-barns and fine houses, &c, would not appear.

The State is not behind in its arrangement for the education of the youth, and comfortable school houses everywhere appear. The school house in Auburn however, is not what it ought to be; but I was told that the citizens know it, and intend building a new one.

We must not overlook another of the most important features of the place, and that is the Courier, conducted by our old friend, Tom Mays, formerly of this State. He is one of those wide-a-wake fellows that generally mean business.

Finally, Auburn has received new life and vigor from her railroads that furnish a ready and easy market for the products of a fertile country. J. H. W.

Worth.

The most successful merchant in America, who does a larger business than any other of his class, and who was selected by General Grant as his Secretary of the Treasury, gives an opinion on the financial probabilities consequent upon Mr. Greeley's election that are of commanding importance just now. Mr. A. T. Stewart, of New York, was interviewed by a Herald reporter, and to the question whether he had any fear that the election of Greeley would produce any financial difficulty, he promptly answered: "None whatever." As to the tariff Mr. Stewart said a change of tariff would lead to no confusion with merchants. The tariff laws, he said to which our country looks for its revenue, should be dictated wholly by the rules of equity [illegible] equal [illegible] application [illegible] all interests and classes, [illegible] the adjustment of the tariff to Congress, as suggested by the Liberal and Democratic Conventions, he considered the proper course.

Lots of people that have never been in Fort Wayne and are not acquainted can find the Red Front clothing hall, No. 5, Keystone block. Any woman or child can find this place, and you will save from 20 to 25 cents on each dollar.

The new brick hotel is going up rapidly and will make a splendid appearance when completed.

I wish to say in advance to all lovers of dogs that [illegible] them—I mean the dogs—that can be found, so far as I know, in any land. They grow larger, get to be fatter, enjoy laziness more supremely, are more utterly worthless and more numerous than can be found elsewhere in the same population [illegible] are allowed to idly roam and live in great numbers without being called upon to do so much as catch a rat or chase a pig. During all of my sojourn in this territory, in my various wanderings I have seen great numbers of dogs; many of them fat enough and large enough to make a Chinaman's mouth water, but have failed, as yet, to find one with energy enough to bark at me; hence I do not carry a club for them, but pass them as I do the rocks, and they never notice me. Now, if these circumstances are not favorable to dogs, I am greatly deceived, and therefore advise all persons who are attached to dogs more than to citizens, and who regard their lives as more sacred than the lives of our helpless women and children, to send them at once to this delightful climate, where their poison tooth seems to be extracted, and they always live and prosper and are perfectly harmless.

Four dogs in one house are decided to be "detrimental to health," and the Board of Health has a law declared to that effect. If you want to make the people mad "on the other floor" who keep dogs, just summon them for a violation of the rules of the Board of Health, and there will be no more peace in that home, even if the dogs go out. Mary Draker cleared Adam Pollock's dogs out of 244 Elizabeth street one day, but there's less quiet in the house than when the canines were present.

Fort Edward is the dog-gondest place I ever saw. Let two dogs get in a fight and in five minutes there will be thirty dogs on the ground.

Durham Bulls for Sale!

The undersigned offers at private sale fifteen thorough-bred Durham Bulls, twelve of which are calves, two yearlings, and one two year old. The sire of all is my Duke of Wabash county, and he was sired by Duncan's Duke of Airdrie: his dam, Juan 7th, which Mr. Jeremiah Duncan, of Paris, Burbon County, Ky., told me she was the best milker he ever owned, and had been breeding Durhams for Forty Years. A full sister to my Duke Louan 19th was sold at Duncan's sale for $1,[illegible]. Several of Duncan's Louan's were purchased by McMillen, of Xenia, O., and were re-sold at McMillen's great sale at the following prices. $475, $400, 3,000 $1,750, $2,025, $1,030, the lower priced ones being old ones, one being over 10 years. Some of my cows, the dams of stock offered, are Louans and Fashions bred by Mr. Duncan, of Ky. Some are of the Duchess milker family, which are excellent milkers.

I propose showing a sample of my stock at the Wabash and Huntington county fair and shall take pleasure in showing them to all who call on me at home, near Liberty Mills, Wabash county, Ind.
